FRENCH, DRIVEN BACK, TURN ON NAZIS IN FIERCE COUNTER DRIVE

U. S. Provides 50 Planes for Hard-Pressed Allies

Sends Them to Curtis Company As Trade-Ins on New Modern Ones

More Planes and Other American War Material Expected To Be Provided within Short Time

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, June 6—The United States navy tonight made fifty of its warplanes available for immediate sale to the Allies, now locked in a life-or-death struggle with Germany.

Whether this move would be followed speedily by other assistance to the hard-pressed British and French was not officially announced, but it was known that this government, which has received urgent pleas from the Allied capitals, was considering selling surplus World War material, including rifles, machine guns, artillery and ammunition.

Navy officials said that the fifty planes were Curtiss scout bombers, single engine seaplanes acquired by the navy in the past two years and especially adapted to dive bombing.

The navy said the planes were being flown to Buffalo, N. Y., to be turned in to the Curtiss Airplane Company on future deliveries of new planes "of a superior type, equipped with leak-proof tanks and armor." The company will be free to sell the planes to the Allies. The announcement said that the planes being turned in were from "various naval aviation reserve squadrons."

Agreement with Company

The navy said the turn-in was in accordance with an agreement with the manufacturer, and added:

It is expected that the remainder of these planes at reserve bases will be similarly turned in as replacements are received."

Naval officials said that replacements for the planes turned in today were almost ready.

Advocates of extensive assistance to the Allies have urged the turn-in procedure. Selling planes direct to the Allied governments, some legislators had argued, might be considered an act of war.

Today's announcement aroused much interest in Congress. Rep. Bates (R-Mass), a member of the House Naval Committee, said he thought the action was "perfectly proper, good business and in the interest of national defense."

Wheeler Opposed

Senator Wheeler (D-Mont) remarked: "A little while ago I said we were following in the footsteps of 1914-16. I am afraid I was not correct in that. I know of no action by the administration from 1914 to 1917 whereby the government, as such, either sold its property directly to one of the belligerents or turned it over to a private individuals so he could sell it to one of the belligerents.'

Senator Pepper (D-Fla), who had been urging quick aid for the Allies in a series of Senate speeches, greeted the official announcement with broad smiles.

"I strongly approve of the action taken," Pepper said. "It is exactly the same thing as we have been doing under the neutrality law of 1939. It's the same principle that we do in private life when we trade in a used car on a new one."

The Florida senator predicted that "the whole nation will applaud this act on the part of the president in giving this indirect way aid to the Allies now in a perfectly legal manner x x x"

ROME, June 7 (Friday) (AP) — Three railway trains of fifteen cars each, painted with the Red Cross, stood ready in Rome's switch-yard today, apparently to speed away to the succor of bombing and battle victims.

Garment Workers Back with AFL; Typos Are Next

Green Highly Pleased with Return of Former CIO Group

NEW YORK, June 6 (AP)—William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, literally danced for joy with David Dubinsky today over the return of the International Ladies Garment Workers union to the AFL and asserted he was "standing with arms outstretched" to welcome other CIO unions into his fold.

His next dancing partner, he intimated at the ILGWU convention, might be Claude Baker, chieftain of the International Typographical Union, which was suspended for refusing to pay a per capita tax to fight the CIO. Inasmuch as Green assured the garment workers that elimination of the tax would be recommended to the AFL convention, it was reasonable to conclude, he said, that the 86,000-member Typographical Union would return to good standing.

He predicted that the return of the 250,000 garment workers—the convention voted yesterday to re affiliate—would "launch a movement in other fields bringing the rank and file back into the federation."

The ILGWU left the AFL to join the CIO and then dropped out of the latter in November, 1938, to operate as independent.

Green also told the convention that he believed the present "national emergency" would lead to an end of the division of the labor movement and said he personally would do everything in his power to "heal the breach."

Lay Members of Methodist Church To Have Greater Voice in Affairs

WESTMINSTER, MD., June 6 (AP)—The Baltimore conference of the Methodist church voted today to require district superintendents to consult lay delegates in their areas before appointing a district lay leader and two associates.

The effort to secure for the lay members a greater voice in Methodist activities was led by Mrs. John H. Werner of Bethesda, Md., and Henry Gilligan of Washington, a lay member.

Five candidates for leaders will be named by the laymen, from which the superintendents will select the district leader and two associates.

Conference officials stressed that the lay member agreement was a new sign of unity in the new Methodist church consolidation which has brought together the three church branches.

"The union is successful," declared the Rev. R. L. Wood, superintendent of the Baltimore west district, who read the report of district superintendents. "It is working, if not to the complete satisfaction of all, certainly better than those opposed to it predicted."

Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes of Washington, presiding officer of the conference who will retire this summer, was praised by speakers at a banquet tonight attended by more than 700 persons.

The Rev. Frank R. Bayley, superintendent of the Baltimore east district, said that Bishop Hughes had done more than any one to bring about a union of the three branches of Methodism.

Germans Battling French in Great Encircling Move

ENGINEERS WORKING UNDER TERRIFIC FIRE

Succeed in Laying Pontoon Bridge Near Abbeville

By The Associated Press

BERLIN, June 6 (AP) — Veteran German blitz divisions hurtled the Somme under a storm of fire today in a power drive aimed at encirclement of Paris from the west, and German dispatches from the front said tonight they were fighting from door to door and tree to tree against the French defenders.

Germany's "pioneers"—engineers—struggled in a hail of fire from French machine guns and 75's for three hours before succeeding in laying a pontoon bridge at Pont Remy, a few miles southeast of Abbeville.

Then veteran tank crews, reinforced by some new troops of Germany's Panzer divisions, sent their mounts charging into the French positions while German artillery laid down a curtain of fire.

Germans Seize Heights

The Germans gained heights dominating the south side of the river but were encountering bitter opposition.

The front dispatches said they were forced to watch every cellar window, every rock, bush and hedge for machine-gun nests and French colonial troops who swarmed out on Indian files of Germans and attacked with rifles, bayonets and knives.

"They had to be shot down singly," said a DNB dispatch from the fighting scene.

"The streets were strewn with concealed mines. Interspersed with the road of heavy artillery was the constant rattle of machine guns."

The Germans described the French as hotly defending "heavily fortified field positions" against "fierce pursuit" which went "considerably south."

The main force of the German offensive was on the German right wing, aimed at encirclement of Paris from the west and severance of the lifeline between Great Britain and France.

Immediate objectives apparently were Dieppe and Le Havre on the French northwest coast, and possibly beyond to Cherbourg, which the Germans bombed last night.

If they succeed in driving such a coastal wedge, they will force British assistance to detour to southern French ports and crack the effectiveness of the British-French alliance.

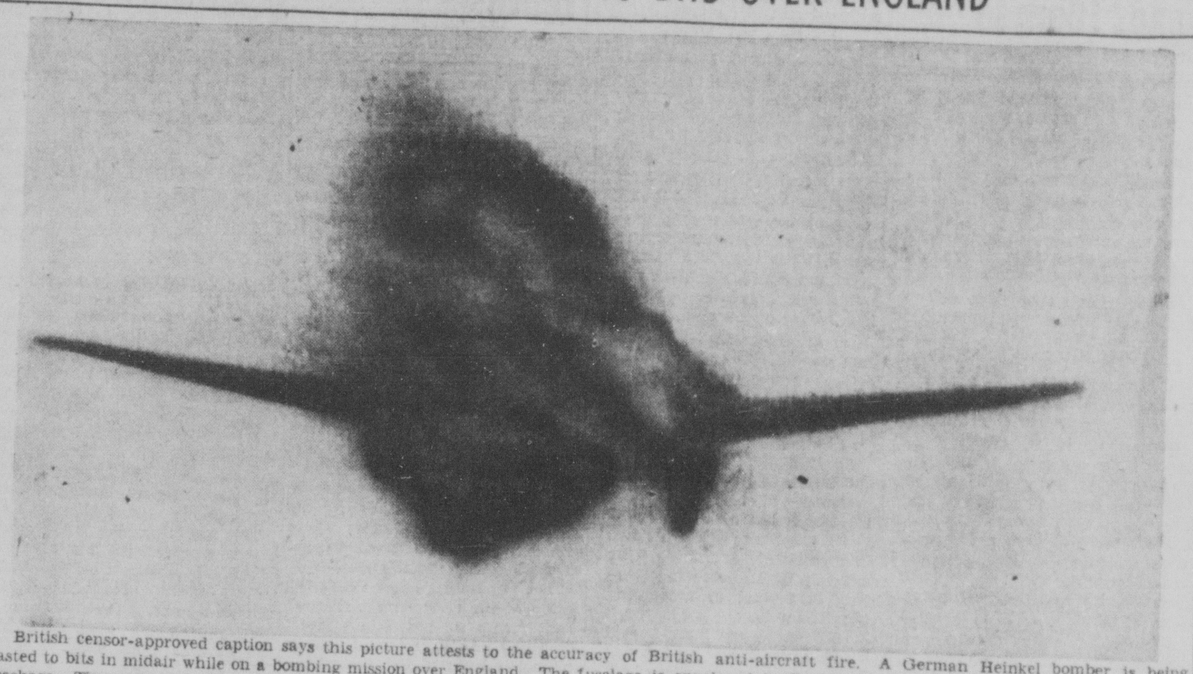

Drive for Soissons

A second drive is aimed northeast of Paris in the Soissons area, apparently the intended left wing of a pinchers movement against Paris.

Fascists Ordered To Get Ready for Decision by Duce

Reynaud's Peace Move May, However, Prevent War

By The Associated Press

ROME, June 6—Italian Fascists, ordered tonight to be ready at any time for nationwide mass meetings to hear Premier Mussolini's decision on war at the side of Germany, awaited their leader's evaluation of French Premier Paul Reynaud's suggestion that a peaceful solution might yet be found.

None knew when the summons to the public squares throughout the land might be given to hear Il Duce's verdict, but public and private indications were that, unless Reynaud's speech had impressed him, the call might be expected soon.

Very Important

Referring to Reynaud's decaration that "there are no peoples with whom France cannot settle by peaceful means divergences of interests which appear to oppose them," one of the best informed Fascists cautiously commented that it was "very important."

This source would hazard no further comment, saying that Premier Mussolini's reaction was the only important one in Italy.

The impression prevailed, however, in some lesser political circles that Reynaud's conciliatory attitude might have come too late.

Meanwhile, three trains of fifteen railroad cars each, painted with red crosses, stood on sidings in Rome, ready to speed away to succor bombing and battle victims if need be.

Thirds-class coaches were made over into hospital cars. Two trains also stood ready to rush British and French diplomats to the frontier. Shopkeepers, porters and householders were warned of three-month jail terms and $100 fines for failure to observe blackout orders when the time comes.

Guards Given Orders

A special law gave guards orders to shoot persons trying to evade border control.

Instructions went out to all branches of the Fascist party, including children's and women's organizations, to be ready to don uniforms at any time for a Piazza Venezia mass meeting to hear Mussolini announce, perhaps, that the nation which fought at the side of the Allies in the World War now is at war against them.

The party members were told the rally probably would be held on few minutes notice to avoid giving the potential enemy any unnecessary warning.

There was no indication when Mussolini would speak. Such quiet readiness orders as were given out tonight sometimes come days or even weeks ahead of time, the lat-

French Battering New Nazi Positions after Checking Long Advance

Paris Admits Serious Reverse, but High Command Expresses Confidence of Victory

PARIS, June 6 (AP)—Stubbornly fighting French, thrown back on their right and their left by a savage German offensive along the Somme and Aisne, launched counter attacks at dusk tonight and the struggle was reported continuing through the night.

The French counterattack was launched on their right or east flank where the German infantry, preceded by masses of tanks and supported by artillery, had pushed south from the Ailette river in the Soissons sector and taken a foothold in the World-war contested ridge of Chemin-Des-Dames just north of the Aisne.

French troops, in the gathering darkness, stormed the new German positions. The struggle was reported in military dispatches still to be under way at midnight.

Attack after Dark

The French counter-thrusts took advantage of the German practice of relaxing their pressure at night.

In the German thrusts, before which the French recoiled earlier today at both ends of the Weygand line, 2,000 tanks were used.

The roar of the battle could be heard thirty miles behind the firing line—or in places, nearly half-way to Paris.

The French defense was declared "magnificent" by the high command, even as it acknowledged withdrawals made necessary by the Nazi attacks.

On the west flank German advance elements made a march totaling nearly seventeen miles from the region of Abbeville. This was a push to the Bresle river along the channel coast as part of a southwestward encircling movement which however, did not put that invading wing any nearer to Paris. It did take the Nazis within seventy-five miles of Le Havre.

On the east, Nazi troops advanced six miles to the Aisne heights, within sixty to seventy miles of this ancient capital—a capital which tonight reflected a more and more warlike atmosphere.

Watch for Parachutists

Militiamen, with red, white and blue arm bands and armed with rifles, stood at the alert in the streets for parachutists and fifth columnists.

Trucks idled in squares and on bridges to serve as miniature forts if need be.

On both west and east the advance of the main German masses was limited to the measure of six

British Workmen Speeding Efforts To Produce Arms

Rush Work of Producing Much Needed Heavy War Materials

By The Associated Press

LONDON, June 6—Britain's army in overalls was pledged today to gear up war industries for the full equipment of the next British fighting force that takes the field—in France or in England.

As the whole nation was fitted into the program of rushing the heavy war industries to arm reformed divisions, the fliers of the R.A.F. doggedly carried on Britain's reduced share in the defense of France.

While their home countryside along 270 miles of English coast thundered with the bombs of German air raiders, the British air force struck blows for France behind the battle line.

The air ministry reported explosives poured into Germany's industrially valuable Ruhr valley, bombings that lit huge fires in the oil supply tanks the Germans seized at Ghent, Belgium, and raids on German troops and supply lines backing up the Somme river battlefront.

Six German planes were claimed downed. One British plane was acknowledged lost.

Reynaud Declares Nazi Offensive Cannot Succeed

Declares Hundreds of German Tanks Have Been Destroyed

PARIS, June 6 (AP)—Premier Paul Reynaud, speaking to the people of France tonight subsequent to a cabinet revision which put him in supreme command of the war effort, declared that "hundreds" of German tanks had been destroyed in the Nazi offensive on the Somme, and added solemnly:

"The dream of German hegemony in Europe is going to break against French resistance!"

Apparently referring to the United States, Reynaud said: "Let all spectators of the drama of the battle of France understand and let them understand quickly, for the stake is immense and their time is measured."

Seeks Arms in U. S.

France has been seeking war materials in the United States.

Of Italy's demands for French Mediterranean possessions, Reynaud said:

"There are no peoples with whom France can not settle by peaceful means divergencies of interests which appear to oppose them. I have said this publicly. I repeat it.

The premier announced that his war cabinet was reduced from eleven members to eight. They are Renaud, his vice premier, Henri Petain; Camille Chautemps, Louis Marin, Jean Ybarnegaray, Georges Mandel, Georges Monnet, and Raoul Dautry.

14 Maryland Cities and Towns Show 1,628 Population Increase

BALTIMORE, June 6.—(AP)—Fourteen Maryland cities and towns, led by Annapolis, the state capital, showed an aggregate increase of about 1,628 citizens in the 1940 census, preliminary figures indicated today.

William A. Dodd, area manager for the census bureau, made public the 1940 totals—all subject to possible correction—and a comparison with the totals of the last census in 1930.

Annapolis showed a 1940 population of 13,017, compared with 12,531 in 1930, an increase of 486. Next largest increase among the four-been was compared with 4,092—an increase of 366.

Preliminary figures on the other towns were:

Town	1940	1930	Increase
Loch Lynn Heights (Garrett Co.)	339	198	141
Grantsville	468	400	68
Friendsville	569	494	75
Deer Park	326	249	77
Bloomington (Garrett Co.)	400	369	31

Defenders Fight Invading Hordes In a Desperate Night Struggle

Roar of Great Battle Is Heard 30 Miles Away; German Infantry Makes Long Advance

BERLIN, June 7 (Friday) (AP) — Germans admitted unofficially early today that the new Weygand line was presenting "a real problem" to the attacking German army and that the Nazis were encountering still resistance by the defenders.

By The Associated Press

Fighting like men possessed, French defenders of their homeland rallied at nightfall last (Thursday) night and in the red glare of the flaming battle of the Somme hurled themselves on the Nazi war machine in fierce counter-attacks intended to regain the ground they had lost.

The counter-attacks, started in the gathering darkness and continuing through the night, came on the right, or east French flank. There German infantry, following tanks and an artillery barrage, had driven south from the Ailette river to take positions just north of the Aisne river at the ridge of the Shemin-Des-Dames.

The French stormed that position after the fashion of Poilus who fought Germans there in the World War.

The crescendo of the great battle rose until its rumble and roar could be heard thirty miles away.

Meanwhile Paris, the prize for which 2,000,000 men were locked in deadly struggle on the Somme front, was shaken by loud explosions to the south. Thte blasts came after heavy anti-aircraft fire had roused the city.

At nightfall, while the fighting rumbled and flashed all along the first line of Paris' defense, the French acknowledged they had fallen back slightly at both ends of the line. They said Nazi tanks had penetrated seven and a half miles into the first of the new French defense lines—designed to trap those tanks.

Germans Claim Progress

Claiming progress for their ponderous advance "everywhere" the Germans said they found furious resistance from Frenchmen who fought from house to house, tree to tree, with everything they had—even long knives.

In particular, the Nazis claimed, their iron-pointed forces hurtled the Somme under fire at Pont Remy, few miles southeast of Abbeville, where tanks rumbled across a pontoon bridge.

The French retirement on their left or west was on that part of the front from the Somme along the English coast to the Bresle river, seventeen miles south of Abbeville. On the right, or eastern flank, the French retired from the Ailette river toward the Aisne about six miles.

Hitler's offensive showed he was trying a wider plan of conquest than that of the imperial German staff of 1914.

This time the Germans have swung much further west, engulfing Abbeville and indicating the right fork of the offensive is aimed at Le Havre, perhaps even Cherbourg. A successful operation of that type would catch Paris in a clutching hand, pressing in from the north and west. It might cause the French capital to fall.

U. S. Provides 50 Planes for Hard-Pressed Allies

WASHINGTON, June 6—The United States navy tonight made fifty of its warplanes available for immediate sale to the Allies, now locked in a life-or-death struggle with Germany.

Garment Workers Back with AFL; Typos Are Next

Green Highly Pleased with Return of Former CIO Group

NEW YORK, June 6 (AP)—William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, literally danced for joy with David Dubinsky today over the return of the International Ladies Garment Workers union to the AFL and asserted he was "standing with arms outstretched" to welcome other CIO unions into his fold.

His next dancing partner, he intimated at the ILGWU convention, might be Claude Baker, chieftain of the International Typographical Union, which was suspended for refusing to pay a per capita tax to fight the CIO. Inasmuch as Green assured the garment workers that elimination of the tax would be recommended to the AFL convention, it was reasonable to conclude, he said, that the 86,000-member Typographical Union would return to good standing.

He predicted that the return of the 250,000 garment workers—the convention voted yesterday to re affiliate—would "launch a movement in other fields bringing the rank and file back into the federation."

The ILGWU left the AFL to join the CIO and then dropped out of the latter in November, 1938, to operate as independent.

Green also told the convention that he believed the present "national emergency" would lead to an end of the division of the labor movement and said he personally would do everything in his power to "heal the breach."

LONDON, June 6—Britain's army in overalls was pledged today to gear up war industries for the full equipment of the next British fighting force that takes the field—in France or in England.

As the whole nation was fitted into the program of rushing the heavy war industries to arm reformed divisions, the fliers of the R.A.F. doggedly carried on Britain's reduced share in the defense of France.

While their home countryside along 270 miles of English coast thundered with the bombs of German air raiders, the British air force struck blows for France behind the battle line.

The air ministry reported explosives poured into Germany's industrially valuable Ruhr valley, bombings that lit huge fires in the oil supply tanks the Germans seized at Ghent, Belgium, and raids on German troops and supply lines backing up the Somme river battlefront.

Six German planes were claimed downed. One British plane was acknowledged lost.

Declares Hundreds of German Tanks Have Been Destroyed

PARIS, June 6 (AP)—Premier Paul Reynaud, speaking to the people of France tonight subsequent to a cabinet revision which put him in supreme command of the war effort, declared that "hundreds" of German tanks had been destroyed in the Nazi offensive on the Somme, and added solemnly:

"The dream of German hegemony in Europe is going to break against French resistance!"

Apparently referring to the United States, Reynaud said: "Let all spectators of the drama of the battle of France understand and let them understand quickly, for the stake is immense and their time is measured."

Seeks Arms in U. S.

France has been seeking war materials in the United States.

Of Italy's demands for French Mediterranean possessions, Reynaud said:

"There are no peoples with whom France can not settle by peaceful means divergencies of interests which appear to oppose them. I have said this publicly. I repeat it.

The premier announced that his war cabinet was reduced from eleven members to eight. They are Renaud, his vice premier, Henri Petain; Camille Chautemps, Louis Marin, Jean Ybarnegaray, Georges Mandel, Georges Monnet, and Raoul Dautry.

14 Maryland Cities and Towns Show 1,628 Population Increase

BALTIMORE, June 6.—(AP)—Fourteen Maryland cities and towns, led by Annapolis, the state capital, showed an aggregate increase of about 1,628 citizens in the 1940 census, preliminary figures indicated today.

William A. Dodd, area manager for the census bureau, made public the 1940 totals—all subject to possible correction—and a comparison with the totals of the last census in 1930.

Annapolis showed a 1940 population of 13,017, compared with 12,531 in 1930, an increase of 486. Next largest increase among the fourteen was compared with 4,092—an increase of 366.

Preliminary figures on the other towns were:

Town	1940	1930	Increase
Loch Lynn Heights (Garrett Co.)	339	198	141
Grantsville	468	400	68
Friendsville	560	484	76
Deer Park	326	249	77
Bloomington (Garrett Co.)	400	369	31
Kitzmiller	870	827	43
Elkton	3,585	3,351	184
Boonsboro	937	894	43
Keedysville	404	393	11
Sharpsburg	833	818	15

Funkstown	798	700	98

Roar of Great Battle Is Heard 30 Miles Away; German Infantry Makes Long Advance

BERLIN, June 7 (Friday) (AP) — Germans admitted unofficially early today that the new Weygand line was presenting "a real problem" to the attacking German army and that the Nazis were encountering still resistance by the defenders.

By The Associated Press

Fighting like men possessed, French defenders of their homeland rallied at nightfall last (Thursday) night and in the red glare of the flaming battle of the Somme hurled themselves on the Nazi war machine in fierce counter-attacks intended to regain the ground they had lost.

The counter-attacks, started in the gathering darkness and continuing through the night, came on the right, or east French flank. There German infantry, following tanks and an artillery barrage, had driven south from the Ailette river to take positions just north of the Aisne river at the ridge of the Shemin-Des-Dames.

The French stormed that position after the fashion of Poilus who fought Germans there in the World War.

The crescendo of the great battle rose until its rumble and roar could be heard thirty miles away.

Meanwhile Paris, the prize for which 2,000,000 men were locked in deadly struggle on the Somme front, was shaken by loud explosions to the south. Thte blasts came after heavy anti-aircraft fire had roused the city.

At nightfall, while the fighting rumbled and flashed all along the first line of Paris' defense, the French acknowledged they had fallen back slightly at both ends of the line. They said Nazi tanks had penetrated seven and a half miles into the first of the new French defense lines—designed to trap those tanks.

Germans Claim Progress

Claiming progress for their ponderous advance "everywhere" the Germans said they found furious resistance from Frenchmen who fought from house to house, tree to tree, with everything they had—even long knives.

In particular, the Nazis claimed, their iron-pointed forces hurtled the Somme under fire at Pont Remy, few miles southeast of Abbeville, where tanks rumbled across a pontoon bridge.

The French retirement on their left or west was on that part of the front from the Somme along the English coast to the Bresle river, seventeen miles south of Abbeville. On the right, or eastern flank, the French retired from the Ailette river toward the Aisne about six miles.

Hitler's offensive showed he was trying a wider plan of conquest than that of the imperial German staff of 1914.

This time the Germans have swung much further west, engulfing Abbeville and indicating the right fork of the offensive is aimed at Le Havre, perhaps even Cherbourg. A successful operation of that type would catch Paris in a clutching hand, pressing in from the north and west. It might cause the French capital to fall.

Green in Favor Of Amendments To Wagner Act

Believes Smith Proposals Will Remedy Excesses and Abuses

WASHINGTON, June 6 (AP)—On the eve of important House votes on Wagner act changes, President William Green of the American Federation of Labor endorsed in principle today the Smith amendments based on creation of a new National Labor Relations Board.

Rep. Smith (D-VA) sponsor of one set of revisions, read to the House a letter from Green which said in part:

"We are firmly convinced that, taken as a whole, the amendments proposed by the Smith committee, if modified as (we) suggest, will remedy in a large measure the excesses and abuses in the administration of the act of which we heretofore complained."

A majority of the special investigating committee which Smith heads is sponsoring seventeen amendments, based on creation of a new board and separation of the board's administrative and judicial functions.

Smith told the House that "there is no more dangerous fifth column" in the nation than some employees of the board who, he said, were trying to destroy capitalism "under the shadow of the capitol." He called on the administration to "do something about this situation before it is too late."

Representative Murdock (D-Utah) and Healey (D-Mass) minority members of Smith's committee, argued that this was no time to consider revising labor legislation.

"We are treading on sacred ground when we kick labor in the face," Murdock said. "Who will we look to to build the battleships, the planes, the rifles of America? The man in overalls. x x

At the outset of the debate, Chairman Norton (D-NJ) of the Labor Committee appealed to the House to leave the Wagner act "unimpaired."

England. No deaths were reported but some buildings were damaged and fires were started. Officials appealed again to parents to help speed evacuation of city children to country refuge.

American newspapermen were told by Alfred Duff Cooper, minister of information, that aid from the United States even a year from now would not come too late.

He said Germany had been forced to change its plans for immediate attack on England and added:

"I do not believe in the invasion. I think we are able to handle parachute troops in great nubers and if an attack were made on land, over the coast, Germany likely would be disappointed."

Speed Plane Production

Cooper said "we now are almost on a parity with the enemy in aircraft production." He mentioned anti tank guns, sub machine guns and "planes and more planes" as the Allies' greatest present need from America.

The need for speed in perfecting the home defense system and refitting divisions salvaged from the trap in Flanders was emphasized with reports of the new German thrust against north France.

British military sources said the Nazi drive netted some gains but nowhere broke the blue-clad ranks of poilus.

Ernest Bevin, minister of labor, pledged marshaled workmen to a war-speed job in the heavy industries under new orders banning strikes and lockouts and placing labor under rigid government control.

The United States was warned by Virginio Gayda, authoritative Fascist editor, that she must stay out of Europe's war if she wishes to assure that Europe will not intervene in American affairs.

Premier Paul Reynaud told the French high command is "well satisfied" with the dogged defense by their armies. He declared there is good reason for hope.

In London the British minister of information, Alfred Duff Cooper, declared that if America should come to the aid of the Allies even a year hence it would not be too late.

Britain, hard at work to speed up her war industries after the defeat in Flanders, took satisfaction from further reports of widespread activities of the Royal Air Force.

For the fifth successive night, said the air ministry, the RAF bombed oil refineries, supply depots and communications in Germany's vital Ruhr industrial district. British planes also operated against German attacking in the Somme offensive.

Germany declared that Wednesday night raids by Nazi fliers had greatly damaged British airdromes from which the RAF is setting out on bombing missions.

Britain followed up her drive for better relations and a trade pact with Soviet Russia by announcing she had just signed a new trade treaty with Rumania, whose oil and other products Germany needs.

American people should let it be known they do not want any of this. It's just a trial balloon for a more direct step into war."

Senator King (D-Utah) said he had "no objections if they want to sell some old planes. If the airplane company wants to give them away, sell, or even burn them, why, that's their business."

Senator Norris (Ind-Neb), said "I don't know of any law that that would violate."

Speculation arose that the army probably would pursue a policy similar to the navy's but there was no official confirmation of this.

General Henry H. Arnold, chief of the army air corps, told a Senate committee last month that, of 2,709 army planes in service at that time, more than 400 pursuit ships and 477 bombers were not modern types according to European war standards. They would be replaced promptly, he said, as new planes were delivered.

Appeals for material help were relayed to the Washington government during the day by Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy at London and Ambassador William E. Bullitt at Paris.

A hundred thousand Lee-Eenfield rifles, 70,000 machine guns, 300 75-millimeter field guns of the British type, heavier field pieces, howitzers, trench mortors and hundreds of thousands of rounds of ammunition were said to be included in the stocks that could be made available. The weapons were described as old but still "usable."

Early in the day, the White House made known that Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy at London and Ambassador William C. Bullitt at Paris had been telephoning and cabling and "asking that we do everything we can to speed up production of military essentials."

Want World War Materials

Soon afterwards, Secretary Morgenthau, announcing that the Allies had completed a billion-dollar purchasing program and were about to start another, disclosed that they had asked, too, about the possibility of purchasing the army's surplus World war materials.

It became known the question had been referred to Attorney General Jackson for a ruling on the legality of such transactions, and that he had given his approval. The final decision, it was said at the White House, rested with President Roosevelt.

As usual these days, development related to the war and the preparedness program cropped up in all parts of the city:

(1) The Senate completed congressional action on the naval appropriation bill — embodying $1,492,542,750 in immediate funds and contract authorizations for warships, aircraft, munitions, expansion of personnel and many other purposes — and sent the measure to President Roosevelt.

(2) The state department, guarding against the admission of "fifth column" elements, issued orders that many classes of foreigners who had been able heretofore to enter the country, for temporary stays, without passports or visas, must in the future present such documents. The new rule applies to Canadians and Mexicans, among others.

(3) The Civil Service Commission announced it was increasing its staff so that thorough investigations of all applicants for jobs in the national defense agencies may be made for the purpose of weeding out disloyal persons.

(4) A meeting of the National Defense Commission with President Roosevelt broke up amid indications that important decisions might have been made. Leon Henderson, a commission member, told reporters be some action. But he said "it is pretty evident there will any announcement must come from the president. When Edward R. Stettinius, another member, was asked whether he was confident the commission could achieve its objectives, he replied: "We're going to try like hell."

(5) The House Military Committee deferred until Monday a decision of the controversial question of giving the president authority to call out the national guard in peace time emergencies. An alternative proposal was that the size of the regular army be increased to meet such contingencies.

Air Base For Alaska

(6) Senate and House conferees on the army appropriation bill approved an appropriation of $12,000,000,000 for an army air base at Anchorage, Alaska.

(7) Alexander Kirk, chief American diplomat in Berlin, returned to Washington, presumably for report and consultation, while the state department summoned Ray Atherton, minister to Denmark, to Washington "for consultation."

(8) Attorney General Jackson said emphatically that "no mass drives or wholesale arrests" were contemplated in the justice department's campaign against "fifth column" elements.

(9) Senate Republicans, in conference, proposed that Congress "should remain in session for the duration of the emergency." House Republicans had previously taken the same action. The Democratic leadership is hopeful of adjourning about June 22.

(10) Secretary Ickes said the country was on "good shape" with reference to supplies of oil, fuel and electric power, while the situation regarding strategic minerals was "definitely more encouraging.

(11) Senator Pepper, (D-Fla) persisting in his effort to increase American assistance to the Allies proposed legislation suggesting that the president use for this purpose all existing authority to senn planes and other war materials to foreign countries.

21 Navy Bombers Arrive in Buffalo

BUFFALO, N. Y., June 6 (AP) — Twenty-one navy dive bombers and a navy transport plane landed at Buffalo airport today in a plane concentration described by one of the fliers as a 'maneuver to determine how quickly the naval reserve could mobilize in an emergency."

The spokesman, who declined to identify himself, asserted the pilots were ordered to fly to Buffalo, stay overnight and "fly the same ships home again tomorrow."

The fliers came from naval bases at Floyd Bennett field, New York, Grosse Isle, Mich., and Anacostia, Md.

Nazi Warplanes Seen over Britain

LONDON, June 7—(Friday)—(AP) —German warplanes for the second time in twenty-four hours ranged the British coast last night and this morning, causing air raid alarms from Durham county in the northeast to Suffolk and east Anglia on the southeast, a spread of 250 miles.

The air ministry said the planes "crossed the coast at several points during the night" but mentioned no bombings.

One plare was seen to circle high over a number of Yorkshire villages, but headed out to sea when the anti-aircraft guns began barking.

Besides Yorkshire, air raid warnings were sounded in a town in Durham, and in Lincolnshire, Suffolk and East Anglia.

British Bombers Harass Germans

LONDON, June 6 (AP) — British bombers were declared officially tonight to have harrassed the German offensive in France with heavy raids on troop concentrations and lines of communications, as well as attacks on oil refineries and marshaling yards.

At the same time, the French air ministry announced that about forty German planes had been shot down yesterday in aerial battles over the Somme, and that the French had continued the air offensive today dropping 150 tons of bombs on German armored columns and troop concentrations.

French

miles. For even on the west the main lines still were between the Somme and the Bresle, and the defenders were falling back gradually.

And at the end of the second day of fighting the French command proclaimed the situation generally "satisfactory."

The Nazis' material losses were declared to be making up for the French loss of ground.

Hundreds of German tanks were reported destroyed—smashed in the giant mousetrap prepared for them by wily Generalissimo Maxime Weygand.

Nevertheless, the French high command night communique acknowledged that "against this unprecedented onrush of enemy masses some of our units were submerged and outflanked, especially in the region of the lower Somme where enemy elements managed to get through as far as the river Bresle.

"The same thing happened in the region of the river Ailette. Enemy detachments succeeded in pushing their way as far as the heights of the north bank of the Aisne."

The center of General Weygand's Somme line was reported holding firm.

All day long the entire battlefront —from the sea to the Chemin Des Dames, the heights between the Ailette and the Aisne — was convulsed in a thunderous struggle.

The masses of the attacking Germans were so vast as to dwarf the legions they threw into the battle of the Meuse.

The German armored cars attacked in waves of 200 and 300 at a time, driving sometimes as far as 7½ miles into the deep French defenses. French aircraft dropped tons upon tons of bombs upon the plunging tanks.

Battle over Wide Area

The German smashes were concentrated in the sectors south of Abbeville, Amiens and Peronne on the west, and west of the Oise valley and in the Ailette sector on the east.

On the French right, smoke shells rained down in the Rethel area, prelude to infantry assaults against the line of the Aisne.

Southwest of Peronne, the Frenchmen smashed twenty-five snorting Panzer (armored) units in one batch.

Then, on the east of this action, the front line ranks before Amiens fell back to let new waves of the monsters through and into the strange labyrinth of fire which Generalissimo Maxime Weygand has prepared for them.

"Hitler luck" in weather — the sort that helped him so much in the Polish conquest — held for him: it was dry and clear. Thus was facilitated the charges of the tanks, some of which smashed through behind the battle area.

But here the Weygand trap went to work, catching the steel cars in a sort of angular and lethal corral back of the main battle area—a steel encirclement made up of "support points" mounting the famous old French 75's, hidden machine-guns and anti-tank guns.

Other machine gun nests and pursuit planes were reported to be holding back the main German forces, and thus preventing motorcyclists and truck-transported infantry from coming to the rescue of the tanks.

The front spread 150 miles along the Somme and Aisne from the English channel to the Champagne plains. There were new German attacks extending from Abbeville on the west to Rethal on the east.

Nazis Continue Advance

The whole vast battle area was enveloped in the heat of summer—a heat made more intense by the fires set off by bombs.

Between the extreme flanks the Nazis pushed on where they had started the offensive yesterday, in the Amiens, Peronne and Laon sectors.

The fighting raged in a depth sometimes of several miles—some German tanks pushing through the advancing that far before they were halted—thus illustrating the thickness of a front in which nearly 2,000,000 men were bitterly engaged.

The main invading armies still had 70 miles to go to Paris.

Frenchmen heard without comment that the Nazis had figured on reaching Paris within 15 days through the valleys of the Oise and Aisne.

On the home front, Premier Paul Reynaud completed a re-shuffling of his cabinet which made him a one-man war director.

Naval Academy Graduates 455

Ten Thousand Spectators See Middies Become Officers

ANNAPLIS, Md., June 6 (AP) — Four hundred and twenty-one naval academy graduates were commissioned in the navy and marine corps today at the conclusion of colorful commencement exercises in Thompson stadium.

More than 10,000 June week spectators gave the 455 white-uniformed graduates thunderous applause after they had received their diplomas from Secretary of the Navy Charles Edison and had tossed their caps high into the air.

397 Made Ensigns

The graduation exercises, held in sweltering weather, marked the close of a gay June week and the entry of new blood into the nation's defense forces.

Three hundred and ninety-seven graduates received commissions as ensigns in the navy and twenty-four as second lieutenants in the Marine corps, with the words of Edison still ringing in their ears:

"We are determined that, if needed, our first line of defense will not fail . . . like the fleet, each of you must be ready . . . the nation trusts that you will."

President Roosevelt, in a telegram to Rear-Admiral Wilson Brown, academy superintendent, expressed his regret at not being able to attend and bestowed his best wishes and congratulations on the graduates.

New Officers on Leave

With new gold and black shoulder markers gracing their uniforms, the newly commissioned officers immediately went on leave, which ranged from fifteen to thirty days.

Thirty graduates, honorably discharged because of physical disabilities, checked out at Bancroft hall. Among them was Joseph Paul D'Arezzo, of Los Angeles, Calif., honor man of the graduating class.

The new first and third classes began preparations this afternoon to embark tomorrow on the battleships New York, Texas and Arkansas for a summer practice cruise to the Newport, R. I., area. The ships will leave early Saturday.

time he could give reasons for hope in a final victory.

These, he said, were the "three facts":

The escape of the French and British troops in Flanders;

The failure of the German bombing raid on Paris to break civilian morale;

The development of the battle on the Somme—a battle which he declared, on the authority of General Maxime Weygand, was going "satisfactorily" for the French.

Praises New Defense

He mentioned especially General Weygand's new defense system against the German motorized units, saying that it was this defense that had destroyed "hundreds" of them along the roaring Somme.

Speaking of the air attack on Paris, he said quietly that the French would "reply in kind" to every such raid.

"The soldiers of 1940," he declared, "have proved themselves equal to the soldiers of 1914."

"The hour remains grave," he acknowledged—as he spoke French planes circled low over Paris—and then he ended with a voice full of confidence.

"As for us, more than ever we have confidence in our arms."

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

Two days of terrific German pounding at the Weygand defense line has bent back its flank both east and west, perhaps shaken the whole Somme river front; but produced little else to forecast with certainty the great battle.

French retirement of the channel flank in the west, and to the Aisne river in the vital Oise valley gateway sector, suggest that the whole Somme and Somme-Oise canal front may be drawn back to avert a German break-through. Yet the outstanding fact of the battle to date is that the resolution of France and her armies to fight it out with the foe step by step has been sharply demonstrated.

Weygand's Strategy

That is a more vital factor for the Franco-British cause than the yielding of ground from hour to hour or day to day. French morale remains high to sustain what seems to be the Weygand strategy of slow retreat to wear down the impetus of the German smash. That has balked by two days, at least, a repetition of the tragedy of the Meuse, where a break in French lines let German mechanized legions through for a sweep to the channel.

German nibbling at the Peronne bulge to threaten French forces in the Amiens-Peronne-Chauny triangle was indicated even before Paris disclosed retirements from both the Ailette sector and on the channel flank. As compared to the strategic importance of the French fight to hold the Oise valley gateway, the German advances in the Abbeville area are of secondary consequence.

Result Uncertain

It is still uncertain whether the Franco-British withdrawal southwest of Abbeville to the Bresle river position is local in character or the beginning of a general withdrawal from the Somme to absorb the first shock of the German attack. In any event, the channel sector offers the Germans no prospect of cracking the Weygand defense system seriously unless their mechanized forces can lunge toward the channel ports of Dieppe and Le Harve, or eastward behind the whole defense line.

Indicated French retirement from the line of the Ailette, or rather the Oise-Aisne canal, on the east flank is a more serious matter, although it does not uncover the Oise valley approach to Paris and the heart of France. The Aisne itself and the heights about it as well as the forest of Compiegne about the junction of the Oise and the Aisne afford better ground for the tactics General Weygand is reported using than did the canal front now abandoned.

(An Alexandria dispatch said newspapers there were speculating intensely on the possibility of a Mussolini speech tonight, but the Rome dispatch gave no indication this might be so. Egyptian newspapers looked for "inacceptable demands" to be made on the Allies by Il Duce).

War Again Predicted

Italy for weeks has been making evident preparations for war and has accompanied them with demands on the Allies which indicated Mussolini would throw his armies into the fray beside his pact partner, Adolf Hitler.

The principal Adunata (assembly) will be held in Piazza Venezia, the square in front of Mussolini's Palazzo Venezia headquarters. But overflow meetings will be held at other places throughout Rome and Italy.

Additional loudspeakers are being set up to enable everyone to hear Mussolini.

United States Warned

As the announcement of the mass meeting probably would be made by radio, party leaders are keeping in close touch with broadcasts. Meanwhile, Italy indicated in bluntly-worded warnings that the United States had better remain out of the war on pain of eventual European intervention in American affairs.

The government's view was expressed both by Virginio Gayda, Premier Mussolini's editorial mouthpiece, and Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano's newspaper, Il Telegrafo.

Gayda, writing in Il Giornale D'Italia, declared that it was "difficult to see" why European powers should not intervene on behalf of any American nation in conflict with the United States if the United States should set a precedent by 'intervening in a European war.

Tommy Tucker To Sling for Supper

Boy Wonder Pitcher May Hurl for St. Louis This Year

JASPER, Ind., June 6 (AP)—Tommy Tucker may be slinging for his supper in major-league baseball—at 17.

The tall righthanded pitcher, who finished high school just the other day, signed a contract today with the St. Louis American league club.

The Browns told him to report to the Mayfield (Ky.) Kitty league club tomorrow for a tryout.

That set the whole town talking up Jasper as a rival of Van Meter, Ia., for producing boy wonder pitchers.

Because Van Meter—population, 400—has turned out only one famous young moundsman—Bob Feller of the Cleveland Indians.

This southern Indiana woodworking center—population, 4,000—thinks it has two youngsters who some day will be just as famous.

There's Tucker, of course—just at the age Feller was when he joined the Indians in 1936. And there's his high school teammate, a boy of sixteen with the quaint name of Roman Pfeffer.

Together these two hurled Jasper's wildcats to mythical state high school championships this year and last and the local junior American Legion team to state tournament finals in 1938.

On the high school team, Tommy won seven games in a row, six of them shutouts and one a no-hitter, in 1939 and eight of nine in 1940.

In junior baseball, he had nine victories and one defeat in 1938 and six victories and one defeat last year.

The St. Louis Cardinals, Detroit Tigers, Cincinnati Reds, Philadelphia Nationals and even Feller's Indians made him offers.

Young Pfeffer still has a year to go in high school, but the big leagues have been flirting with him, too. So far he's unattached.

ting Paris would surrender within two weeks.

Except for authorized but unofficial reports that German armies were striking "into the heart of France" there was scant word of operations along the 200-mile Weygand line, other than in the coastal regions.

The high command communique was delayed more than three hours and then it devoted only a few lines to the new drive which Germans hoped would be the decisive stroke of the war.

When and if Premier Mussolini is going to throw his forces into the contest which Adolf Hitler says is to decide the fate of Europe for the next 1,000 years was a question which found no satisfactory answer in authorized German circles.

The German press is printing accounts of every Italian manifestation, however, without comment.

It was conceivable that Italy would join in the vast pincer movement on France, provided her armies could break through the French army along the Alps.

Green in Favor Of Amendments To Wagner Act

Believes Smith Proposals Will Remedy Excesses and Abuses

WASHINGTON, June 6 (AP)—On the eve of important House votes on Wagner act changes, President William Green of the American Federation of Labor endorsed in principle today the Smith amendments based on creation of a new National Labor Relations Board.

Rep. Smith (D-VA) sponsor of one set of revisions, read to the House a letter from Green which said in part:

Smith told the House that "there is no more dangerous fifth column" in the nation than some employees of the board who, he said, were trying to destroy capitalism "under the shadow of the capitol." He called on the administration to "do something about this situation before it is too late."

Representative Murdock (D-Utah) and Hedley (D-Mass) minority members of Smith's committee, argued that this was no time to consider revising labor legislation.

"We are treading on sacred ground when we kick labor in the face," Murdock said. "Who will we look to to build the battleships, the planes, the rifles of America? The man in overalls. x x

At the outset of the debate, Chairman Norton (D-NJ) of the Labor Committee appealed to the House to leave the Wagner act "unimpaired."

British Workmen

England. No deaths were reported but some buildings were damaged and fires were started. Officials appealed again to parents to help speed evacuation of city children to country refuge.

American newspapermen were told by Alfred Duff Cooper, minister of information, that aid from the United States even a year from now would not come too late.

He said Germany had been forced to change its plans for immediate attack on England and added:

"I do not believe in the invasion. I think we are able to handle parachute troops in great nubers and if an attack were made on land, over the coast, Germany likely would be disappointed."

Speed Plane Production

Cooper said "we now are almost on a parity with the enemy in aircraft production." He mentioned anti tank guns, sub machine guns and "planes and more planes" as the Allies' greatest present need from America.

The need for speed in perfecting the home defense system and refitting divisions salvaged from the trap in Flanders was emphasized with reports of the new German thrust against north France.

British military sources said the Nazi drive netted some gains but nowhere broke the blue-clad ranks of poilus.

Ernest Bevin, minister of labor, pledged marshaled workmen to a war-speed job in the heavy industries under new orders banning strikes and lockouts and placing labor under rigid government control.

Defenders Fight

Fascist party to be ready to don uniforms any time to meet before Premier Mussolini at the Piazza Venezia to hear an announcement that Italy was at war.

The United States was warned by Virginio Gayda, authoritative Fascist editor, that she must stay out of Europe's war if she wishes to assure that Europe will not intervene in American affairs.

Premier Paul Reynaud told the French high command is "well satisfied" with the dogged defense by their armies. He declared there is good reason for hope.

In London the British minister of information, Alfred Duff Cooper, declared that if America should come to the aid of the Allies even a year hence it would not be too late.

Britain, hard at work to speed up her war industries after the defeat in Flanders, took satisfaction from further reports of widespread activities of the Royal Air Force.

For the fifth successive night, said the air ministry, the RAF bombed oil refineries, supply depots and communications in Germany's vital Ruhr industrial district. British planes also operated against German attacking in the Somme offensive.

Germany declared that Wednesday night raids by Nazi fliers had greatly damaged British airdromes from which the RAF is setting out on bombing missions.

Britain followed up her drive for better relations and a trade pact with Soviet Russia by announcing she had just signed a new trade treaty with Rumania, whose oil and other products Germany needs.

American people should let it be known they do not want any of this. It's just a trial balloon for a more direct step into war."

Senator King (D-Utah) said he had "no objections if they want to sell some old planes. If the airplane company wants to give them away, sell, or even burn them, why, that's their business."

Senator Norris (Ind-Neb), said "I don't know of any law that that would violate."

Speculation arose that the army probably would pursue a policy similar to the navy's but there was no official confirmation of this.

General Henry H. Arnold, chief of the army air corps, told a Senate committee last month that, of 2,709 army planes in service at that time, more than 400 pursuit ships and 477 bombers were not modern types according to European war standards. They would be replaced promptly, he said, as new planes were delivered.

Appeals for material help were relayed to the Washington government during the day by Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy at London and Ambassador William E. Bullitt at Paris.

A hundred thousand Lee-Eenfield rifles, 70,000 machine guns, 300 75-millimeter field guns of the British type, heavier field pieces, howitzers, trench mortors and hundreds of thousands of rounds of ammunition were said to be included in the stocks that could be made available. The weapons were described as old but still "usable."

Early in the day, the White House made known that Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy at London and Ambassador William C. Bullitt at Paris had been telephoning and cabling and "asking that we do everything we can to speed up production of military essentials."

Want World War Materials

Soon afterwards, Secretary Morgenthau, announcing that the Allies had completed a billion-dollar purchasing program and were about to start another, disclosed that they had asked, too, about the possibility of purchasing the army's surplus World war materials.

It became known the question had been referred to Attorney General Jackson for a ruling on the legality of such transactions, and that he had given his approval. The final decision, it was said at the White House, rested with President Roosevelt.

As usual these days, development related to the war and the preparedness program cropped up in all parts of the city:

(1) The Senate completed congressional action on the naval appropriation bill — embodying $1,492,542,750 in immediate funds and contract authorizations for warships, aircraft, munitions, expansion of personnel and many other purposes — and sent the measure to President Roosevelt.

(2) The state department, guarding against the admission of "fifth column" elements, issued orders that many classes of foreigners who had been able heretofore to enter the country, for temporary stays, without passports or visas, must in the future present such documents. The new rule applies to Canadians and Mexicans, among others.

(3) The Civil Service Commission announced it was increasing its staff so that thorough investigations of all applicants for jobs in the national defense agencies may be made for the purpose of weeding out disloyal persons.

(4) A meeting of the National Defense Commission with President Roosevelt broke up amid indications that important decisions might have been made. Leon Henderson, a commission member, told reporters be some action. But he said "it is pretty evident there will any announcement must come from the president. When Edward R. Stettinius, another member, was asked whether he was confident the commission could achieve its objectives, he replied: "We're going to try like hell."

(5) The House Military Committee deferred until Monday a decision of the controversial question of giving the president authority to call out the national guard in peace time emergencies. An alternative proposal was that the size of the regular army be increased to meet such contingencies.

Air Base For Alaska

(6) Senate and House conferees on the army appropriation bill approved an appropriation of $12,000,000,000 for an army air base at Anchorage, Alaska.

(7) Alexander Kirk, chief American diplomat in Berlin, returned to Washington, presumably for report and consultation, while the state department summoned Ray Atherton, minister to Denmark, to Washington "for consultation."

(8) Attorney General Jackson said emphatically that "no mass drives or wholesale arrests" were contemplated in the justice department's campaign against "fifth column" elements.

(9) Senate Republicans, in conference, proposed that Congress "should remain in session for the duration of the emergency." House Republicans had previously taken the same action. The Democratic leadership is hopeful of adjourning about June 22.

(10) Secretary Ickes said the country was on "good shape" with reference to supplies of oil, fuel and electric power, while the situation regarding strategic minerals was "definitely more encouraging.

(11) Senator Pepper, (D-Fla) persisting in his effort to increase American assistance to the Allies proposed legislation suggesting that the president use for this purpose all existing authority to senn planes and other war materials to foreign countries.

21 Navy Bombers Arrive in Buffalo

BUFFALO, N. Y., June 6 (AP) — Twenty-one navy dive bombers and a navy transport plane landed at Buffalo airport today in a plane concentration described by one of the fliers as a 'maneuver to determine how quickly the naval reserve could mobilize in an emergency."

The spokesman, who declined to identify himself, asserted the pilots were ordered to fly to Buffalo, stay overnight and "fly the same ships home again tomorrow."

The fliers came from naval bases at Floyd Bennett field, New York, Grosse Isle, Mich., and Anacostia, Md.

Nazi Warplanes Seen over Britain

LONDON, June 7—(Friday)—(AP) —German warplanes for the second time in twenty-four hours ranged the British coast last night and this morning, causing air raid alarms from Durham county in the northeast to Suffolk and east Anglia on the southeast, a spread of 250 miles.

The air ministry said the planes "crossed the coast at several points during the night" but mentioned no bombings.

One plane was seen to circle high over a number of Yorkshire villages, but headed out to sea when the anti-aircraft guns began barking.

Besides Yorkshire, air raid warnings were sounded in a town in Durham, and in Lincolnshire, Suffolk and East Anglia.

British Bombers Harass Germans

LONLON, June 6 (AP) — British bombers were declared officially tonight to have harrassed the German offensive in France with heavy raids on troop concentrations and lines of communications, as well as attacks on oil refineries and marshaling yards.

At the same time, the French air ministry announced that about forty German planes had been shot down yesterday in aerial battles over the Somme, and that the French had contiriued the air offensive today dropping 150 tons of bombs on German armored columns and troop concentrations.

French

miles. For even on the west the main lines still were between the Somme and the Bresle, and the defenders were falling back gradually.

And at the end of the second day of fighting the French command proclaimed the situation generally "satisfactory."

The Nazis' material losses were declared to be making up for the French loss of ground.

Hundreds of German tanks were reported destroyed—smashed in the giant mousetrap prepared for them by wily Generalissimo Maxime Weygand.

Nevertheless, the French high command night communique acknowledged that "against this unprecedented onrush of enemy masses some of our units were submerged and outflanked, especially in the region of the lower Somme where enemy elements managed to get through as far as the river Bresle.

"The same thing happened in the region of the river Ailette. Enemy detachments succeeded in pushing their way as far as the heights of the north bank of the Aisne."

The center of General Weygand's Somme line was reported holding firm.

All day long the entire battlefront —from the sea to the Chemin Des Dames, the heights between the Ailette and the Aisne — was convulsed in a thunderous struggle.

The masses of the attacking Germans were so vast as to dwarf the legions they threw into the battle of the Meuse.

The German armored cars attacked in waves of 200 and 300 at a time, driving sometimes as far as 7½ miles into the deep French defenses. French aircraft dropped tons upon tons of bombs upon the plunging tanks.

Battle over Wide Area

The German smashes were concentrated in the sectors south of Abbeville, Amiens and Peronne on the west, and west of the Oise valley and in the Ailette sector on the east.

On the French right, smoke shells rained down in the Rethel area, prelude to infantry assaults against the line of the Aisne.

Southwest of Peronne, the Frenchmen smashed twenty-five snorting Panzer (armored) units in one batch.

Then, on the east of this action, the front line ranks before Amiens fell back to let new waves of the monsters through and into the strange labyrinth of fire which Generalissimo Maxime Weygand has prepared for them.

"Hitler luck" in weather — the sort that helped him so much in the Polish conquest — held for him: it was dry and clear. Thus was facilitated the charges of the tanks, some of which smashed through behind the battle area.

But here the Weygand trap went to work, catching the steel cars in a sort of angular and lethal corral back of the main battle area—a steel encirclement made up of "support points" mounting the famous old French 75's, hidden machine-guns and anti-tank guns.

Other machine gun nests and pursuit planes were reported to be holding back the main German forces, and thus preventing motorcyclists and truck-transported infantry from coming to the rescue of the tanks.

The front spread 150 miles along the Somme and Aisne from the English channel to the Champagne plains. There were new German attacks extending from Abbeville on the west to Rethal on the east.

Nazis Continue Advance

The whole vast battle area was enveloped in the heat of summer—a heat made more intense by the fires set off by bombs.

Between the extreme flanks the Nazis pushed on where they had started the offensive yesterday, in the Amiens, Peronne and Laon sectors.

The fighting raged in a depth sometimes of several miles—some German tanks pushing through the advancing that far before they were halted—thus illustrating the thickness of a front in which nearly 2,000,000 men were bitterly engaged.

The main invading armies still had 70 miles to go to Paris.

Frenchmen heard without comment that the Nazis had figured on reaching Paris within 15 days through the valleys of the Oise and Aisne.

On the home front, Premier Paul Reynaud completed a re-shuffling of his cabinet which made him a one-man war director.

Naval Academy Graduates 455

Ten Thousand Spectators See Middies Become Officers

ANNAPLIS, Md., June 6 (AP) — Four hundred and twenty-one naval academy graduates were commissioned in the navy and marine corps today at the conclusion of colorful commencement exercises in Thompson stadium.

More than 10,000 June week spectators gave the 455 white-uniformed graduates thunderous applause after they had received their diplomas from Secretary of the Navy Charles Edison and had tossed their caps high into the air.

397 Made Ensigns

The graduation exercises, held in sweltering weather, marked the close of a gay June week and the entry of new blood into the nation's defense forces.

Three hundred and ninety-seven graduates received commissions as ensigns in the navy and twenty-four as second lieutenants in the Marine corps, with the words of Edison still ringing in their ears:

"We are determined that, if needed, our first line of defense will not fail . . . like the fleet, each of you must be ready . . . the nation trusts that you will."

President Roosevelt, in a telegram to Rear-Admiral Wilson Brown, academy superintendent, expressed his regret at not being able to attend and bestowed his best wishes and congratulations on the graduates.

New Officers on Leave

With new gold and black shoulder markers gracing their uniforms, the newly commissioned officers immediately went on leave, which ranged from fifteen to thirty days.

Thirty graduates, honorably discharged because of physical disabilities, checked out at Bancroft hall. Among them was Joseph Paul D'Arezzo, of Los Angeles, Calif., honor man of the graduating class.

The new first and third classes began preparations this afternoon to embark tomorrow on the battleships New York, Texas and Arkansas for a summer practice cruise to the Newport, R. I., area. The ships will leave early Saturday.

Reynaud Declares

time he could give reasons for hope in a final victory.

These, he said, were the "three facts":

The escape of the French and British troops in Flanders;

The failure of the German bombing raid on Paris to break civilian morale;

The development of the battle on the Somme—a battle which he declared, on the authority of General Maxime Weygand, was going "satisfactorily" for the French.

Praises New Defense

He mentioned especially General Weygand's new defense system against the German motorized units, saying that it was this defense that had destroyed "hundreds" of them along the roaring Somme.

Speaking of the air attack on Paris, he said quietly that the French would "reply in kind" to every such raid.

"The soldiers of 1940," he declared, "have proved themselves equal to the soldiers of 1914."

"The hour remains grave," he acknowledged—as he spoke French planes circled low over Paris—and then he ended with a voice full of confidence.

"As for us, more than ever we have confidence in our arms."

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

Two days of terrific German pounding at the Weygand defense line has bent back its flank both east and west, perhaps shaken the whole Somme river front; but produced little else to forecast with certainty the great battle.

French retirement of the channel flank in the west, and to the Aisne river in the vital Oise valley gateway sector, suggest that the whole Somme and Somme-Oise canal front may be drawn back to avert a German break-through. Yet the outstanding fact of the battle to date is that the resolution of France and her armies to fight it out with the foe step by step has been sharply demonstrated.

Weygand's Strategy

That is a more vital factor for the Franco-British cause than the yielding of ground from hour to hour or day to day. French morale remains high to sustain what seems to be the Weygand strategy of slow retreat to wear down the impetus of the German smash. That has balked by two days, at least, a repetition of the tragedy of the Meuse, where a break in French lines let German mechanized legions through for a sweep to the channel.

German nibbling at the Peronne bulge to threaten French forces in the Amiens-Peronne-Chauny triangle was indicated even before Paris disclosed retirements from both the Ailette sector and on the channel flank. As compared to the strategic importance of the French fight to hold the Oise valley gateway, the German advances in the Abbeville area are of secondary consequence.

Result Uncertain

It is still uncertain whether the Franco-British withdrawal southwest of Abbeville to the Bresle river position is local in character or the beginning of a general withdrawal from the Somme to absorb the first shock of the German attack. In any event, the channel sector offers the Germans no prospect of cracking the Weygand defense system seriously unless their mechanized forces can lunge toward the channel ports of Dieppe and Le Harve, or eastward behind the whole defense line.

Indicated French retirement from the line of the Ailette, or rather the Oise-Aisne canal, on the east flank is a more serious matter, although it does not uncover the Oise valley approach to Paris and the heart of France. The Aisne itself and the heights about it as well as the forest of Compiegne about the junction of the Oise and the Aisne afford better ground for the tactics General Weygand is reported using than did the canal front now abandoned.

ter being the case in 1935 when Italy invaded Ethiopia.

(An Alexandria dispatch said newspapers there were speculating intensely on the possibility of a Mussolini speech tonight, but the Rome dispatch gave no indication this might be so. Egyptian newspapers looked for "inacceptable demands" to be made on the Allies by Il Duce).

War Again Predicted

Italy for weeks has been making evident preparations for war and has accompanied them with demands on the Allies which indicated Mussolini would throw his armies into the fray beside his pact partner, Adolf Hitler.

The principal Adunata (assembly) will be held in Piazza Venezia, the square in front of Mussolini's Palazzo Venezia headquarters. But overflow meetings will be held at other places throughout Rome and Italy.

Additional loudspeakers are being set up to enable everyone to hear Mussolini.

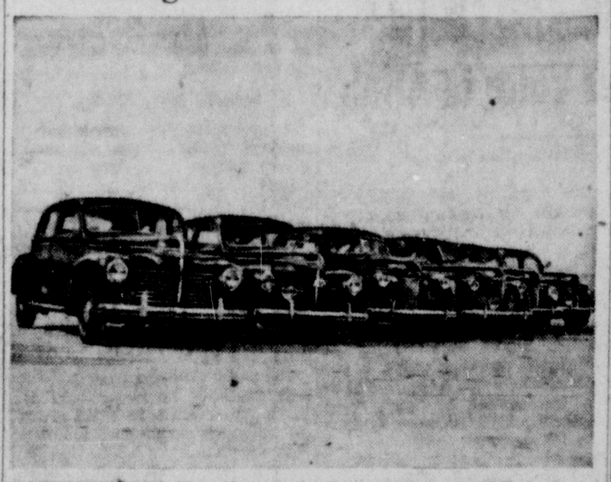

United States Warned

As the announcement of the mass meeting probably would be made by radio, party leaders are keeping in close touch with broadcasts. Meanwhile, Italy indicated in bluntly-worded warnings that the United States had better remain out of the war on pain of eventual European intervention in American affairs.

The government's view was expressed both by Virginio Gayda, Premier Mussolini's editorial mouthpiece, and Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano's newspaper, Il Telegrafo.

Gayda, writing in Il Giornale D'Italia, declared that it was "difficult to see" why European powers should not intervene on behalf of any American nation in conflict with the United States if the United States should set a precedent by "intervening in a European war.

Tommy Tucker To Sling for Supper

Boy Wonder Pitcher May Hurl for St. Louis This Year

JASPER, Ind., June 6 (AP)—Tommy Tucker may be slinging for his supper in major-league baseball—at 17.

The tall righthanded pitcher, who finished high school just the other day, signed a contract today with the St. Louis American league club.

The Browns told him to report to the Mayfield (Ky.) Kitty league club tomorrow for a tryout.

That set the whole town talking up Jasper as a rival of Van Meter, Ia., for producing boy wonder pitchers.

Because Van Meter—population, 400—has turned out only one famous young moundsman—Bob Feller of the Cleveland Indians.

This southern Indiana woodworking center—population, 4,000—thinks it has two youngsters who some day will be just as famous.

There's Tucker, of course—just at the age Feller was when he joined the Indians in 1936. And there's his high school teammate, a boy of sixteen with the quaint name of Roman Pfeffer.

Together these two hurled Jasper's wildcats to mythical state high school championships this year and last and the local junior American Legion team to state tournament finals in 1938.

On the high school team, Tommy won seven games in a row, six of them shutouts and one a no-hitter, in 1939 and eight of nine in 1940.

In junior baseball, he had nine victories and one defeat in 1938 and six victories and one defeat last year.

The St. Louis Cardinals, Detroit Tigers, Cincinnati Reds, Philadelphia Nationals and even Feller's Indians made him offers.

Young Pfeffer still has a year to go in high school, but the big leagues have been flirting with him, too. So far he's unattached.

Germans Battling

ting Paris would surrender within two weeks.

Except for authorized but unofficial reports that German armies were striking "into the heart of France" there was scant word of operations along the 200-mile Weygand line, other than in the coastal regions.

The high command communique was delayed more than three hours and then it devoted only a few lines to the new drive which Germans hoped would be the decisive stroke of the war.

When and if Premier Mussolini is going to throw his forces into the contest which Adolf Hitler says is to decide the fate of Europe for the next 1,000 years was a question which found no satisfactory answer in authorized German circles.

The German press is printing accounts of every Italian manifestation, however, without comment.

It was conceivable that Italy would join in the vast pincer movement on France, provided her armies could break through the French army along the Alps.

Commendable Move By War Veterans

MEMBERS of Henry Hart post of the Veterans of Foreign Wars deserve hearty commendation for voting to devote their wholehearted efforts toward routing out any Fifth Column subversiveness there may be in the community.

So far there has been no evidence that anything of this sort exists here in Cumberland, but there have been numerous instances throughout the country where it has existed and even flourished for some time without arousing suspicions. That much has been shown by the work of the Dies investigating committee.

Any information that may be unearthed will properly be turned over to the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

There should be hearty patriotic response to the request by Lester Bolinger, post commander, that all non-members co-operate in this work by the post members. Other organizations can lend assistance, also.

The Fifth Column is much in the public eye of late, ever since fearsome prospective victims of the aggressor have learned to profit by the tragic experience of the small European nations which were overwhelmed so quickly and with so little resistance that the onlooker has become convinced of the presence of enemy forces within the conquered countries.

The scheme is so far from new that one of the synonyms of this device of warfare is the Trojan horse, of which every schoolboy has heard, the contraption which won in a jiffy a war which had raged for ten years.

Even the most casual student of history will call to mind many other incidents in history in which were exercised the age-old strategy of boring from within. The failure of any nation to recognize the existence of such a plan is inexcusable. It is old stuff.

Fifty years ago, Berliners were thunderstruck at the discovery that a Russian baron, Wessilinsi, was the owner and conductor of a newspaper published in the German capital, and that the connection of the baron with the enterprise had been maintained for years with the utmost secrecy. Coupled with the discovery of the identity of the publisher was an equally startling one, that the Russion baron's wife was a friend of the German Countess Waldersee.

The Fifth Column is a new expression which came into the language out of the late Spanish civil war, but the idea is so ancient that there should be surprise it can continue to be insidious. That, however, is what its users trade on.

Labor Law Changes Are Obviously Necessary

IT is good to note that the national House of Representatives has agreed, in an overwhelming test vote, to proceed with debate on effecting changes in the Wagner Labor Relations act. Members will no longer dodge the issue, already too long evaded, but will come to some decision on the various proposals that have been made and that will yet be offered.

It ought not be difficult to arrive at this decision inasmuch as the question of needed changes has long been debated and fully analyzed throughout the country. Certain fundamental alterations have been agreed upon generally.

It is obvious that these improvements should be made in the face of such occurrences as that which stopped work on two navy cruisers, two destroyers and three merchant ships at the plants of the Federal Shipyard and Drydocks Company in New Jersey. When something like that happens as the nation is girding itself for a tremendous program of necessary national defense in which speed is urgently required, it is clear that something is radically wrong with our system of regulating the relations between capital and labor.

American workers in overwhelming majority want to do their part in this national defense effort. The people do not expect them to do more than their fair share, or to make sacrifices not shared by others, or to surrender any reasonable gains they should be permitted to retain. But, as the Pittsburgh Press has well stated, "the people have a right to expect that what is asked in the name of labor shall be for the benefit of labor and not for the advantage of power-hungry men who call themselves leaders."

Labor will suffer much more than it has already suffered if the defense program is unduly delayed by strikes and racketeering and extortionate demands influenced by Fifth Column subversiveness. Its rank and file should cooperate in any reasonable effort to avoid such eventualities.

Reluctance of Congress Due To a Lack of Confidence

MEMBERS of Congress are, quite properly, manifesting a reluctance to grant President Roosevelt some of the powers he has requested in addition to the vast emergency powers already possessed by the executive. The argument over the authority to call out the national guard for duty at any place at any time is an instance.

Perhaps such authority as the latter may be needed at some time or other. But why are congressmen so reluctant about granting it? Simply because they do not have the confidence in the executive they should have.

In all former wars the president of the United States has commanded the confidence of the people.

If the people lack confidence in their present president it is not their fault. They still have confidence in the United States and are determined to defend it against all enemies, foreign and domestic.

As foreign war developments give warning that the United States must be adequately armed to defend this hemisphere, if necessary, it is unfortunate that the utterly improvident management of national affairs during the last seven years has destroyed the confidence of the people. An administration that has piled up the peacetime debt by a sum nearly equal to the cost of American participation in the World war is now faced with need for the billions that have been wasted.

The people approve of immediate increase of preparedness for defensive war. They will take the risk of seeing additional billions unwisely spent, in the hope that in spite of an incompetent administration the country will be better armed. With deep misgivings they watch the course of the administration in handling foreign relations; but, whatever may come, they hope that the defensive strength of the United States will be increased.

Next to the ardent hope that war may be everted entirely is the hope tha the people may in November place direction of their government in safe and prudent hands.

Meanwhile, Congress can, as it should, take care of debated cases of authority by remaining in session through the present emergency. Then, if more authority appears to be needed, it can be given instantly.

Retirement of Perkins Is Again Demanded

MADAME SECRETARY PERKINS is now pleading with union labor delegates to oust all racketeers, Communists, Fifth Columnists and the like from their ranks. In this she is doing the obvious thing and deserves commendation. But if she doesn't get red in the face while doing so, she has good reason because she has done about as much as any other person in the country, if not more so, to encourage those very things by her attitude toward sit-down strikes, toward such fellows as Harry Bridges and toward extremist labor agitation in general. In her present preachments she is merely confronting the fruits of her own mistaken policy.

Suggestions have frequently been heard that Madame Perkins should retire from her cabinet position. They are now being heard again, the New York Herald Tribune, for example, expressing the belief that the time has come for a renewal of the demand for her retirement. The reason advanced is that the nation is up against a grim problem of preparing to meet a foe "to whom no holds are barred," one of whose specialities is the disaffection of labor in position to make or mar the defense against him.

As the Herald Tribune says, the very key to our program of resistance to the Nazi menace lies in the loyalty of our workers, in view of which we should have at the head of our department of labor, "not one whose fears or sentimentalities have led her to condone lawlessness and treachery, but one whose forthright distinction between the rights and wrongs of labor activity makes common sense." The suggestion is well stated.

Almost any day now we expect the Nazis to announce the finding of secret papers in The Hague revealing a Dutch plot to seize Berlin.

London is so full of royal refugees these days that, no doubt, when a commoner goes by everyone just naturally stops and stares.

Having heard nothing from him in weeks, there is a suspicion Confucius is tied up in some way with the McNutt boom.

The Sunday drivers' political slogan this year appears to be "Two crumpled fenders for every car."

Among the uninvited guests who dropped in unexpectedly were those European parachute troops.

Wait 'till the Trojan horse goes up against the Missouri mule!

"He's Getting Something"

By MARSHALL MASLIN

Did you hear that front door bang?

That was the young son leaving the house in a rage. . . . He's "getting something," but he doesn't know it. He's going to be sick but he ran out of the house when his mother went to get the thermometer.

Marshall Maslin

He woke feeling peevish and "mean." He fussed and wouldn't get dressed in a hurry. He came down to breakfast with his hair in a tangle and growled when his mother told him to comb it. He told his sister to shut up and when she happened to pick up his ball he snatched it away from her.

When his mother told him that was no way to act toward his sister he growled something under his breath, and wouldn't tell what he said. . . . It had sounded suspiciously like "Aw, nuts!", however, and small boys aren't supposed to be impudent to their mothers.

All through breakfast he was a trial. He said he wasn't hungry and he dallied with his food. He reached across the table for the jam and he scowled when reproved for it. . . . Charming lad, indeed! Mother's darling, huh! . . . Look at that face. All sullen and heavy and pulled down into disagreeable lines. Eyes half shut. . . . Only a mother could love it and she wouldn't have an easy time, either. Suppose it froze that way—how would he like that? Aw, let a guy alone, cantcha? No he didn't have any cold! No, he felt all right! Nothing was the matter with him. He felt swell. He had to get to school early, had to see a guy about something.

So he snatched his books and pushed the cat out of the way and slammed the door as he left his lovely home.

He's getting something. You can be sure of that. He's not his "normal" self. Maybe he's getting the measles or the mumps or the chicken pox — or something worse. . . . We'll see how he is when he comes home at noon for lunch. If he's acting like this then, off he goes to bed—and stays there until he's well again, the little devil. . . . And you girls stay away from him! . . . It's enough to have one sick child in the house without having everybody else exposed.

WHY does he have to be so mean when he's sick!

Hobo Paper Gives Some Interesting Thoughts on Life

By EDWIN C. HILL

Edwin C. Hill

About forty years ago, a widely read book in America was Josiah Flint's "Tramping with Tramps." That was also the day of "Songs of the Open Road," and "Songs of Vagabondia," by Bliss Carmen and Richard Hovey. These latter had literary quality and their public appeal was partly but not altogether understandable for that reason. But, as in Flint's book, they tuned in with some latent, perhaps peculiarly American, impulse to be free to get from here to there if that happened to be your whim.

We're that way. It may never occur to us to go to Hohokus, but just anybody tell us we can't! The above retrospect pertains to the current weekly issue of The Hobo News, just on the streets. It is forty pages, somewhat larger than tabloid size, heavily illustrated with black and white art, of passable professional grade, with good craftsmanship in writing and makeup. Many of the cuts appear to be hand-outs from newspaper and magazine morgues—in fact, one recognizes old friends among them—but on the whole the "blanket stiffs", as they still tag themselves, do an amazingly workmanlike job.

Interesting Study

In the light of the sober realities of modern life, any attempt to romanticize indigence may seem pretty far-fetched. But these hoboes are a raffish, rollicking crew and if one will be but slightly indulgent to their mood, he will sense something of the bucko spirit of the "Pipes of the Pitchmen," in the Billboard, or of the songs of the late and unlamented "Wobblies," or of the folk sagas of the Erie canal and the railroad songs. Considering that there are multitudes of workless, drifting, homeless men throughout the country, at a time when everybody is talking about work, order and discipline, the hobo thought and social outlook should provide an interesting study for sociologists, with the current issue of The Hobo News as an important document.

Some High Spots

We hastily sidestep any such heavy-hitting endeavor, but there are a few high spots of obvious interest in this unique demonstration that hoboes can do a lot of work when they don't have to. Their selling line is "TO HELL WITH HITLER", in box-car type (a natural for a hobo) with Hitler's face on a wolf's body underneath, and the line "Who's Afraid of the Big, Bad Wolf?" Repeated several times is a half-page box of striking make-up, as follows:

Americanism

Is an Unfailing Love of Country;
Loyalty to Its Institutions and Ideals;
Eagerness to Defend It Against All Enemies;
Undivided Allegiance to the Flag;
And a Desire to Secure the Blessings
Of Liberty to Ourselves and Posterity.

A Complete Wash-out

The leading editorial is called "Hoboes." Here and elsewhere it is made clear that "class consciousness", in the Marxian sense, is a complete wash-out, so far as these migrants are concerned, but they have a class consciousness of their own. This is touched on as follows:

"Amazing, too, in connection with the hoboes of the country, is the fact that even in this cross section of American life we find class distinction. Jack MacBeth, president of the 'boes in Chicago, defines the various groups thus: A hobo is a migratory worker; a tramp is a migratory non-worker, and a bum is non-migratory non-worker."

Women, Also

I thought the article on "Women on the Road" might be a little hard to take. But Lilly Nelson, "hoboette," writes an amazingly competent magazine article on "ladies who ride the roads, sleep in lodging houses, cook a mulligan in hobo jungles, and, in general, learn how to rough it."

The Brake Beam Kid is a featured contributor. He is only twenty years old, but he has been on the road eight years. Train whistles fascinate him. "I like the New Haven railroad whistle the best because it throws out and vibrates back," he says. "I just can't resist train whistles." Sometimes, we get that way, too. You'll find this hobo sheet tangent with the human side of the news at many points.

THE CHEERFUL AND THE UNCHEERFUL GIVER

Arms for the Allies Seen As Obvious Course for the Defense of America

By MARK SULLIVAN

WASHINGTON, June 6. — This nation is about to make a decision. What the decision will be is practically determined. Practically, the thing is done.

Mark Sullivan

There are still some who do not see; or who, seeing imperfectly, are not fully convinced. To them is due the consideration of explaining just why America makes this decision.

Start with the plainest fact in the scene. America is arming itself. That is the plainest fact in the scene. It is also the least disputed policy. That we should arm is conceded, practically without dissent.

Very well, we arm. For what reason do we arm? What caused us to arm?

To that question, the answer lies in a date: On May 10th Germany marched into Holland, Belgium and France. And six days later, President Roosevelt went before Congress. He told Congress and the country that America is in danger. Congress agreed. Congress, with only one dissenting vote in both Houses, 1 out of 531—Congress voted to arm.

Reason Is Plain

So the reason we arm is plain. We arm because Germany is coming in our direction—and because she is not stopped by the countries which stand between her and us. In spite of superbly heroic effort, France and England do not hold Germany back.

That is the reason America arms. It is the sole reason. Never was any reason, for any action, so plain and so un-complex. We arm because there is danger that Germany may conquer England and France. If that danger did not exist, we would not arm. If that danger disappeared, if the Allies won against Germany, we would stop arming. We are arming for the sole reason that there is danger of Germany conquering the Allies.

That is the reason we arm.

Next, for what purpose do we arm—purpose is a thing slightly different from reason. What do we expect to do with our arms?

For a Purpose

We arm for the purpose, and the sole purpose, of defending ourselves against certain consequences that would follow Germany victory. We arm against German possession of the British fleet; against German possession of the present rights of Britain in Canada; against German possession of British West Indies islands, close to our shores and the Panama Canal, against German menace to us by way of Latin America.

In short, we arm for one purpose and reason only. We arm to prevent consequences which would follow German victory over the Allies.

Now, if we arm to prevent the consequence of a thing, would we not better arm to prevent the thing from happening?

Can we not prevent the thing, more quickly and more safely and more cheaply, than we can thereafter prevent the consequences of the thing?

To prevent the thing (assuming it is not too late to do that) would take one brief, gigantic exertion of effort. But to prevent the consequences of the thing, after it has happened, would take years of constant defense, generations of defense. To prevent the consequences of the thing, after it has happened, would compel us to maintain, for indefinite years to come, an immense army, an immense navy, an immense air force, constant universal conscription.

This brings us to the decision we must make, which we have practically made.

The Best Way

The best way for America to arm itself, is to arm the Allies. For an airplane built to defend America, there is one best place. An American airplane delivered to the Allies, used in Europe to prevent German victory, is of infinitely greater service to us than the same airplane kept in America. And the same as to ships and armament and every sort of war supply.

True, there is some risk that the Allies, even with our help, may not prevent Germany from winning. Even after giving maximum help to the Allies, we may later have to defend ourselves. To that, the answer is that, by using our factories now to make arms for the Allies, we shall get our factories speeded up into quantity production, so that if and when we must defend ourselves, we shall have an abundant, flowing supply.

The reasons so far stated, for America helping the Allies, are put upon the ground of our own self-interest, solely. They omit all motives of sympathy or other emotion. In pure reason, pure practicality, the best way to defend ourselves is to help defend the Allies.

Are Justified

There will be many Americans—and they will be the best among us—who wish to help the Allies for motives of sentiment. They are abundantly justified. For them there are two pictures, each sufficient.

One is the picture of Germany ruthlessly invading neutral countries, Denmark, Norway, Holland, Belgium; descending upon them by stealth and force—brutally murdering many of their inhabitants, terrorizing all. That America should be excited by that, that we should help to resist, prevent and punish it, is the most elevated tradition America has.

There is another picture, even more poignant. In large parts of Europe today are persons cruelly uprooted, refugees in terrified flight. Their flight is all in one direction, toward one haven. All flee to France and England. No one sees any refugee going toward Germany. No one thinks of Germany as a place of mercy and succor. All think of Germany as the negation of mercy, the source of cruelty.

That, if America is still America, is a sufficient reason for the decision we are making.

Air Training Is In Big Demand

From the Johnstown, Pa., Tribune

Such a tremendous expansion of the aviation industry as is proposed by the president will create a demand for additional thousands of trained workers and will assure immediate employment for the thousands of students who are graduating from aviation courses throughout the country this year. These courses, with a total current enrollment of about 12,500, are at present offered through the public school systems of thirty states with the help of federal aid. The federal contribution consists of payments toward the salaries of qualified instructors under the federal vocational education program. It totals about $87,500 a year.

Two general types of aviation courses are offered in the public schools. "Trade preparatory" courses, consisting of half class work and half school shop work, are designed to prepare students for employment in the aviation industry where training will be completed through experience. "Trade extension" courses are offered for persons already employed in the aviation industry. These courses give class instruction while practical experience is being acquired on the job. Trade extension courses can be arranged either during or outside regular working hours.

If Congress provides the money to finance the defense program outlined by the president, the training received by the students in these courses will go far toward furnishing an adequate and efficient personnel to man the aviation plants. There is no longer any doubt, in view of what has been demonstrated in Europe, that a large airforce is one of the vital needs of our military machine.

Gen. "Billy" Mitchell said so a good many years ago and the stuffed shirts of the War and Navy departments promptly sought by every possible means to discredit him. Mitchell was right and the stuffed shirts were wrong, but unfortunately he did not live to see his judgment vindicated.

Guard Authority Should Be Given, Johnson Says

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

Hugh Johnson

WASHINGTON, June 6—Should the president be given authority to draft and use the national guard? Yes and something more. He should be given authority to recreate the selective service system and draft men for either the regular army or the national guard.

This doesn't mean that either power will be used to any important extent. It isn't to suggest the raising of a large conscripted army before we have the equipment for them to use—if at all. It isn't a counsel of panic or hysteria. It is a means to avoid both and, above all to prevent hardship and unfairness in raising the troops we need—even if the number be less than 750,000.

Reasons Are Simple

The reasons for these suggestions are simple. Recruiting by volunteering is lagging dangerously. This is partly due to growing industrial activity and partly because there are so many men on relief. But there is a stronger reason than any of these. This country was sold in 1917 the idea of raising armies by selective draft—the idea that each man should "serve in that place where it shall best serve the common good to call him."

Men, believing that this is our national policy, do not feel the old urge to volunteer before they are told the country's wishes. In any major effort volunteering and selective service simply can't be permitted at the same time. If the idea behind selective service is true and genuine we can't permit the old slogan "Be a 'went' and not a 'sent' ". It raises all the old prejudices against a conscript and is very bad for morale.

Without Dependents

Another reason is that if the national guard is called out in time of peace, about 200,000 men are going to lose their wages in industry to take the very low pay of a soldier and many of them have dependents. Until there is a stark military necessity this should be avoided wherever possible. The regular army and the national guard at the beginning should be largely made up of able-bodied men without dependents, to whom the loss of a civilian job involves no minor tragedy.

Setting up the selective service boards, roughly one in every group of 30,000 inhabitants, is very simple. We completed the organization in ten days in 1917. The next step is the registration of about 13,000,000 men between the ages of 21 to 30 inclusive. This is done by means of a fairly simply questionaire which gives all the facts the board needs for selections.

Liberal Standards Necessary

Then the order in which registered men are to be called for examination is fixed by lot. The standards for the selection of the first 500,000 should be very liberal—such as to impose the very minimum of hardship on the man himself or his dependents. Having skimmed off that number of men of this type, that class would wait to be called—either to the regular army as fast as it requires men, or to fill up the national guard or replace the guardsmen, whose call should be deferred because of hardship or other good reason.

This is the swiftest, fairest, most efficient way to raise armies and it is by so far the cheapest way that the cost per soldier is only a fraction of the cost of volunteering. In the interest of both prudence and calmness I think we should proceed along these lines at once.—Distributed by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

It Turns the Stomach

From the Pittsburgh Press

Meeting under the protection of the democratic institutions and constitutional guarantees which they hope eventually to destroy, delegates to the national convention of the Communist party in New York pledged support to the peace policy of the Soviet Union" and declared opposition to America's rearmament program. They then named as their candidate for President Earl Browder, who is under a four-year Federal sentence for passport fraud.

It cannot but make the sincerest believer in democracy, with its guarantees of free speech and assemblage, writhe to see this gathering of fifth-columnists meet to strengthen its ties with a foreign dictatorship and to assail America's efforts to protect itself against attack.

It cannot but turn even the healthiest stomach to hear talk about the peace policy of the Soviet Union"—which turned the present war loose on humanity by its alliance with Hitler and which then cruelly and ruthlessly attacked and subjugated the peaceful, decent Finnish people

Of course the Communists are opposed to American rearmament It is their job to try to keep America in such a condition that Stalin and his pal, Hitler, could do to it what they have done to Finland, Poland, Denmark, Norway, Holland, Belgium and other countries

Meanwhile the Communists and Nazis will try by sabotage and treasonable utterances to paralyze the defense efforts of the nation they want to stab in the back

Commendable Move By War Veterans

MEMBERS of Henry Hart post of the Veterans of Foreign Wars deserve hearty commendation for voting to devote their wholehearted efforts toward routing out any Fifth Column subversiveness there may be in the community.

So far there has been no evidence that anything of this sort exists here in Cumberland, but there have been numerous instances throughout the country where it has existed and even flourished for some time without arousing suspicions. That much has been shown by the work of the Dies investigating committee.

Any information that may be unearthed will properly be turned over to the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

There should be hearty patriotic response to the request by Lester Bolinger, post commander, that all non-members co-operate in this work by the post members. Other organizations can lend assistance, also.

The Fifth Column is much in the public eye of late, ever since fearsome prospective victims of the aggressor have learned to profit by the tragic experience of the small European nations which were overwhelmed so quickly and with so little resistance that the onlooker has become convinced of the presence of enemy forces within the conquered countries.

The scheme is so far from new that one of the synonyms of this device of warfare is the Trojan horse, of which every schoolboy has heard, the contraption which won in a jiffy a war which had raged for ten years.

Even the most casual student of history will call to mind many other incidents in history in which were exercised the age-old strategy of boring from within. The failure of any nation to recognize the existence of such a plan is inexcusable. It is old stuff.

Fifty years ago, Berliners were thunderstruck at the discovery that a Russian baron, Wessilinsi, was the owner and conductor of a newspaper published in the German capital, and that the connection of the baron with the enterprise had been maintained for years with the utmost secrecy. Coupled with the discovery of the identity of the publisher was an equally startling one, that the Russion baron's wife was a friend of the German Countess Waldersee.

The Fifth Column is a new expression which came into the language out of the late Spanish civil war, but the idea is so ancient that there should be surprise it can continue to be insidious. That, however, is what its users trade on.

Labor Law Changes Are Obviously Necessary

IT is good to note that the national House of Representatives has agreed, in an overwhelming test vote, to proceed with debate on effecting changes in the Wagner Labor Relations act. Members will no longer dodge the issue, already too long evaded, but will come to some decision on the various proposals that have been made and that will yet be offered.

It ought not be difficult to arrive at this decision inasmuch as the question of needed changes has long been debated and fully analyzed throughout the country. Certain fundamental alterations have been agreed upon generally.

It is obvious that these improvements should be made in the face of such occurrences as that which stopped work on two navy cruisers, two destroyers and three merchant ships at the plants of the Federal Shipyard and Drydocks Company in New Jersey. When something like that happens as the nation is girding itself for a tremendous program of necessary national defense in which speed is urgently required, it is clear that something is radically wrong with our system of regulating the relations between capital and labor.

American workers in overwhelming majority want to do their part in this national defense effort. The people do not expect them to do more than their fair share, or to make sacrifices not shared by others, or to surrender any reasonable gains they should be permitted to retain. But, as the Pittsburgh Press has well stated, "the people have a right to expect that what is asked in the name of labor shall be for the benefit of labor and not for the advantage of power-hungry men who call themselves leaders."

Labor will suffer much more than it has already suffered if the defense program is unduly delayed by strikes and racketeering and extortionate demands influenced by Fifth Column subversiveness. Its rank and file should cooperate in any reasonable effort to avoid such eventualities.

Reluctance of Congress Due To a Lack of Confidence

MEMBERS of Congress are, quite properly, manifesting a reluctance to grant President Roosevelt some of the powers he has requested in addition to the vast emergency powers already possessed by the executive. The argument over the authority to call out the national guard for duty at any place at any time is an instance.

Perhaps such authority as the latter may be needed at some time or other. But why are congressmen so reluctant about granting it? Simply because they do not have the confidence in the executive they should have.

In all former wars the president of the United States has commanded the confidence of the people.

If the people lack confidence in their present president it is not their fault. They still have confidence in the United States and are determined to defend it against all enemies, foreign and domestic.

As foreign war developments give warning that the United States must be adequately armed to defend this hemisphere, if necessary, it is unfortunate that the utterly improvident management of national affairs during the last seven years has destroyed the confidence of the people. An administration that has piled up the peacetime debt by a sum nearly equal to the cost of American participation in the World war is now faced with need for the billions that have been wasted.

The people approve of immediate increase of preparedness for defensive war. They will take the risk of seeing additional billions unwisely spent, in the hope that in spite of an incompetent administration the country will be better armed. With deep misgivings they watch the course of the administration in handling foreign relations; but, whatever may come, they hope that the defensive strength of the United States will be increased.

Next to the ardent hope that war may be everted entirely is the hope tha the people may in November place direction of their government in safe and prudent hands.

Meanwhile, Congress can, as it should, take care of debated cases of authority by remaining in session through the present emergency. Then, if more authority appears to be needed, it can be given instantly.

Retirement of Perkins Is Again Demanded

MADAME SECRETARY PERKINS is now pleading with union labor delegates to oust all racketeers, Communists, Fifth Columnists and the like from their ranks. In this she is doing the obvious thing and deserves commendation. But if she doesn't get red in the face while doing so, she has good reason because she has done about as much as any other person in the country, if not more so, to encourage those very things by her attitude toward sit-down strikes, toward such fellows as Harry Bridges and toward extremist labor agitation in general. In her present preachments she is merely confronting the fruits of her own mistaken policy.

Suggestions have frequently been heard that Madame Perkins should retire from her cabinet position. They are now being heard again, the New York Herald Tribune, for example, expressing the belief that the time has come for a renewal of the demand for her retirement. The reason advanced is that the nation is up against a grim problem of preparing to meet a foe "to whom no holds are barred," one of whose specialities is the disaffection of labor in position to make or mar the defense against him.

As the Herald Tribune says, the very key to our program of resistance to the Nazi menace lies in the loyalty of our workers, in view of which we should have at the head of our department of labor, "not one whose fears or sentimentalities have led her to condone lawlessness and treachery, but one whose forthright distinction between the rights and wrongs of labor activity makes common sense." The suggestion is well stated.

Almost any day now we expect the Nazis to announce the finding of secret papers in The Hague revealing a Dutch plot to seize Berlin.

London is so full of royal refugees these days that, no doubt, when a commoner goes by everyone just naturally stops and stares.

Having heard nothing from him in weeks, there is a suspicion Confucius is tied up in some way with the McNutt boom.

The Sunday drivers' political slogan this year appears to be "Two crumpled fenders for every car."

Among the uninvited guests who dropped in unexpectedly were those European parachute troops.

Wait 'till the Trojan horse goes up against the Missouri mule!

"He's Getting Something"

By MARSHALL MASLIN

Did you hear that front door bang?

That was the young son leaving the house in a rage. . . . He's "getting something," but he doesn't know it. He's going to be sick but he ran out of the house when his mother went to get the thermometer.

Marshall Maslin

He woke feeling peevish and "mean." He fussed and wouldn't get dressed in a hurry. He came down to breakfast with his hair in a tangle and growled when his mother told him to comb it. He told his sister to shut up and when she happened to pick up his ball he snatched it away from her.

When his mother told him that was no way to act toward his sister he growled something under his breath, and wouldn't tell what he said. . . . It had sounded suspiciously like "Aw, nuts!", however, and small boys aren't supposed to be impudent to their mothers.

All through breakfast he was a trial. He said he wasn't hungry and he dallied with his food. He reached across the table for the jam and he scowled when reproved for it. . . . Charming lad, indeed! Mother's darling, huh! . . . Look at that face. All sullen and heavy and pulled down into disagreeable lines. Eyes half shut. . . . Only a mother could love it and she wouldn't have an easy time, either. Suppose it froze that way—how would he like that? Aw, let a guy alone, cantcha? No he didn't have any cold! No, he felt all right! Nothing was the matter with him. He felt swell. He had to get to school early, had to see a guy about something.

So he snatched his books and pushed the cat out of the way and slammed the door as he left his lovely home.

He's getting something. You can be sure of that. He's not his "normal" self. Maybe he's getting the measles or the mumps or the chicken pox — or something worse. . . . We'll see how he is when he comes home at noon for lunch. If he's acting like this then, off he goes to bed—and stays there until he's well again, the little devil. . . . And you girls stay away from him! . . . It's enough to have one sick child in the house without having everybody else exposed.

WHY does he have to be so mean when he's sick!

Edwin C. Hill

About forty years ago, a widely read book in America was Josiah Flint's "Tramping with Tramps." That was also the day of "Songs of the Open Road," and "Songs of Vagabondia," by Bliss Carmen and Richard Hovey. These latter had literary quality and their public appeal was partly but not altogether understandable for that reason. But, as in Flint's book, they tuned in with some latent, perhaps peculiarly American, impulse to be free to get from here to there if that happened to be your whim.

We're that way. It may never occur to us to go to Hohokus, but just anybody tell us we can't! The above retrospect pertains to the current weekly issue of The Hobo News, just on the streets. It is forty pages, somewhat larger than tabloid size, heavily illustrated with black and white art, of passable professional grade, with good craftsmanship in writing and makeup. Many of the cuts appear to be hand-outs from newspaper and magazine morgues—in fact, one recognizes old friends among them—but on the whole the "blanket stiffs", as they still tag themselves, do an amazingly workmanlike job.

Interesting Study

In the light of the sober realities of modern life, any attempt to romanticize indigence may seem pretty far-fetched. But these hoboes are a raffish, rollicking crew and if one will be but slightly indulgent to their mood, he will sense something of the bucko spirit of the "Pipes of the Pitchmen," in the Billboard, or of the songs of the late and unlamented "Wobblies," or of the folk sagas of the Erie canal and the railroad songs. Considering that there are multitudes of workless, drifting, homeless men throughout the country, at a time when everybody is talking about work, order and discipline, the hobo thought and social outlook should provide an interesting study for sociologists, with the current issue of The Hobo News as an important document.

Some High Spots

We hastily sidestep any such heavy-hitting endeavor, but there are a few high spots of obvious interest in this unique demonstration that hoboes can do a lot of work when they don't have to. Their selling line is "TO HELL WITH HITLER", in box-car type (a natural for a hobo) with Hitler's face on a wolf's body underneath, and the line "Who's Afraid of the Big, Bad Wolf?" Repeated several times is a half-page box of striking make-up, as follows:

Americanism

Is an Unfailing Love of Country;
Loyalty to Its Institutions and Ideals;
Eagerness to Defend It Against All Enemies;
Undivided Allegiance to the Flag;
And a Desire to Secure the Blessings
Of Liberty to Ourselves and Posterity.

A Complete Wash-out

The leading editorial is called "Hoboes." Here and elsewhere it is made clear that "class consciousness", in the Marxian sense, is a complete wash-out, so far as these migrants are concerned, but they have a class consciousness of their own. This is touched on as follows:

"Amazing, too, in connection with the hoboes of the country, is the fact that even in this cross section of American life we find class distinction. Jack MacBeth, president of the 'boes in Chicago, defines the various groups thus: A hobo is a migratory worker; a tramp is a migratory non-worker, and a bum is non-migratory non-worker."

Women, Also

I thought the article on "Women on the Road" might be a little hard to take. But Lilly Nelson, "hoboette," writes an amazingly competent magazine article on "ladies who ride the roads, sleep in lodging houses, cook a mulligan in hobo jungles, and, in general, learn how to rough it."

The Brake Beam Kid is a featured contributor. He is only twenty years old, but he has been on the road eight years. Train whistles fascinate him. "I like the New Haven railroad whistle the best because it throws out and vibrates back," he says. "I just can't resist train whistles." Sometimes, we get that way, too. You'll find this hobo sheet tangent with the human side of the news at many points. —Copyright, 1940, King Features Syndicate Inc.

Arms for the Allies Seen As Obvious Course for the Defense of America

By MARK SULLIVAN

WASHINGTON, June 6. — This nation is about to make a decision. What the decision will be is practically determined. Practically, the thing is done.

Mark Sullivan

There are still some who do not see; or who, seeing imperfectly, are not fully convinced. To them is due the consideration of explaining just why America makes this decision.

Start with the plainest fact in the scene. America is arming itself. That is the plainest fact in the scene. It is also the least disputed policy. That we should arm is conceded, practically without dissent.

Very well, we arm. For what reason do we arm? What caused us to arm?

To that question, the answer lies in a date: On May 10th Germany marched into Holland, Belgium and France. And six days later, President Roosevelt went before Congress. He told Congress and the country that America is in danger. Congress agreed. Congress, with only one dissenting vote in both Houses, 1 out of 531—Congress voted to arm.

Reason Is Plain

So the reason we arm is plain. We arm because Germany is coming in our direction—and because she is not stopped by the countries which stand between her and us. In spite of superbly heroic effort, France and England do not hold Germany back.

That is the reason America arms. It is the sole reason. Never was any reason, for any action, so plain and so un-complex. We arm because there is danger that Germany may conquer England and France. If that danger did not exist, we would not arm. If that danger disappeared, if the Allies won against Germany, we would stop arming. We are arming for the sole reason that there is danger of Germany conquering the Allies.

That is the reason we arm.

Next, for what purpose do we arm—purpose is a thing slightly different from reason. What do we expect to do with our arms?

For a Purpose

We arm for the purpose, and the sole purpose, of defending ourselves against certain consequences that would follow Germany victory. We arm against German possession of the British fleet; against German possession of the present rights of Britain in Canada; against German possession of British West Indies islands, close to our shores and the Panama Canal, against German menace to us by way of Latin America.

In short, we arm for one purpose and reason only. We arm to prevent consequences which would follow German victory over the Allies.

Now, if we arm to prevent the consequence of a thing, would we not better arm to prevent the thing from happening?

Can we not prevent the thing, more quickly and more safely and more cheaply, than we can thereafter prevent the consequences of the thing?

To prevent the thing (assuming it is not too late to do that) would take one brief, gigantic exertion of effort. But to prevent the consequences of the thing, after it has happened, would take years of constant defense, generations of defense. To prevent the consequences of the thing, after it has happened, would compel us to maintain, for indefinite years to come, an immense army, an immense navy, an immense air force, constant universal conscription.

This brings us to the decision we must make, which we have practically made.

The Best Way

The best way for America to arm itself, is to arm the Allies. For an airplane built to defend America, there is one best place. An American airplane delivered to the Allies, used in Europe to prevent German victory, is of infinitely greater service to us than the same airplane kept in America. And the same as to ships and armament and every sort of war supply.

True, there is some risk that the Allies, even with our help, may not prevent Germany from winning. Even after giving maximum help to the Allies, we may later have to defend ourselves. To that, the answer is that, by using our factories now to make arms for the Allies, we shall get our factories speeded up into quantity production, so that if and when we must defend ourselves, we shall have an abundant, flowing supply.

The reasons so far stated, for America helping the Allies, are put upon the ground of our own self-interest, solely. They omit all motives of sympathy or other emotion. In pure reason, pure practicality, the best way to defend ourselves is to help defend the Allies.

Are Justified

There will be many Americans—and they will be the best among us—who wish to help the Allies for motives of sentiment. They are abundantly justified. For them there are two pictures, each sufficient.

One is the picture of Germany ruthlessly invading neutral countries, Denmark, Norway, Holland, Belgium; descending upon them by stealth and force—brutally murdering many of their inhabitants, terrorizing all. That America should be excited by that, that we should help to resist, prevent and punish it, is the most elevated tradition America has.

There is another picture, even more poignant. In large parts of Europe today are persons cruelly uprooted, refugees in terrified flight. Their flight is all in one direction, toward one haven. All flee to France and England. No one sees any refugee going toward Germany. No one thinks of Germany as a place of mercy and succor. All think of Germany as the negation of mercy, the source of cruelty.

That, if America is still America, is a sufficient reason for the decision we are making.

From the Johnstown, Pa., Tribune

Such a tremendous expansion of the aviation industry as is proposed by the president will create a demand for additional thousands of trained workers and will assure immediate employment for the thousands of students who are graduating from aviation courses throughout the country this year. These courses, with a total current enrollment of about 12,500, are at present offered through the public school systems of thirty states with the help of federal aid. The federal contribution consists of payments toward the salaries of qualified instructors under the federal vocational education program. It totals about $87,500 a year.

Two general types of aviation courses are offered in the public schools. "Trade preparatory" courses, consisting of half class work and half school shop work, are designed to prepare students for employment in the aviation industry where training will be completed through experience. "Trade extension" courses are offered for persons already employed in the aviation industry. These courses give class instruction while practical experience is being acquired on the job. Trade extension courses can be arranged either during or outside regular working hours.

If Congress provides the money to finance the defense program outlined by the president, the training received by the students in these courses will go far toward furnishing an adequate and efficient personnel to man the aviation plants. There is no longer any doubt, in view of what has been demonstrated in Europe, that a large airforce is one of the vital needs of our military machine.

Gen. "Billy" Mitchell said so a good many years ago and the stuffed shirts of the War and Navy departments promptly sought by every possible means to discredit him. Mitchell was right and the stuffed shirts were wrong, but unfortunately he did not live to see his judgment vindicated.

Guard Authority Should Be Given, Johnson Says

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

Hugh Johnson

WASHINGTON, June 6—Should the president be given authority to draft and use the national guard? Yes and something more. He should be given authority to re-create the selective service system and draft men for either the regular army or the national guard.

This doesn't mean that either power will be used to any important extent. It isn't to suggest the raising of a large conscripted army before we have the equipment for them to use—if at all. It isn't a counsel of panic or hysteria. It is a means to avoid both and, above all to prevent hardship and unfairness in raising the troops we need—even if the number be less than 750,000.

Reasons Are Simple

The reasons for these suggestions are simple. Recruiting by volunteering is lagging dangerously. This is partly due to growing industrial activity and partly because there are so many men on relief. But there is a stronger reason than any of these. This country was sold in 1917 the idea of raising armies by selective draft—the idea that each man should "serve in that place where it shall best serve the common good to call him."

Men, believing that this is our national policy, do not feel the old urge to volunteer before they are told the country's wishes. In any major effort volunteering and selective service simply can't be permitted at the same time. If the idea behind selective service is true and genuine we can't permit the old slogan "Be a 'went' and not a 'sent'". It raises all the old prejudices against a conscript and is very bad for morale.

Without Dependents

Another reason is that if the national guard is called out in time of peace, about 200,000 men are going to lose their wages in industry to take the very low pay of a soldier and many of them have dependents. Until there is a stark military necessity this should be avoided wherever possible. The regular army and the national guard at the beginning should be largely made up of able-bodied men without dependents, to whom the loss of a civilian job involves no minor tragedy.

Setting up the selective service boards, roughly one in every group of 30,000 inhabitants, is very simple. We completed the organization in ten days in 1917. The next step is the registration of about 13,000,000 men between the ages of 21 to 30 inclusive. This is done by means of a fairly simply questionaire which gives all the facts the board needs for selections.

Liberal Standards Necessary

Then the order in which registered men are to be called for examination is fixed by lot. The standards for the selection of the first 500,000 should be very liberal—such as to impose the very minimum of hardship on the man himself or his dependents. Having skimmed off that number of men of this type, that class would wait to be called—either to the regular army as fast as it requires men, or to fill up the national guard or replace the guardsmen, whose call should be deferred because of hardship or other good reason.

This is the swiftest, fairest, most efficient way to raise armies and it is by so far the cheapest way that the cost per soldier is only a fraction of the cost of volunteering. In the interest of both prudence and calmness I think we should proceed along these lines at once.—Distributed by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

It Turns the Stomach

From the Pittsburgh Press

Meeting under the protection of the democratic institutions and constitutional guarantees which they hope eventually to destroy, delegates to the national convention of the Communist party in New York pledged support to the peace policy of the Soviet Union" and declared opposition to America's rearmament program. They then named as their candidate for President Earl Browder, who is under a four-year Federal sentence for passport fraud.

It cannot but make the sincerest believer in democracy, with its guarantees of free speech and assemblage, writhe to see this gathering of fifth-columnists meet to strengthen its ties with a foreign dictatorship and to assail America's efforts to protect itself against attack.

It cannot but turn even the healthiest stomach to hear talk about the peace policy of the Soviet Union"—which turned the present war loose on humanity by its alliance with Hitler and which then cruelly and ruthlessly attacked and subjugated the peaceful, decent Finnish people

Of course the Communists are opposed to American rearmament It is their job to try to keep America in such a condition that Stalin and his pal, Hitler, could do to it what they have done to Finland, Poland, Denmark, Norway, Holland, Belgium and other countries

Meanwhile the Communists and Nazis will try by sabotage and treasonable utterances to paralyze the defense efforts of the nation they want to stab in the back

Close Your Eyes, Pick a Spot on the Globe, and I'll Take You There, He Said. What Was the Poor Girl To Do?

By MAUREEN DALY

That was about four years ago—the summer before my freshman year at college. It was a hot afternoon near the end of August and I had been playing tennis in the park with the girl next door. I was walking along, swinging my racquet and not thinking of anything special when I turned in our front walk and there on the swing on the front porch sat my Uncle Jacques! He is my mother's oldest brother John, who ran away from home when he was 16 and was never heard of until 30 years later, when he came back with two colored valets, a lot of money and his name changed to Jacques. He had made a fortune in rubber in the Philippine Islands and was going to concentrate on spending it the rest of his life. He was very eccentric and once we didn't hear from him for over a year, and it turned out he was on a Tibetan excavating expedition. Uncle Jacques was like that—you never knew just where he was or what he was doing till all of a sudden he turned up like this. So I wasn't really surprised to see him now, swinging on the porch, with a glass of lemonade in one hand and twirling his panama hat in the other. My mother sat beside him in a crisp, newly ironed dress, smiling. I knew they had been talking about me.

He Held Out His Hand

And they had. "So little Marcia's ready for college!" Uncle Jacques said. "Well, girl, go to it and good luck. Whatever you do, stick to it. Whatever you start, go through with it. Just keep to that rule and you'll come out on top. Promise me you'll stick to that rule."

I was always a little afraid of him—because he was so gruff, I guess, so I just said, "All right, Uncle Jacques, I'll do it."

And very solemnly he set his glass of lemonade on the table, put his hat on his head and held out his hand. "That's a promise, Marcia. And you stick to it—come out in the top 10 in your class at graduation and I'll make you a promise. I'll give you a year's trip to any spot in the world. You just shut you eyes, twirl th globe and point and there'll you'll go. That's how we'll do it—just twirl the globe and point. Anywhere in the world, Marcia. I promise you."

And that was four years ago. My first year at college was really hard. Sometimes I used to study till after 2 in the morning. The other girls in my dormitory knew what I was studying for and left me alone when I wanted to concentrate. Some of them even envied me. I remember often when we'd be talking about dates and whom we'll like to marry, someone would say, "Yes, but Marcia will go abroad and probably meet a duke or a baron or something and we'll all have to be satisfied with home town boys. Some years at college, got a medal for outstanding work in the history department and in my senior year was secretary of the honorary scholarship club. But it wasn't easy. Take that time I had a date with Jim Blakesley for the junior prom last year. I had met him when I went with the debate team to his school which is about 10 miles from us. I guess he liked me a little because he wrote to me the next day—just talked about the debate of course—and I answered and a correspondence developed. When the junior prom came along I asked him if he'd like to come and he answered special delivery that he'd love to. I was pretty excited and got a new dress from home and everything. It was black taffeta off-the-shoulders — you remember everyone was wearing off-the-shoulders that year—and it had crisp white flowers all around the neckline. Anyway, my last class that day was sociology and the professor announced very unexpectedly that we would have our mid-semester exam a week early—in fact the next day so what could I do? I called Jim and tried to explain that I'd have to call the whole thing off because I really had to study but I guess he didn't like it for he never called again.

So you see I was really in earnest about that trip.

Mother was as interested as I was and sent me boxes of travel folders to look over and get familiar with different places just in case that was the spot I should happen to hit.

In May of my senior year I began picking out my wardrobe. I read articles on Travel Togs in smart magazines and looked at resort clothes in Vogue and Mademoiselle. I couldn't do any actual buying until I was sure just what sort of a climate I was going to be in. And before long it was graduation day.

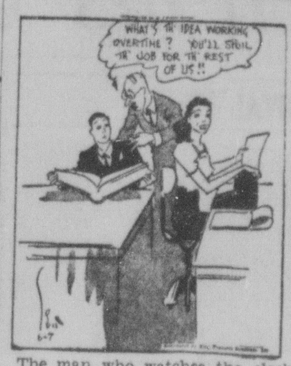

The whole family came—and, of course, uncle Jacques. When I heard the Dean read off my name among the honor students and when I walked up to receive my diploma I wasn't a bit sorry that I had missed so much fun and worried so hard. The trip would be worth it, I had never even been East before. After the ceremonies uncle Jacques said "Good work, Marcia, and I haven't forgotten you kept your promise and I'll keep mine. We'll find out right now where your trip will be." So we walked over to the library, the whole family, Uncle Jacques and I. I stood in front of the world globe and my hands trembled. After four years—

I shut my eyes so tightly they ached, I reached out and twirled the globe and held my breath. Please, please let it be somewhere exotic, somewhere glamorous, I prayer—and pointed.

You know, it wasn't only the disappointment of not being able to use my steamship luggage and see any palm trees or meet any barons or anything—but why did it have to be so hot in Pittsburgh that summer! (Distributed by United Feature Syndicate.)

Mrs. Peter Lowery and her daughter, Mrs. James Pitkethly, 103 Washington street, have returned from New York city.

Miss Mary Catherine Parks has gone to her home in Elkins, W. Va., after visiting Miss Marguerite Murray, Greene street.

Lieutenant John R. Boslet, Pittsburgh, chaplain in the United States Navy, is visiting his uncle, Jack Howe at the Fort Cumberland hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. Amos Collins have returned from Washington, D. C., Winchester, Va., and Frederick.

Finley C. Hendrickson, 325 Cumberland street, returned home yesterday from Memorial hospital.

The National Health Survey prepared by the United States Public Health Service in 1936-36 showed that there was fifty-seven per cent more serious illness (disabling for a week or more) among the poorest families than among the richest.

Something You Ate, No Doubt

By HELEN FOLLETT

IF YOUR complexion flares up, goes blotchy and has a tantrum—don't immediately blame the cosmetics you are using. They may not be at fault at all. You've eaten something your tummy doesn't like, and your skin is kicking up a big fuss in sympathy.

When there is the slightest sign of infection, and blotches look ugly, the common sense step is to consult a medical man who specializes in diseases of the skin and scalp. Don't fool around with home remedies, which may aggravate conditions. The average woman looks upon medical attention as the last resort which seems silly when one considers that the fee charged for a visit to a doctor is no more than many a woman pays for a box of face powder, half as much as she spends for a bottle of perfume. Penny wise and pound foolish.

Check Them Early

There are many skin disorders that can be checked if taken in the early stages but which prove stubborn if permitted to get a foothold. Many of them are contagious; other members of the family may become afflicted and infected. Impetigo is in this class, a common trouble among school children. If there is a small blemish that doesn't look like any you have seen before, toddle to the doc and find out all about it.

Stubby fingers, rounded at the ends, should be massaged once a day. Anoint with a heavy cream, begin thumbing at the base, continue along to the nail, press firmly above the nail cave. We won't promise that there will be a change in a hurry but massage has its good points and something can be accomplished if one is faithful and persistent.

The finger nails should be worn fairly long, filed to a neat oval outline, tinted their full length, and the half moon covered with the ruby glow. That design detracts from width.

"The Authority on Authorities"

CONSIDER THEIR SKILL

WHETHER to double your opponents or sacrifice against them depends on many factors. It it seems like a close question otherwise, your estimate of their skill and accuracy as bidders may often be the deciding element. When an extremely smooth pair gets to a high vulnerable contract and your partner passes a chance to double them, the chances are he thinks they can make the contract. Your job, then, unless you have some unexpectedly well-positioned defensive values, is to measure the cost of a sacrifice and if it is not too much, pay the price.

Dbl

South estimated, and quite soundly, that there was a pronounced distributional situation for East and West, also that this was why North did not double the 5-Spade bid, fearing some of his honor cards, on which he based a shaded informative double, would be ruffed. Ordinarily the best kind of suit-playing distribution is that in which the declarer's side has a fine fit in the trump suit and complete misfits of two side suits. That is just what East and West had shown to South.

It was clear to South from the bidding that both vulnerable opponents had good spades, also that East had length in hearts and West in clubs. There could not be many diamonds in either hand. Hence they should be able to make their contract, which they could. His sacrifice therefore saved a number of points, as he played the hand so as to go down only two tricks, losing one in clubs, one to the diamond A and one to a ruff of hearts by West.

Tomorrow's Problem

(Dealer: South. North-South vulnerable.)

If South bids his two minor suits, West overcalls twice with hearts. North bids his spades twice and South winds up in 3-No Trumps. what heart should West lead?

Uncle Sam's Help Sought By John Barrymore

LOS ANGELES, June 6 (AP)—John Barrymore has asked Uncle Sam to help him adjust matters with his creditors.

In a petition for arrangement of debt under the Federal Bankruptcy Act, the actor asked that federal agents apportion $1,500 a week from his income of $5,000 among persons to whom he says he owes a total of $68,021.

Much of that sum, he said, is owing to lawyers, with fees ranging from $5,000 to $20,000. In addition, his petition recited, he owes $10,000 for the support of his daughter, Diana Blythe Barrymore, and $9,000 to his former wife, Dolores Costello Barrymore Vrunwink.

His living expenses are approximatel $1,000 a week, Barrymore explained.

Republican Convention Official Is Named

PHILADELPHIA, June 6 (AP) — Victor McKenzie, of Chicago, has been named sergeant-at-arms for the Republican National convention here beginning June 24.

His name topped the list of officials who will direct the convention. The list was announced by James L. Jappe, executive director of the committee on arrangements.

Mrs. Andrew Northcott, of West Virginia, was named one of four reading clerks.

Thomas Mann Likes U. S.; Free Of Red Tape

By JOHN SELBY
Associated Press Arts Editor

Prnciceton, N. J.—Life in America seems very attractive to Thomas Mann today (June 6), his sixty-fifth birthday. It seems, too, almost miraculously free of small annoyances—those small checks and counterchecks which even in peacetime wrap Europe in a tangle of red tape.

Thomas Mann

One reason there are so few of these annoyances, Dr. Mann feels, may be because this is a big country in every sense, and this also may be part of the reason for its greatness.

First-Rate Americans

In any case, although the Manns have spent only two winters in America, these have made, he says, "first rate Americans of us."

Mann looks younger than 65. His hair is grizzled, but his skin is firm. The left one of his gray-blue eyes is a little higher than the right; his glasses rest on a longish nose.

Mrs. Mann is the volatile one. She is shorter than her husband, talks faster, and is more eager. She is likely to change chairs while talking, and grows vehement, pushing back her carelessly arranged hair, when the European debacle is mentioned.

And although the Manns are living in a huge house close to the "mansion" class, the atmosphere is entirely that of a lived-in home. There are six Mann children, in their teens or older, and all of them are about at one or another time, bringing life to the huge drawing rooms.

There also is a ninth member of the family, a handsome black poodle named Nikko. When Mann, frequently called the greatest living man of letters, enters a room, Nikko flings himself at him, sometimes knocking the wind out of him with an eager thump in the belly.

U. S. Press 'The Finest'

Dr. and Mrs. Mann have been here such a comparatively short time they notice a number of things about America that we overlook, sometimes. One of these is the American newspaper.

"I think no papers in the world have finer groups of correspondents," he says.

The quality of American university life also impresses the Manns. Princeton reminds Mann of one of the smaller German universities—Jena, or Heidlberg, in the old days. He also has enjoyed his connection with Princeton as lecturer, but it gives him pause at times. This because although he speaks English readily, he does not feel sure enough of himself to lecture in the language without careful preparation.

American food was a little puzzling at first, particularly, Mrs. Mann says, because of our habit of putting sweet things like fruit in our salads—'pears for example," although she pronounced it "peers."

"Then, I thought, why not? Peers are good that way."

Our language seems, at first, very easy, Dr. Mann says, "and then the subtleties appear." But because it is easy at first it has great colonizing power; it is today the universal language, the real Esperanto, he believes.

A Boost For California

The next Mann book to appear in America will be a novel about the Weimar of Goethe's Sixties. It was called "Lotte in Weimar" in the German edition. When it appears here next August it will bear the tiel "The Beloved Returns." It concerns the experience of an old flame of Goethe's who comes back to Weimar when the poet is sixty-seven. This summer, Mann plans to do the last volume of his Joseph series, which will take his elaboration of the Old Testament story up to the death of Jacob.

He does not feel he can write the Joseph book in his big, bookcrusted study in Princeton. He is going to California, and his reason would please the climate bosters.

It's that he thinks the bright, clear air of California is better suited than the New Jersey climate to the incubation of a story of the Holy Land.

PATTERN 9348

Being a "good sport" comes easy to this blithe Marian Martin style. Pattern 9348 is expertly designed to enter into every sporting event with verve. There's a front-pointed, wide girdle to give you a will-o'-the-wisp waistline. The circular two-piece skirt, which may be cut in regulation length or "knee-high" for action, is free-swinging and young. Two big pockets add extra dash; the bodice lines are marvelously soft-cut A smart fashion note is the modified sunback held in place by a round buttoned yoke. When you've had enough sun, the matching or contrasting bolero gives jaunty protection.

Pattern 9348 may be ordered only in misses and women's sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38 and 40. Size 16 requires 3⅛ yards 35 inch fabric; bolero 1⅝ yards contrast.

Send fifteen cents in coins for this Marian Martin pattern. Be sure to write plainly your size, name, address and style number.

Our Marian Martin summer pattern will bring you lovely new warm weather styles for playing, traveling, working — available in easy-to-sew patterns. Marshall Proposes Army Of 400,000 Men

WASHINGTON, June 6 (AP) — General George C. Marshall has proposed that the regular army be enlarged to 400,000 men, an increase which he said he hoped would avoid any necesity of calling the national guard into active service.

The chief of staff told reporters that plans were complete for organizing 335,000 men of a possible augmented army into twelve divisions, two of which would be fully armored, mechanized divisions such as have played a spectacular role in the European war.

Of the remaining troops, many would be assigned to the air corps, Marshall said.

Uncle Sam's Help Sought By John Barrymore

LOS ANGELES, June 6 (AP)—John Barrymore has asked Uncle Sam to help him adjust matters with his creditors.

In a petition for arrangement of debt under the Federal Bankruptcy Act, the actor asked that federal agents apportion $1,500 a week from his income of $5,000 among persons to whom he says he owes a total of $68,021.

Much of that sum, he said, is owing to lawyers, with fees ranging from $5,000 to $20,000. In addition, his petition recited, he owes $10,000 for the support of his daughter, Diana Blythe Barrymore, and $9,000 to his former wife, Dolores Costello Barrymore Vrunwink.

His living expenses are approximatel $1,000 a week, Barrymore explained.

Republican Convention Official Is Named

PHILADELPHIA, June 6 (AP) — Victor McKenzie, of Chicago, has been named sergeant-at-arms for the Republican National convention here beginning June 24.

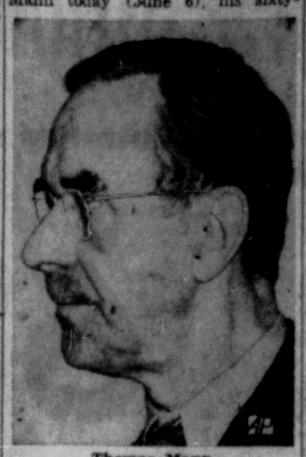

His name topped the list of officials who will direct the convention. The list was announced by James L. Jappe, executive director of the committee on arrangements.

Mrs. Andrew Northcott, of West Virginia, was named one of four reading clerks.

Thomas Mann Likes U. S.; Free Of Red Tape

By JOHN SELBY
Associated Press Arts Editor

Prnceton, N. J.—Life in America seems very attractive to Thomas Mann today (June 6), his sixty-fifth birthday. It seems, too, almost miraculously free of small annoyances—those small checks and counterchecks which even in peacetime wrap Europe in a tangle of red tape.

Thomas Mann

One reason there are so few of these annoyances, Dr. Mann feels, may be because this is a big country in every sense, and this also may be part of the reason for its greatness.

First-Rate Americans

In any case, although the Manns have spent only two winters in America, these have made, he says, "first rate Americans of us."

Mann looks younger than 65. His hair is grizzled, but his skin is firm. The left one of his gray-blue eyes is a little higher than the right; his glasses rest on a longish nose.

Mrs. Mann is the volatile one. She is shorter than her husband, talks faster, and is more eager. She is likely to change chairs while talking, and grows vehement, pushing back her carelessly arranged hair, when the European debacle is mentioned.

And although the Manns are living in a huge house close to the "mansion" class, the atmosphere is entirely that of a lived-in home. There are six Mann children, in their teens or older, and all of them are about at one or another time, bringing life to the huge drawing rooms.

There also is a ninth member of the family, a handsome black poodle named Nikko. When Mann, frequently called the greatest living man of letters, enters a room, Nikko flings himself at him, sometimes knocking the wind out of him with an eager thump in the belly.

U. S. Press 'The Finest'

Dr. and Mrs. Mann have been here such a comparatively short time ,they notice a number of things about America that we overlook, sometimes. One of these is the American newspaper.

"I think no papers in the world have finer groups of correspondents," he says.

The quality of American university life also impresses the Manns. Princeton reminds Mann of one of the smaller German universities—Jena, or Heidlberg, in the old days. He also has enjoyed his connection with Princeton as lecturer, but it gives him pause at times. This because although he speaks English readily, he does not feel sure enough of himself to lecture in the language without careful preparation.

American food was a little puzzling at first, particularly, Mrs. Mann says, because of our habit of putting sweet things like fruit in our salads—"pears for example," although she pronounced it "peers."

"Then, I thought, why not? Peers are good that way."

Our language seems, at first, very easy, Dr. Mann says, "and then the subtleties appear." But because it is easy at first it has great colonizing power; it is today the universal language, the real Esperanto, he believes.

A Boost For California

The next Mann book to appear in America will be a novel about the Weimar of Goethe's Sixties. It was called "Lotte in Weimar" in the German edition. When it appears here next August it will bear the tiel "The Beloved Returns." It concerns the experience of an old flame of Goethe's who comes back to Weimar when the poet is sixty-seven. This summer, Mann plans to do the last volume of his Joseph series, which will take his elaboration of the Old Testament story up to the death of Jacob.

He does not feel he can write the Joseph book in his big, bookcrusted study in Princeton. He is going to California, and his reason would please the climate bosters.

It's that he thinks the bright, clear air of California is better suited than the New Jersey climate to the incubation of a story of the Holy Land.

Tips Are Given To Man Who Has Trouble Sleeping

Physician Says Quit Complaining about Insomnia and Take Nap

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

"I have a great deal of sympathy for you," said my old friend, Dr. Adrian Gibbs, to a patient the other day. "Personal sympathy. There was a time in my life for a while when I couldn't sleep and I honestly do not believe that physical pain is any more torture than lying awake hour after hour in the darkness and stillness with a perfectly blank mind.

"People tell you to get up and read a while and not think about it, but you've already read all day and all evening before going to bed trying to get yourself sleepy. You can't turn on the radio—the cause of common humanity for the rest of the household would prevent that.

"And the worst of it was with me that I needed the rest—I was working hard and you would have thought that the amount of effort I made would exhaust me enough to put me to sleep.

"But there is no rhyme or reason to insomnia. You take a fellow who hasn't got a thing to do—too lazy to get a job—isn't interested in work anyway and doesn't need to refresh himself, and he sleeps like der alta Barbarossa—all night for eight or nine hours and naps in the day time, too.

Gave Up Powders

"I took to sleeping powders, but I gave up. We have some very efficient sleeping medicines now—the various barbiturates—the things whose names end in 'al.' They're much better than the old ones. And I think they're pretty harmless, although there are warnings against them—for anybody with any sense they don't form a habit. I took them for a while and they got me back into the practice of sleep. Then I found when I was going to bed that I would take one just in case. And that's when they began to show their faults—they kept you awake too much! That is the real trouble with the modern sleeping tablets.

"I forgot to take mine one night and I had the most delicious night's rest I had had for a year—so I stopped them, bang off, and never felt any need for them or withdrawal symptoms. The trouble is they keep you wide awake for an hour or two, then they put you to sleep with a bang, and then you wake up in about four or six hours—and I mean, you wake up—with a bang. Without them you add about two hours of nice dozing that is probably the best part of the night's rest.

Wakeful Technique

"With you and your insomnia though I am going to tell you something. I put a kind of detective on your insomnia when I had you in the hospital making those 'studies' and I find that with your insomnia you go to sleep on the job. You really sleep about four hours solid and two hours fitful a night and that's enough for anyone. I read an article by a lady insomniac the other day on 'The technique of lying awake.' She allowed as how it was an inescapable adventure to be allowed to lie awake and we should make the most out of it by trying to remember cities that begin with A.

"Well, you're not very good at that technique. Look at you! You can't be suffering much from your insomnia. You are as fat and smooth as a pink little piglet. Your eyes are as bright, and you are mentally alert.

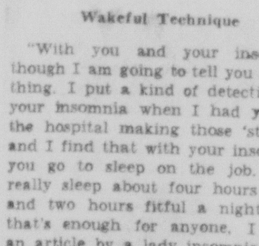

"Insomnia is wakefulness plus worry. Quit complaining about your insomnia. And take a nap every afternoon. Sleep is a habit. The more you get, the more you need."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

H. E. C.: "What do frequent yawning spells accompanied by belching indicate?"

Answer: They indicate that you ought to take some milk of magnesia and go to sleep. That is a serious answer. There is no disease which has these symptoms.

Chosen Friend Lodge No. 35, IOOF, will hold an entertainment and strawberry festival at 9 o'clock this evening in their hall, 12 South Mechanic street.

The Women's Sport Club will meet at 8 o'clock this evening in the Library of the Central Y.M.C.A., to plan a schedule for the month of June as there will only be one meeting during the summer months.

Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Glime, 537 Rose Hill avenue, were hosts to the Kingsley Methodist Epworth League, Wednesday evening at their home at which time plans for a summer program of activities were discussed. Refreshments were served by Mrs. Glime assisted by Miss Madeline Dyche and Mrs. William Dyche.

President Howard Johnston of the drum corps of Henry Hart Post No. 1411 of the Veterans of Foreign Wars has announced that the first of a series of social events will begin this evening with a combination round and square dance at Cresaptown fire hall. There will also be a benefit dance early in the summer.

The Happy Birthday Club will hold its banquet and dance June 12 at the Queen City hotel, it was announced at a meeting of the club Tuesday evening in honor of Mrs. Gertrude Wilkes, 320 Virginia avenue.

A card party will follow the meeting of McKinley Chapter No. 12 of the Order of the Eastern Star at 7:45 o'clock this evening at the Masonic temple, Greene street. Bridge will be played and there will be prizes and refreshments.

Personals

Mrs. Peter Lowery and her daughter, Mrs. James Pitkethly, 103 Washington street, have returned from New York city.

Miss Mary Catherine Parks has gone to her home in Elkins, W. Va., after visiting Miss Marguerite Murray, Greene street.

Lieutenant John R. Boslet, Pittsburgh, chaplain in the United States Navy, is visiting his uncle, Jack Howe at the Fort Cumberland hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. Amos Collins have returned from Washington, D. C., Winchester, Va., and Frederick.

Finley C. Hendrickson, 325 Cumberland street, returned home yesterday from Memorial hospital.

The National Health Survey prepared by the United States Public Health Service in 1936-36 showed that there was fifty-seven per cent more serious illness (disabling for a week or more) among the poorest families than among the richest.

Something You Ate, No Doubt

By HELEN FOLLETT

IF YOUR complexion flares up, goes blotchy and has a tantrum—don't immediately blame the cosmetics you are using. They may not be at fault at all. You've eaten something your tummy doesn't like, and your skin is kicking up a big fuss in sympathy.

When there is the slightest sign of infection, and blotches look ugly, the common sense step is to consult a medical man who specializes in diseases of the skin and scalp. Don't fool around with home remedies, which may aggravate conditions. The average woman looks upon medical attention as the last resort which seems silly when one considers that the fee charged for a visit to a doctor is no more than many a woman pays for a box of face powder, half as much as she spends for a bottle of perfume. Penny wise and pound foolish.

Check Them Early

There are many skin disorders that can be checked if taken in the early stages but which prove stubborn if permitted to get a foothold. Many of them are contagious; other members of the family may become afflicted and infected. Impetigo is in this class, a common trouble among school children. If there is a small blemish that doesn't look like any you have seen before, toddle to the doc and find out all about it.

Stubby fingers, rounded at the ends, should be massaged once a day. Anoint with a heavy cream, begin thumbing at the base, continue along to the nail, press firmly above the nail eave. We won't promise that there will be a change in a hurry but massage has its good points and something can be accomplished if one is faithful and persistent.

The finger nails should be worn fairly long, filed to a neat oval outline, tinted their full length, and the half moon covered with the ruby glow. That design detracts from width.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

CONSIDER THEIR SKILL

WHETHER to double your opponents or sacrifice against them depends on many factors. It it seems like a close question otherwise, your estimate of their skill and accuracy as bidders may often be the deciding element. When an extremely smooth pair gets to a high vulnerable contract and your partner passes a chance to double them, the chances are he thinks they can make the contract. Your job, then, unless you have some unexpectedly well-positioned defensive values, is to measure the cost of a sacrifice and if it is not too much, pay the price.

(Dealer: East. East-West vulnerable.)

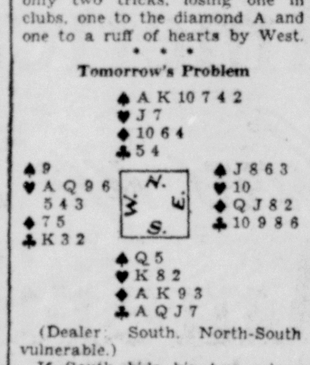

East	South	West	North
1 ♥	Pass	1 ♠	Dbl
2 ♠	3 ♦	4 ♠	Pass
Pass	5 ♣	Dbl	5 ♦
Pass	Pass	5 ♠	Pass
Dbl

South estimated, and quite soundly, that there was a pronounced distributional situation for East and West, also that this was why North did not double the 5-Spade bid, fearing some of his honor cards, on which he based a shaded informative double, would be ruffed. Ordinarily the best kind of suit-playing distribution is that in which the declarer's side has a fine fit in the trump suit and complete misfits of two side suits. That is just what East and West had shown to South.

It was clear to South from the bidding that both vulnerable opponents had good spades, also that East had length in hearts and West in clubs. There could not be many diamonds in either hand. Hence they should be able to make their contract, which they could. His sacrifice therefore saved a number of points, as he played the hand so as to go down only two tricks, losing one in clubs, one to the diamond A and one to a ruff of hearts by West.

(Dealer: South. North-South vulnerable.)

If South bids his two minor suits, West overcalls twice with hearts. North bids his spades twice and South winds up in 3-No Trumps, what heart should West lead?

Uncle Sam's Help Sought By John Barrymore

LOS ANGELES, June 6 (AP)—John Barrymore has asked Uncle Sam to help him adjust matters with his creditors.

In a petition for arrangement of debt under the Federal Bankruptcy Act, the actor asked that federal agents apportion $1,500 a week from his income of $5,000 among persons to whom he says he owes a total of $68,021.

Much of that sum, he said, is owing to lawyers, with fees ranging from $5,000 to $20,000. In addition, his petition recited, he owes $10,000 for the support of his daughter, Diana Blythe Barrymore, and $9,000 to his former wife, Dolores Costello Barrymore Vrunwink.

His living expenses are approximately $1,000 a week, Barrymore explained.

Republican Convention Official Is Named

PHILADELPHIA, June 6 (AP) — Victor McKenzie, of Chicago, has been named sergeant-at-arms for the Republican National convention here beginning June 24.

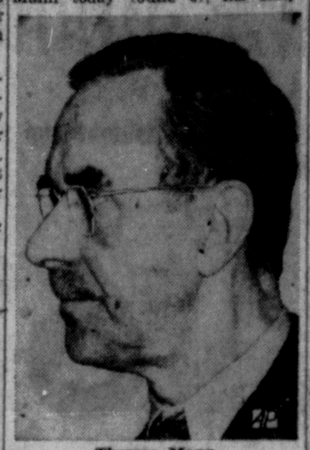

His name topped the list of officials who will direct the convention. The list was announced by James L. Jappe, executive director of the committee on arrangements.

Mrs. Andrew Northcott, of West Virginia, was named one of four reading clerks.

Thomas Mann Likes U. S.; Free Of Red Tape

By JOHN SELBY
Associated Press Arts Editor

Princeton, N. J.—Life in America seems very attractive to Thomas Mann today (June 6), his sixty-fifth birthday. It seems, too, almost miraculously free of small annoyances—those small checks and counterchecks which even in peacetime wrap Europe in a tangle of red tape.

Thomas Mann

One reason there are so few of these annoyances, Dr. Mann feels, may be because this is a big country in every sense, and this also may be part of the reason for its greatness.

First-Rate Americans

In any case, although the Manns have spent only two winters in America, these have made, he says, "first rate Americans of us."

Mann looks younger than 65. His hair is grizzled, but his skin is firm. The left one of his gray-blue eyes is a little higher than the right; his glasses rest on a longish nose.

Mrs. Mann is the volatile one. She is shorter than her husband, talks faster, and is more eager. She is likely to change chairs while talking, and grows vehement, pushing back her carelessly arranged hair, when the European debacle is mentioned.

And although the Manns are living in a huge house close to the "mansion" class, the atmosphere is entirely that of a lived-in home. There are six Mann children, in their teens or older, and all of them are about at one or another time, bringing life to the huge drawing rooms.

There also is a ninth member of the family, a handsome black poodle named Nikko. When Mann, frequently called the greatest living man of letters, enters a room, Nikko flings himself at him, sometimes knocking the wind out of him with an eager thump in the belly.

U. S. Press 'The Finest'

Dr. and Mrs. Mann have been here such a comparatively short time ,they notice a number of things about America that we overlook, sometimes. One of these is the American newspaper.

"I think no papers in the world have finer groups of correspondents," he says.

The quality of American university life also impresses the Manns. Princeton reminds Mann of one of the smaller German universities—Jena, or Heidiberg, in the old days. He also has enjoyed his connection with Princeton as lecturer, but it gives him pause at times. This because although he speaks English readily, he does not feel sure enough of himself to lecture in the language without careful preparation.

American food was a little puzzling at first, particularly, Mrs. Mann says, because of our habit of putting sweet things like fruit in our salads—"pears for example," although she pronounced it "peers."

"Then, I thought, why not? Peers are good that way."

Our language seems, at first, very easy, Dr. Mann says, "and then the subtleties appear." But because it is easy at first it has great colonizing power; it is today the universal language, the real Esperanto, he believes.

A Boost For California

The next Mann book to appear in America will be a novel about the Weimar of Goethe's Sixties. It was called "Lotte in Weimar" in the German edition. When it appears here next August it will bear the tiel "The Beloved Returns." It concerns the experience of an old flame of Goethe's who comes back to Weimar when the poet is sixty-seven. This summer, Mann plans to do the last volume of his Joseph series, which will take his elaboration of the Old Testament story up to the death of Jacob.

He does not feel he can write the Joseph book in his big, bookcrusted study in Princeton. He is going to California, and his reason would please the climate bosters.

It's that he thinks the bright, clear air of California is better suited than the New Jersey climate to the incubation of a story of the Holy Land.

Young Sun-Dress with Bolero

Marian Martin

PATTERN 9348

Being a "good sport" comes easy to this blithe Marian Martin style. Pattern 9348 is expertly designed to enter into every sporting event with verve. There's a front-pointed, wide girdle to give you a will-o'-the-wisp waistline. The circular two-piece skirt, which may be cut in regulation length or "knee-high" for action, is free-swinging and young. Two big pockets add extra dash; the bodice lines are marvelously soft-cut A smart fashion note is the modified sunback held in place by a round buttoned yoke. When you've had enough sun, the matching or contrasting bolero gives jaunty protection.

Pattern 9348 may be ordered only in misses and women's sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38 and 40. Size 16 requires 3¼ yards 35 inch fabric; bolero 1⅛ yards contrast.

Send fifteen cents in coins for this Marian Martin pattern. Be sure to write plainly your size, name, address and style number.

Our Marian Martin summer pattern will bring you lovely new warm weather styles for playing, traveling, working — available in easy-to-sew patterns. A summer summary of fashion by day and night, including a travelogue wardrobe. . .an array of "good sports" . . . cool sheers and cottons. . . lovely bridal and evening wear. Marshall Proposes Army Of 400,000 Men

WASHINGTON, June 6. (AP) — General George C. Marshall has proposed that the regular army be enlarged to 400,000 men, an increase which he said he hoped would avoid any necesity of calling the national guard into active service.

The chief of staff told reporters that plans were complete for organizing 335,000 men of a possible augmented army into twelve divisions, two of which would be fully armored, mechanized divisions such as have played a spectacular role in the European war.

Of the remaining troops, many would be assigned to the air corps, Marshall said.

Pastor Resigns

TIFFIN, O., June 6. (AP) — Dr. Francis R. Casselman, pastor of Trinity Evangelical and Reformed church here nine years, resigned today to become pastor of Christ Evangelical Reformed church in Altoona, Pa.

Norsemen penetrated to Minnesota via Hudson Bay, 130 years before Columbus.

"Our happiness depends on -My job -good health"

A run-down condition imperils my pay envelope . . . some stronger guy may take my place.

"I depend on S.S.S. to solve my problem . . . it is a grand Tonic—Appetizer and Stomachic . . . for improving digestion . . . to build blood health and maintain weight. The reward is more strength from the food we eat . . . even tempers . . . better health and a natural skin glow from within. We feel S.S.S. Tonic is due great credit for much of our happiness and keeping us just normal beings."

You can promote greater happiness by overcoming a run-down condition due to weak blood and poor stomach digestion by taking a course of S.S.S. Tonic. You owe it to yourself to enjoy its benefits. You should note a decided improvement in a short time. In fairness and accuracy, if you suspect an organic trouble, consult your physician. Soon you will enthusiastically say to your friends—"S.S.S. made me feel and look like myself again."

Available in two sizes . . . the larger represents a saving.

Great Britain Looks to Canada If Allies Fail

Would Handle Greatest Mass Exodus since Days of Moses

NEW YORK, June 6 (AP)—If the threat of total warfare against the British Isles forced the evacuation of women and children to empire outposts, such as Canada, the Allies would be prepared to handle the greatest mass exodus since Moses led 2,000,000 men, women and children out of Egypt.

Such a tremendous undertaking would in comparison make the removal of 335,000 Allied troops from Flanders, as perilous and as staggering as it was, appear to be a simple task.

The means of escape for England's non-combatants would be hundreds of rusty tramp freighters and one-time passenger liners now engaged in ferrying troops and supplies to England and France from Colonial possessions, particularly Canada.

These ghost-like craft have formed an almost endless chain between Halifax and England. Their dingy cargo holds have carried millions of dollars worth of American planes, foods and other supplies over 3,000 miles of ocean, daring gale, fog, sleet, snow and the ever-present threat of Nazi U-boat and raider.

If called upon to evacuate women and children, their present duties would continue as most of them now come back partially empty.

A hint that England was considering such an evacuation came when G. H. Shakespeare, undersecretary for Dominions, said he might shortly make a statement on the subject.

Besides their own millions now endangered, England and France have the problem of finding havens for thousands more who have fled from the path of the German army in its marches in Central and Northern Europe.

There was no figure possible for the number of persons who might be evacuated, but at the start of the war approximately 3,000,000 children, nursing mothers and old men were removed from England's cities to rural areas. London alone sent almost 1,500,000 children away but more than half of them returned later.

Acquitted of Murder

BALTIMORE, June 6. (AP)—A criminal court jury has acquitted Robert W. Kirk, 34, of a charge of murder in the fatal shooting of Frederick McDonald, of Wilmington, Del., last April 17.

Kirk testified that McDonald, who had told him he was a pinball machine salesman, was shot when he lunged at Kirk's gun. Kirk said he had given McDonald a ride, then became suspicious of the man, and ordered him to leave the truck.

Proposes Defense Corps For Industries

FORT WORTH, Tex., June 6 (AP)—Universal application of a proposed national industrial defense corps throughout the nation was advocated by Elliott Roosevelt in an address prepared for broadcast.

Roosevelt, son of the president, announced his support of the suggestion by Senator Morris Sheppard, of Texas, that millions of men engaged in key industries be enlisted as a voluntary "home front" to deal with spies, but suggested that the organization could be thrown open to all citizens and be renamed "The National Citizens Defense Corps."

State Police Association Pledges Cooperation with Federal Government

HYATTSVILLE, Md., June 6. (AP)—The Maryland Police association unanimously has pledged itself to cooperation with the federal government in the "suppression and elimination of treasonable and un-American activities."

By a standing vote, some 225 members attending the association's quarterly meeting, adopted a resolution dedicating police officers throughout the state to renewed efforts in "upholding American ideals and in safeguarding the peace and happiness of our people."

Copies of the anti-fifth column resolution were ordered sent to President Roosevelt, J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Federal Bureau of Investigation; presiding officers of the House and Senate, Chairman Dies of the House committee on unAmerican activities, and members of Maryland's congressional delegation.

Judge Walter L. Green, trial magistrate of Hyattsville, addressed the association on need for cooperation among police departments.

Children Evacuated

NEW YORK, June 6. (AP)—The French radio station reports said 117,000 Paris children have been registered for removal from the city, CBS reported.

Manhattan Will Arrive Monday in New York

NEW YORK, June 6. (AP) — The liner Manhattan, carrying 1,914 Americans from Europe, has radioed she would reac New York Monday afternoon instead of Tuesday. The U. S. lines said this was possible because British contraband authorities at Gibraltar allowed her passage without the usual delay for search.

Tips Are Given To Man Who Has Trouble Sleeping

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

"I have a great deal of sympathy for you," said my old friend, Dr. Adrian Gibbs, to a patient the other day. "Personal sympathy. There was a time in my life for a while when I couldn't sleep and I honestly do not believe that physical pain is any more torture than lying awake hour after hour in the darkness and stillness with a perfectly blank mind.

"People tell you to get up and read a while and not think about it, but you've already read all day and all evening before going to bed trying to get yourself sleepy. You can't turn on the radio—the cause of common humanity for the rest of the household would prevent that.

"And the worst of it was with me that I needed the rest—I was working hard and you would have thought that the amount of effort I made would exhaust me enough to put me to sleep.

"But there is no rhyme or reason to insomnia. You take a fellow who hasn't got a thing to do—too lazy to get a job—isn't interested in work anyway and doesn't need to refresh himself, and he sleeps like der alta Barbarossa—all night for eight or nine hours and naps in the day time, too.

Gave Up Powders

"I took to sleeping powders, but I gave up. We have some very efficient sleeping medicines now—the various barbiturates—the things whose names end in 'al.' They're much better than the old ones. And I think they're pretty harmless, although there are warnings against them—for anybody with any sense they don't form a habit. I took them for a while and they got me back into the practice of sleep. Then I found when I was going to bed that I would take one just in case. And that's when they began to show their faults—they kept you awake too much! That is the real trouble with the modern sleeping tablets.

"I forgot to take mine one night and I had the most delicious night's rest I had had for a year—so I stopped them, bang off, and never felt any need for them or withdrawal symptoms. The trouble is they keep you wide awake for an hour or two, then they put you to sleep with a bang, and then you wake up in about four or six hours—and I mean, you wake up—with a bang. Without them you add about two hours of nice dozing that is probably the best part of the night's rest.

Wakeful Technique

"With you and your insomnia though I am going to tell you something. I put a kind of detective on your insomnia when I had you in the hospital making those 'studies' and I find that with your insomnia you go to sleep on the job. You really sleep about four hours solid and two hours fitful a night and that's enough for anyone. I read an article by a lady insomniac the other day on 'The technique of lying awake.' She allowed as how it was an inescapable adventure to be allowed to lie awake and we should make the most out of it by trying to remember cities that begin with A.

"Well, you're not very good at that technique. Look at you! You can't be suffering much from your insomnia. You are as fat and smooth as a pink little piglet. Your eyes are as bright, and you are mentally alert.

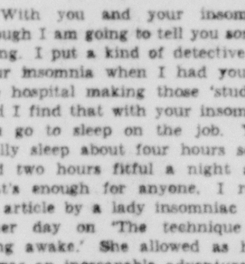

"Insomnia is wakefulness plus worry. Quit complaining about your insomnia. And take a nap every afternoon. Sleep is a habit. The more you get, the more you need."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

H. E. C.: "What do frequent yawning spells accompanied by belching indicate?"

Answer: They indicate that you ought to take some milk of magnesia and go to sleep. That is a serious answer. There is no disease which has these symptoms.

French President Lauds Heroism of British

LONDON, June 6. (AP)—President Albert Lebrun, of France, in a message to King George VI has declared the heroism of the British army, fleet and air force were "the admiration of their French brothers in arms."

In reply to one from the British monarch, the French president said:

" x x x in the struggle now going on on the French front where British and French soldiers of the Northern army will fight once more side-by-side, the solidarity of our two countries and the ideals which they hold in common will be made manifest yet once more."

Australia established an aerial medical service in 1935, and its flying ambulance has traveled 36,500 miles.

Radcliffe Expenses Total $107,241.57

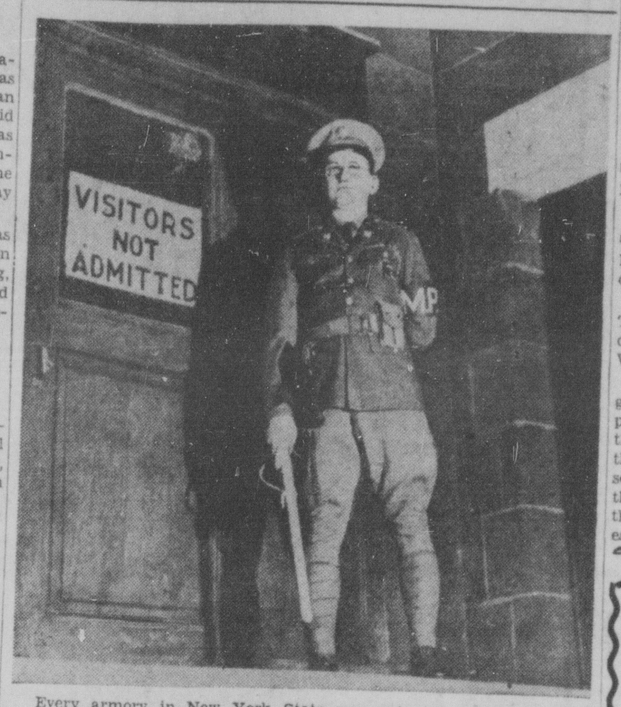

BALTIMORE, June 6. (AP) — Senator George L. Radcliffe (D-Md) has reported in Circuit court an additional $1,915—which he said was paid from his own pocket—as expenses in his successful campaign for renomination in the Democratic senatorial primary May 6.

The sum, which he itemized as spent for advertising, distribution of campaign literature, printing, postage, hotels and restaurants, and traveling expenses, brought his total expenditures to $107,241.51.

68 Graduate at Mt. St. Marys

EMMITSBURG Md., June 6. (AP)—Mt. St. Mary's college graduated sixty-eight students at its one hundred and thirty-second commencement yesterday with Archbishop Michael J. Curley presiding.

The Most Rev. James E. Walsh, superior general of the Maryknoll Missioners, Maryknoll, R. I., addressed the graduates.

Student speakers were Paul J. Taggart of Wilmington, Del., caledictorian, and Ian D. Clement of Woodsocket, R. I. salutatorian.

John H. O.'Neill, bachelor of arts graduate from Bel Air, won three prizes for scholarship. They were in the Bishop Allen Memorial prize for the highest general average in the senior year, the Faculty prize for the highest four-year average, and the Presideit's prize for the highest average maintained throughout the English philosophy course.

Other awards were:

The exercises marked the sixtieth anniversary of the graduation of Rt. Rev. Msgr. John J. Tierney, mean emeritus, and the fiftieth of the Rev. Peter A. Coad, professor of moral theology.

Among the visitors was Attorney General William C. Walsh, a member of the class of 1910.

President Has Appointed Advisory Commission For Emergency

WASHINGTON, June 6. (AP) — President Roosevelt has described as "unnecesary" a plan put forward by Senator Austin (R-Vt) for creation of a five-member, non-partisan authority to assist the chief executive in defense plans.

Mr. Roosevelt expressed his views on the proposal in a letter to Chairman Sheppard (D-Tex) of the Senate military committee, in which he explained that under existing law he already had appointed a non-partisan commission to assist me x x x in connection with the present emergency program."

Jeanette Rankin Seeks G. O. P. Nomination

HELENA, Mont., June 6 (AP) — Jeanette Rankin, first woman ever elected to Congress, has filed for the Republican nomination from the first Montana district and took as her slogan: "Prepare to limit for defense; keep our men out of Europe."

During her previous term in Congress, she voted against American participation in the World War in 1917.

CHAPTER THIRTY

MR. BILL BAILEY was about as thorough miserable as was possible to be, considering that he was a young man in excellent health and prospects.

He was standing on the front porch when he saw a black boy walk up from the rear of the estate leading two beautiful horses, saddled and ready. Jeremy had been waiting inside and he called to Gayle. Presently Bill saw them go out a side door together.

"The big lug! He didn't even help her mount!" Bill watched Jeremy's carelessness as an escort, and knew in his heart it was due to sheer ignorance or inexperience. But Bill was in no mood to be generous about it.

Evidently horseback riding was something the two had planned in advance, Bill realized, for Gayle was correctly attired in riding costume, and so was Jeremy. Bill knew that Gayle would not normally have possessed such clothes of her own. She looked beautiful now. She sat very erect on her horse. The trim little hat she wore was positively saucy; it concealed a negligible amount of her hair, and carefully done curls threatened at any moment to engulf it completely. Her little jacket was a thing of tiny checks. Shirt was white, trousers and boots black. This somewhat somber ensemble was broken not only by her honey-colored hair, but by the extraordinarily high crimson of her cheeks and lips this morning. Bill knew that Gayle seldom used any rouge or lipstick because she didn't need any; he wondered if she had used them today.

As for Jeremy—that wealthy young man was dignity itself. Fortunately, the horses were well-mannered, well trained. Bill learned later that they had been ordered from one of the more expensive stables and had come in a truck to the old Merrifield barn which still stood out rear concealed behind shrubbery and trees. Doubtless there had been saddle horses here in the old days, owned by the Merrifields.

Bill thought that Gayle and Jeremy made a lovely picture—a perfect couple as people say—as they rode slowly off down the beautifully landscaped driveway of The Oaks. Gayle seemed to be particularly happy. She talked and laughed with Jeremy, obviously trying to make her escort relax and enjoy himself, and Bill knew that presently she would succeed. It was a miserable thought for him.

"Christo-pher!" he suddenly growled. "I am a narrow-minded fool!"

He turned and whistled determinedly on a popular song, went inside the mansion, out another door and found the six other girls waiting for him on benches in the east garden. It was a lovely spot out there. He had come to know that he could find them in this beautiful retreat whenever they had run out of something to do and were waiting on him. He heard their talk and laughter before he actually saw them through the climbing roses and the shrubs.

This time they were all on a semi-circular marble bench under a grape arbor. The grape vines were bedecked in spring's bright new leaves—and no leaf is prettier than a grape's.

"I have come out to propose marriage," he began at once. "You are the six prettiest girls in town. If we could somehow evade the law about polygamy so that I—"

"Aren't advertising your conceit, are you?" one of them teased. "How do you know we'd have you?"

"Listen, young woman! I am your boss! Understand? Mr. Merrifield ordered you to take orders from me."

He didn't get by with that. They challenged him instantly, in chorus, then one spoke for all:

"And we haven't had any orders all day. No work. Nothing. Just loafing and playing and getting paid for it—please don't ever wake us up, Bill!"

They had him there, and he knew it. He sat down on another bench facing them, mopped his brow which held no perspiration.

Bill thought that Gayle and Jeremy made a lovely picture.

"Okay, kids," he nodded. "You win. The truth is, I've been distracted. But things aren't going so badly, at that. Just see to it that this mansion doesn't slip back into its role as a mausoleum. Keep it happy. Especially around Jeremy. We'll all have a huddle soon, maybe this afternoon. Meantime, Lola, can you come and talk business a moment with me?"

The others were frankly curious about his picking Lola for a private talk, but he ignored the banter and escorted the dark-eyed girl away. They walked down the shaded gravel path toward the old swimming pool, and after a bit Bill asked her to sit with him under a spreading oak. He looked cautiously around to be sure they had privacy.

"Looking for some wan?" Lola inquired.

"No. Just wanted to be safe. Look, Lola, you and I get along pretty good, don't we? I think you are swell."

"Of course, Beel. We all like you. I like you a lot."

"That's what I wanted to know. You and I have had time enough to get acquainted here. Now I'm going to come straight to the point, Lola—why don't we play ball together, see? In business, I mean."

She did not answer him. She looked at him, confused. Her pretty forehead wrinkled slightly, and her extremely dark eyes were still. Bill was rather close to her and this nearness served to emphasize the deep and somewhat rich quality of her beauty. He took note again of the girl's cheeks—the bones were a bit higher than in Nordic types; a heritage, no doubt, from some distant Indian ancestor—and the normal blush on them was not orange-red, but a strong crimson. Her lips now forming a little of the wonderment, were of the same deep hue. Her hair was so thick that he wanted just to reach and touch the silken ebony of it, noting that its waves formed a perfect complement for the facial color and contour.

Today she wore white. Bill would have described the dress only as "frilly," even though inexpensive simplicity was its keynote. At the waistline was a trim that might have been called a belt. It was crimson, chosen to match her lips, and it was the only color in the garment. Simply tailored, the dress may even have been a size too large for the slender girl, and it could not have cost more than four or five dollars, but it was perfect on Lola. It emphasized, rather than concealed, the perfection of her form; it hinted here and there at curved loveliness, and it revealed the grace and texture of her arms.

Bill had never before been so intimately conscious of Lola. He swallowed, and drew his upper lip tight for a second, hesitating. He hated more than ever to think of Lola's being what she was. He hated the task before him. But he had already made up his mind.

"I mean," he explained in a tone of great confidence, "that you and I can understand each other in every way. I sized you up carefully last night. Now listen—I know what you did on the night of the big party here, last Tuesday night. Understand?"

Lola didn't gasp, or exclaim anything. But she did blush quite unmistakably and the quizzical little furrows in her forehead deepened. That made Bill feel sure. Unconsciously he nodded. He was making progress.

"All right," he resumed. "You and I both know there's plenty of stuff lying right under our fingers all the time. It's just going to waste, really. Acquiring some of it will do nobody any harm, and will set us up for life. It won't even be missed, probably. Will it?"

"Beel, I do not understand."

He smiled as if pitying her, which indeed he was.

"Yes, you do. You needn't be wary any longer, Lola. I'm an old head at this game. Have you, uh, gotten rid of the watch yet? Sold it?"

She looked intently at him now. "Watch, Beel? What watch?"

"There's no use beating about the bush! I tell you I know what I know, Lola. You want to know how? All right—I searched your room. I went there last Saturday evening while you were here, and I read in your own diary about what you had done Tuesday night. It was very foolish of you to write down—"

"Beel! BEEL!"

The girl was incredulous, appalled. She reached to grip his arm.

"Well, didn't you? Didn't you say yourself you took it? A detective was there right after me, Lola, but I kept the diary hidden. It's all between you and me. There's no use putting on an act now, either. We could—hey, Lola! . . . Great Christopher, woman!"

He stopped talking.

Mr. William Bailey, very aggressive and very efficient on the whole, was also a very young man and a very impulsive one. All at once now some deeper granule of common sense inside him told him that he had muffed things.

He recalled the deep beauty in Lola's eyes, the fine sincerity of them. He had tried to throw off that impression a moment ago, but now—

Lola had burst into tears and was sobbing uncontrollably there before him.

Virginia Could Mobilize Quickly

RICHMOND, Va., June 6. (AP)—Virginia's Defense Council heard today that Virginia is ready to beat her ployshares into swords in event of a national emergency.

The council at its organization meeting began a survey of Virginia's ability to organize for defense, in cooperation with the national government, her military and human resources, her industry and agriculture and her transportation facilities.

Highway Commissioner Henry G. Shirley created widespread interest when he asserted his department could mobolize 3,000 trucks, half of them on an hour's notice, to assemble and transport the Virginia national guard and its equipment.

Furthermore, he pointed out, by equipping, arming and armoring these trucks and tractors, a formidable mechanized force could be made available quickly for any duty.

Reconditioning of Idle Vessels Urged

WASHINGTON, June 6. (AP)—Expenditure of $10,000,000 by the Maritime Commission to recondition idle vessels and give the coal industry a chance to compete for 6,000,000 ton a year business in South America has been urged by coal and railroad officials.

They made their proposal to Rear Admiral Emory S. Land of the commission at a conference attended also by Chairman Bland (D-Va) of the House Merchant Marine committee and Representative Kee (D-WVa).

Under the proposal the money would be appropriated by Congress and earmarked for reconditioning of 100 Maritime Commission vessels tied up since the World war. A month ago Congress authorized the commission to put the laid-up fleet back into service.

Pastor Resigns

TIFFIN, O., June 6. (AP) — Dr. Francis R Casselman, pastor of Trinity Evangelical and Reformed church here nine years, resigned today to become pastor of Christ Evangelical Reformed church in Altoona, Pa.

Norsemen penetrated to Minnesota via Hudson Bay, 130 years before Columbus.

"Our happiness depends on -My job -good health"

A run-down condition imperils my pay envelope . . . some stronger guy may take my place.

"I depend on S.S.S. to solve my problem . . . it is a grand Tonic—Appetizer and Stomachic . . . for improving digestion . . . to build blood health and maintain weight. The reward is more strength from the food we eat . . . even tempers . . . better health and a natural skin glow from within. We feel S.S.S. Tonic is due great credit for much of our happiness and keeping us just normal beings."

You can promote greater happiness by overcoming a run-down condition due to weak blood and poor stomach digestion by taking a course of S.S.S. Tonic. You owe it to yourself to enjoy its benefits. You should note a decided improvement in a short time. In fairness and accuracy, if you suspect an organic trouble, consult your physician. Soon you will enthusiastically say to your friends—"S.S.S. made me feel and look like myself again."

Great Britain Looks to Canada If Allies Fail

Would Handle Greatest Mass Exodus since Days of Moses

NEW YORK, June 6 (AP)—If the threat of total warfare against the British Isles forced the evacuation of women and children to empire outposts, such as Canada, the Allies would be prepared to handle the greatest mass exodus since Moses led 2,000,000 men, women and children out of Egypt.

Such a tremendous undertaking would in comparison make the removal of 335,000 Allied troops from Flanders, as perilous and as staggering as it was, appear to be a simple task.

The means of escape for England's non-combatants would be hundreds of rusty tramp freighters and one-time passenger liners now engaged in ferrying troops and supplies to England and France from Colonial possessions, particularly Canada.

These ghost-like craft have formed an almost endless chain between Halifax and England. Their dingy cargo holds have carried millions of dollars worth of American planes, foods and other supplies over 3,000 miles of ocean, daring gale, fog, sleet, snow and the ever-present threat of Nazi U-boat and raider.

If called upon to evacuate women and children, their present duties would continue as most of them now come back partially empty.

A hint that England was considering such an evacuation came when G. H. Shakespeare, undersecretary for Dominions, said he might shortly make a statement on the subject.

Besides their own millions now endangered, England and France have the problem of finding havens for thousands more who have fled from the path of the German army in its marches in Central and Northern Europe.

There was no figure possible for the number of persons who might be evacuated, but at the start of the war approximately 3,000,000 children, nursing mothers and old men were removed from England's cities to rural areas. London alone sent almost 1,500,000 children away but more than half of them returned later.

Acquitted of Murder

BALTIMORE, June 6. (AP)—A criminal court jury has acquitted Robert W. Kirk, 34, of a charge of murder in the fatal shooting of Frederick McDonald, of Wilmington, Del., last April 17.

Kirk testified that McDonald, who had told him he was a pinball machine salesman, was shot when he lunged at Kirk's gun. Kirk said he had given McDonald a ride, then became suspicious of the man, and ordered him to leave the truck.

Proposes Defense Corps For Industries

FORT WORTH, Tex., June 6 (AP)—Universal application of a proposed national industrial defense corps throughout the nation was advocated by Elliott Roosevelt in an address prepared for broadcast.

Roosevelt, son of the president, announced his support of the suggestion by Senator Morris Sheppard, of Texas, that millions of men engaged in key industries be enlisted as a voluntary "home front" to deal with spies, but suggested that the organization could be thrown open to all citizens and be renamed "The National Citizens Defense Corps."

State Police Association Pledges Cooperation with Federal Government

HYATTSVILLE, Md., June 6. (AP)—The Maryland Police association unanimously has pledged itself to cooperation with the federal government in the "suppression and elimination of treasonable and un-American activities."

By a standing vote, some 225 members attending the association's quarterly meeting, adopted a resolution dedicating police officers throughout the state to renewed efforts in "upholding American ideals and in safeguarding the peace and happiness of our people."

Copies of the anti-fifth column resolution were ordered sent to President Roosevelt, J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Federal Bureau of Investigation; presiding officers of the House and Senate, Chairman Dies of the House committee on unAmerican activities, and members of Maryland's congressional delegation.

Judge Walter L. Green, trial magistrate of Hyattsville, addressed the association on need for cooperation among police departments.

Children Evacuated

NEW YORK, June 6. (AP)—The French radio station reports said 117,000 Paris children have been registered for removal from the city, CBS reported.

Manhattan Will Arrive Monday in New York

NEW YORK, June 6. (AP) — The liner Manhattan, carrying 1,914 Americans from Europe, has radioed she would reac New York Monday afternoon instead of Tuesday. The U. S. lines said this was possible because British contraband authorities at Gibraltar allowed her passage without the usual delay for search.

Better To Tell Babies Stories Than To Read

Educator Says Reading Is Gradually Displacing Story Telling

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph. D.

At home and school, story reading is gradually displacing story telling. Time was, when great emphasis was placed on story telling in the training of children's librarian's and teachers of kindergarden and primary children. Twenty-five years ago, story reading was never mentioned in pedagogical literature. Today, reading to babies and young children is given a rapidly growing place both in theory and practice.

So far as I can ascertain, I am in print the first plea in the United States for story reading in preference to story telling, especially in the home. It appeared in my book, "The Learner and His Attitude," 1925. Continually, since then, I have in various books, magazine articles and in this column, as well as from the public platform, been hammering on the same idea. Perhaps I have had a little share in the present trend toward reading to young children.

Either reading or telling stories to the young child stimulates his imagination, cultivates habits of sustained attention (concentration) and affords the youngster a vast deal of knowledge, pleasure and ease of expression. While I have always believed that story-telling has great value, it hardly compares in worth, especially in the home, to story reading.

And Here's Why

Reading to the baby and young child at home is superior to telling stories to him, as a rule, because:

1. The baby will listen at an earlier age to materials read from a page which illustrates this material than to what is told to him. Unawares, he will absorb what he hears as he looks at a picture related to it. Gradually, he will learn to listen without the aid of the picture.

2. At best, only a few babies and children can have stories told to them. Few adults can tell stories well. Few even suppose they can at all. Almost any parent, grandparent, maid, other adult or older child can read to the little tyke. Virtually every baby and young child may be read to.

3. Since any member of the family may read to the baby and young child, see how much wider is the family companionship possible. See how the nervous, weary mother might be relieved when the father or another family member reads to the baby.

4. A story read from a well-selected source has superior language, as a rule, to the story told and the child hears the same words, phrases and sentences over and over exactly the same way. School children who have been read to from early babyhood, at home, excell in oral English.

Ready to Read

Merely tell stories to the baby and young child and he associates the story with you, its source. Read to him, and he connects the story with the book as the origin. You make him long for the time when he can read from the book alone. Most of his school learning will be from reading books.

As we read to the baby and young child, the book which has his favorite stories becomes a kind of a previous personality. He handles it with affectionate care.

I have witnessed a good deal of story telling to young children at school in various parts of the United States. During public forums with kindergarten and primary teachers in places as widely separated as Salt Lake City, Nashville and Detroit, recently, I have learned of story reading at school. Furthermore, I have witnessed some very effective reading by teachers to children, junior and senior high school.

If you would like to receive a list of books for reading to the baby and young child, write me at 235 East Forty-fifth Street, New York City, enclosing a self-addressed envelops with a three-cent stamp on it.

Youth Congress Opposes U. S. Entry in War

WASHINGTON, June 6 (AP) — The American Youth Congress has called an "emergency peace mobilization" for Chicago August 3-4 to "express our determination to keep America out of war."

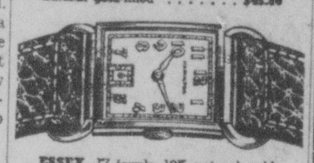

The national cabinet of the Congress said in a statement that "each day the danger of America's involvement in the war becomes more immediate" and called upon "the organizations of labor, the farm groups, the unemployed associations, the peace organizations, the women's leagues, the cooperative societies, the church movements, the youth and student organizations" to participate in the protest.

French President Lauds Heroism of British

LONDON, June 6. (AP)—President Albert Lebrun, of France, in a message to King George VI has declared the heroism of the British army, fleet and air force were "the admiration of their French brothers in arms."

In reply to one from the British monarch, the French president said:

" x x x in the struggle now going on on the French front where British and French soldiers of the Northern army will fight once more side-by-side, the solidarity of our two countries and the ideals which they hold in common will be made manifest yet once more."

Australia established an aerial medical service in 1935, and its flying ambulance has traveled 36,500 miles.

Radcliffe Expenses Total $107,241.57

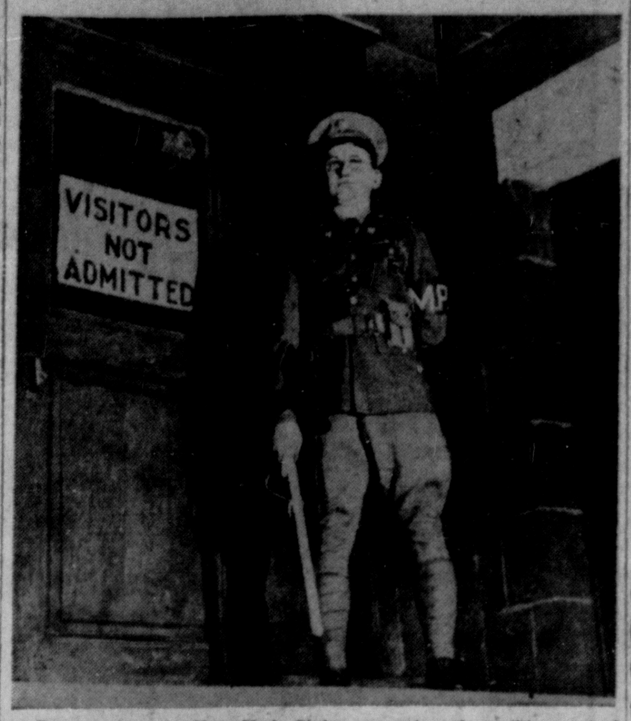

BALTIMORE, June 6. (AP) — Senator George L. Radcliffe (D-Md) has reported in Circuit court an additional $1,915—which he said was paid from his own pocket—as expenses in his successful campaign for renomination in the Democratic senatorial primary May 6.

The sum, which he itemized as spent for advertising, distribution of campaign literature, printing, postage, hotels and restaurants, and traveling expenses, brought his total expenditures to $107,241.51.

68 Graduate at Mt. St. Marys

EMMITSBURG Md., June 6. (AP)—Mt. St. Mary's college graduated sixty-eight students at its one hundred and thirty-second commencement yesterday with Archbishop Michael J. Curley presiding.

The Most Rev. James E. Walsh, superior general of the Maryknoll Missioners, Maryknoll, R. I., addressed the graduates.

Student speakers were Paul J. Taggart of Wilmington, Del., caledictorian, and Ian D. Clement of Woodsocket, R. I. salutatorian.

John H. O'Neill, bachelor of arts graduate from Bel Air, won three prizes for scholarship. They were in the Bishop Allen Memorial prize for the highest general average in the senior year, the Faculty prize for the highest four-year average, and the President's prize for the highest average maintained throughout the English philosophy course.

Other awards were:

The exercises marked the sixtieth anniversary of the graduation of Rt. Rev. Msgr. John J. Tierney, mean emeritus, and the fiftieth of the Rev. Peter A. Coad, professor of moral theology.

Among the visitors was Attorney General William C. Walsh, a member of the class of 1910.

President Has Appointed Advisory Commission For Emergency

WASHINGTON, June 6. (AP) — President Roosevelt has described as "unnecesary" a plan put forward by Senator Austin (R-Vt) for creation of a five-member, non-partisan authority to assist the chief executive in defense plans.

Mr. Roosevelt expressed his views on the proposal in a letter to Chairman Sheppard (D-Tex) of the Senate military committee, in which he explained that under existing law he already had appointed a non-partisan commission to assist me x x x in connection with the present emergency program."

Jeanette Rankin Seeks G. O. P. Nomination

HELENA, Mont., June 6 (AP) — Jeanette Rankin, first woman ever elected to Congress, has filed for the Republican nomination from the first Montana district and took as her slogan: "Prepare to limit for defense; keep our men out of Europe."

During her previous term in Congress, she voted against American participation in the World War in 1917.

TODAY'S GARDENGRAPH

By DEAN HALLIDAY

(Distributed by Central Press Association)

If the tips of the arborvitae evergreens turns whitish or brown in color you can very likely solve the mystery by suspecting the leaf-miner of being the culprit This insect winters over in the "mined" portions of the foliage, and in May emerges as a moth. This moth lays its eggs and after they hatch the larvae enter the foliage by tunneling in between the tissues of the leaves.

The pale portions of the tips of arborvitae, pictured in the accompanying illustration, show the effects of the injury caused by the "mining" operations of the leaf-miner. These injured twig tips may be found throughout all parts of the arborvitae.

One method of control is to cut off and burn the damaged tips. Infestations of the leaf-miner may also be checked by spraying the plants in July with a solution of nicotine and arsenate of lead.

See Ireland in Danger Of Invasion

DUBLIN, June 6 (AP) — James Dillon, deputy leader of the opposition Cosgrave party, declared during a debate on defense measures in the Dail that he believed Ireland was "in immediate danger of invasion," and accused the government of failing to inform the public of the "true sense of peril hanging over the country."

CHAPTER THIRTY

MR. BILL BAILEY was about as thorough miserable as was possible to be, considering that he was a young man in excellent health and prospects.

He was standing on the front porch when he saw a black boy walk up from the rear of the estate leading two beautiful horses, saddled and ready. Jeremy had been waiting inside and he called to Gayle. Presently Bill saw them go out a side door together.

"The big lug! He didn't even help her mount!" Bill watched Jeremy's carelessness as an escort, and knew in his heart it was due to sheer ignorance or inexperience. But Bill was in no mood to be generous about it.

Evidently horseback riding was something the two had planned in advance, Bill realized, for Gayle was correctly attired in riding costume, and so was Jeremy. Bill knew that Gayle would not normally have possessed such clothes of her own. She looked beautiful now. She sat very erect on her horse. The trim little hat she wore was positively saucy; it concealed a negligible amount of her hair, and carefully done curls threatened at any moment to engulf it completely. Her little jacket was a thing of tiny checks. Shirt was white, trousers and boots black. This somewhat somber ensemble was broken not only by her honey-colored hair, but by the extraordinarily high crimson of her cheeks and lips this morning. Bill knew that Gayle seldom used any rouge or lipstick because she didn't need any; he wondered if she had used them today.

As for Jeremy—that wealthy young man was dignity itself. Fortunately, the horses were well-mannered, well trained. Bill learned later that they had been ordered from one of the more expensive stables and had come in a truck to the old Merrifield barn which still stood out rear concealed behind shrubbery and trees. Doubtless there had been saddle horses here in the old days, owned by the Merrifields.

Bill thought that Gayle and Jeremy made a lovely picture—a perfect couple as people say—as they rode slowly off down the beautifully landscaped driveway of The Oaks. Gayle seemed to be particularly happy. She talked and laughed with Jeremy, obviously trying to make her escort relax and enjoy himself, and Bill knew that presently she would succeed. It was a miserable thought for him.

"Christo-pher!" he suddenly growled. "I am a narrow-minded fool!"

He turned and whistled determinedly on a popular song, went inside the mansion, out another door and found the six other girls waiting for him on benches in the east garden. It was a lovely spot out there. He had come to know that he could find them in this beautiful retreat whenever they had run out of something to do and were waiting on him. He heard their talk and laughter before he actually saw them through the climbing roses and the shrubs.

This time they were all on a semi-circular marble bench under a grape arbor. The grape vines were bedecked in spring's bright new leaves—and no leaf is prettier than a grape's.

"I have come out to propose marriage," he began at once. "You are the six prettiest girls in town. If we could somehow evade the law about polygamy so that I—"

"Aren't advertising your conceit, are you?" one of them teased. "How do you know we'd have you?"

"Listen, young woman! I am your boss! Understand? Mr. Merrifield ordered you to take orders from me."

He didn't get by with that. They challenged him instantly, in chorus, then one spoke for all:

"And we haven't had any orders all day. No work. Nothing. Just loafing and playing and getting paid for it—please don't ever wake us up, Bill!"

They had him there, and he knew it. He sat down on another bench facing them, mopped his brow which held no perspiration.

Bill thought that Gayle and Jeremy made a lovely picture.

"Okay, kids," he nodded. "You win. The truth is, I've been distracted. But things aren't going so badly, at that. Just see to it that this mansion doesn't slip back into its role as a mausoleum. Keep it happy. Especially around Jeremy. We'll all have a huddle soon, maybe this afternoon. Meantime, Lola, can you come and talk business a moment with me?"

The others were frankly curious about his picking Lola for a private talk, but he ignored the banter and escorted the dark-eyed girl away. They walked down the shaded gravel path toward the old swimming pool, and after a bit Bill asked her to sit with him under a spreading oak. He looked cautiously around to be sure they had privacy.

"Looking for some wan?" Lola inquired.

"No. Just wanted to be safe. Look, Lola, you and I get along pretty good, don't we? I think you are swell."

"Of course, Beel. We all like you. I like you a lot."

"That's what I wanted to know. You and I have had time enough to get acquainted here. Now I'm going to come straight to the point, Lola—why don't we play ball together, see? In business, I mean."

She did not answer him. She looked at him, confused. Her pretty forehead wrinkled slightly, and her extremely dark eyes were still. Bill was rather close to her and this nearness served to emphasize the deep and somewhat rich quality of her beauty. He took note again of the girl's cheeks—the bones were a bit higher than in Nordic types; a heritage, no doubt, from some distant Indian ancestor—and the normal blush on them was not orange-red, but a strong crimson. Her lips now forming a little of the wonderment, were of the same deep hue. Her hair was so thick that he wanted just to reach and touch the silken ebony of it, noting that its waves formed a perfect complement for the facial color and contour.

Today she wore white. Bill would have described the dress only as "frilly," even though inexpensive simplicity was its keynote. At the waistline was a trim that might have been called a belt. It was crimson, chosen to match her lips, and it was the only color in the garment. Simply tailored, the dress may even have been a size too large for the slender girl, and it could not have cost more than four or five dollars, but it was perfect on Lola. It emphasized, rather than concealed, the perfection of her form; it hinted here and there at curved loveliness, and it revealed the grace and texture of her arms.

Bill had never before been so intimately conscious of Lola. He swallowed, and drew his upper lip tight for a second, hesitating. He hated more than ever to think of Lola's being what she was. He hated the task before him. But he had already made up his mind.

"I mean," he explained in a tone of great confidence, "that you and I can understand each other in every way. I sized you up carefully last night. Now listen—I know what you did on the night of the big party here, last Tuesday night. Understand?"

Lola didn't gasp, or exclaim anything. But she did blush quite unmistakably and the quizzical little furrows in her forehead deepened. That made Bill feel sure. Unconsciously he nodded. He was making progress.

"All right," he resumed. "You and I both know there's plenty of stuff lying right under our fingers all the time. It's just going to waste, really. Acquiring some of it will do nobody any harm, and will set us up for life. It won't even be missed, probably. Will it?"

"Beel, I do not understand."

He smiled as if pitying her, which indeed he was.

"Yes, you do. You needn't be wary any longer, Lola. I'm an old head at this game. Have you, uh, gotten rid of the watch yet? Sold it?"

She looked intently at him now. "Watch, Beel? What watch?"

"There's no use beating about the bush! I tell you I know what I know, Lola. You want to know how? All right—I searched your room. I went there last Saturday evening while you were here, and I read in your own diary about what you had done Tuesday night. It was very foolish of you to write down—"

"Beel! BEEL!"

The girl was incredulous, appalled. She reached to grip his arm.

"Well, didn't you? Didn't you say yourself you took it? A detective was there right after me, Lola, but I kept the diary hidden. It's all between you and me. There's no use putting on an act now, either. We could—hey, Lola! . . . Great Christopher, woman!"

He stopped talking.

Mr. William Bailey, very aggressive and very efficient on the whole, was also a very young man and a very impulsive one. All at once now some deeper granule of common sense inside him told him that he had muffed things.

He recalled the deep beauty in Lola's eyes, the fine sincerity of them. He had tried to throw off that impression a moment ago, but now—

Lola had burst into tears and was sobbing uncontrollably there before him.

Virginia Could Mobilize Quickly

RICHMOND, Va., June 6. (AP)—Virginia's Defense Council heard today that Virginia is ready to beat her ploughshares into swords in event of a national emergency.

The council at its organization meeting began a survey of Virginia's ability to organize for defense, in cooperation with the national government, her military and human resources, her industry and agriculture and her transportation facilities.

Highway Commissioner Henry G. Shirley created widespread interest when he asserted his department could mobolize 3,000 trucks, half of them on an hour's notice, to assemble and transport the Virginia national guard and its equipment.

Furthermore, he pointed out, by equipping, arming and armoring these trucks and tractors, a formidable mechanized force could be made available quickly for any duty.

Reconditioning of Idle Vessels Urged

WASHINGTON, June 6. (AP)—Expenditure of $10,000,000 by the Maritime Commission to recondition idle vessels and give the coal industry a chance to compete for 6,000,000 ton a year business in South America has been urged by coal and railroad officials.

They made their proposal to Rear Admiral Emory S. Land of the commission at a conference attended also by Chairman Bland (D-Va) of the House Merchant Marine committee and Representative Kee (D-WVa).

Under the proposal the money would be appropriated by Congress and earmarked for reconditioning of 100 Maritime Commission vessels tied up since the World war. A month ago Congress authorized the commission to put the laid-up fleet back into service.

Keyser Negro Is Indicted on Criminal Assault Charge

Paul Tross Will Make His Plea This Morning

Indictments Are Returned against Six Other Persons by Jury

KEYSER, W. Va., June 6 — After a special grand jury here this morning returned an indictment against Paul Tross, 41-year-old Keyser negro charged with criminal assault upon Miss Mary Lynn Stebbins, Tross told Judge Robert McV. Drane he was not ready to enter a plea.

Tross will plead tomorrow morning, a court attache said.

The indictment against Tross was returned at 2 o'clock this afternoon. The negro said he had not retained counsel but would get a lawyer to represent him. Some considered it doubtful that any local attorney would accept the case. In that eventuality, a lawyer could be appointed by the court.

Apparently the negro was contemplating entering a not guilty plea.

Earlier this week at a preliminary hearing, Tross pleaded guilty to attacking Miss Stebbins, a Piedmont school teacher, early Sunday morning, in her apartment on north Main street here. The negro was employed by Dr. W. J. Koelz, owner of the building in which the apartment is located.

In his charge to the jury today, Judge Drane warned the jurors against allowing judgment to be influenced by personal feelings.

"You mustn't at any time allow your feelings to run away with your judgment," he said. "Law and order must pursue its course. This court must see that everyone gets a fair and honest trial. It is necessary for the welfare of all x x x that these should not be permitted disrespect of law and order."

Six others were indicted while the grand jury was in session, so that it would not be necessary to hold a July term of court. Those against whom indictments were returned, in addition to Tross, were: Haven Duling, driver of a truck involved in an automobile accident on Allegheny Front mountain near here, in which Ernest Bosley was killed; Wade Kimmell, charged with theft; Clen Arbogast, charged with breaking and entering the Armstrong street restaurant of A. C. Rinehart recently, and Charles M. Tranum, charged with transporting stolen property across a state line.

Graduates Hear Koontz

Arthur B. Koontz, Charleston, president of the West Virginia University board of governors, told eighty-one Potomac State graduates at the college's thirty-seventh annual commencement exercises this morning in the gymnasium that "Education will be the principal factor in returning the world to a true way of life."

"Even the most casual study of history shows that the human race will not for long deprive itself of the advantage to be gained from full and free intercourse of those who have equipped themselves by study to pass along the results of their labors to others," Koontz said.

The program included two numbers by the Potomac Singers, college glee club, under the direction of Prof. Leonard Withers.

Attend Convention

Ten members of Keyser's Business and Professional Women's club will attend the convention tomorrow of the state federation of B&PW clubs at the Greenbrier hotel, White Sulphur Springs.

Those from Keyser who will attend are: Mrs. Verdeen B. Wilson, Mrs. W. H. Schimmell, Mrs. W. A. Featherman, Mrs. H. S. Thompson, Miss Florence Howard, Miss Jeanette McGuffie, Miss Louise Ward, Miss Lucille Wright, Miss Louise Melody and Miss Madeleine Martens.

Ladies Aid Meets At Oldtown

OLDTOWN, June 6 — Members of the Ladies Aid Society of the Oldtown Methodist church heard monthly reports at its meeting Wednesday night.

Following a business session the Young Girls Club entertained with songs and a playlet entitled "Little White Basket." Duets were sung by Vera and Glenda Bradour and by Lenore Rawlings and Fay Nethers. The program was under the direction of Mrs. Charles Dever.

At the close of the entertainment a covered dish supper was served.

The next meeting will be held July 3 and will be a camp fire meeting.

Celebrates Birthday

BUCKHANNON, W. Va., June 6 — Dr. Walter E. Strathers, one of the four Upshur county Civil war veterans still living, celebrated his ninety-second birthday today. He practiced medicine for thirty years before retirement and was superintendent of the Weston State Hospital from 1897 to 1901.

SPEAKS TO SENIORS AT POTOMAC STATE

Arthur B. Koontz

"Education will be the principal factor in returning the world to a true way of life", Arthur B. Koontz, Charleston, president of West Virginia Board of Governors told the graduating class at Potomac State College in Keyser yesterday morning at the annual commencement exercises.

Tucker Farmers Join Association

Others Can Enroll Any Time before the First of July

PARSONS, W. Va., June 6 —Approximately thirty Tucker County farmers have renewed their membership in the Upper Monongahela Valley Association's "Farming for Better Living" project, it was announced yesterday by S. A. Beerbower, association representative after spending the past two days in the county.

Enrollment may be made in the project until July 1 at the office of County 4-H club agent Arnett L. Kidd or with James L. Copeman at project headquarters in the Bethlehem Building, Fairmont, W. Va. Indications are that over 200 farmers in the Valley area will take part in the program this year.

Beerbower stated that he was also trying to interest the business men of the city in the Upper Monongahela Valley Association Good Will tour, July 16-18. The tour will cover the eastern part of West Virginia and part of Virginia, ending the night of July 18 with a banquet at the Imperial Hotel in Thomas. Any business man or professional man in this city or any city in the Valley is cordially invited to make the tour.

Lodge Meets

Initiatory work was conferred on several members of a class for the new Parsons Loyal Order of Moose last evening at 8 o'clock by the degree team of Elkins lodge No. 375 Loyal Order of Moose.

The local lodge is using as its temporary quarters the American Legion Hall. Sometime in the near future they will move to the old Labor Supply Building, formerly occupied by the Half Price Stores. The building is being completely remodeled by the lodge.

Receive Degrees

Four Parsons school teachers received degrees yesterday at the Davis and Elkins college commencement exercises held in the college auditorium. The class of fifty was the largest in the history of the college. Those receiving degrees from here were: Nora E. Funkhouser, Bachelor of Arts, Jean Porter Marsh, Bachelar of Arts, Clara Belle Ball and Marie Lipscomb, Bachelor of Arts in Elementary Education degree.

Brief Mention

In the Industrial Softball League the Barbers defeated the Tannery last evening in a five inning game by a score of 5-3.

Mrs. Nettie Matthews, of Philadelphia is visiting at the home of her sister, Mrs. Edward Jennings.

Mrs. J. Blaine Corrick and J. Kenton Lambert attended the commencement exercises of West Virginia Wesleyan college yesterday at Buchannon, where the latter's brother, Lorren is a graduate.

Civil War Veterans To Convene Monday

FAIRMONT, W. Va., June 6 (AP)—Less than a half dozen enfeebled veterans of the Civil war will answer roll call at the Fifty-ninth annual encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic in Fairmont Monday.

Registration of members of the ladies of the GAR, Woman's Relief Corps, Daughters of Union Veterans and Sons of Veterans, however, will bring the number of visitors to more than 200.

Frostburg Pastor Will Return to China in July

The Rev. Karl H. Beck Accepts Call To Do Missionary Work

FROSTBURG, June 6—The Rev. Karl H. Beck has resigned as pastor of Salem Reformed church, the resignation to be effective at the end of June. He has been called to the foreign service in the Evangelical and Reformed church, in its China Mission where Mr. and Mrs. Beck were missionaries for more than twenty years prior to 1935. Mr. Beck will sail from San Francisco on the S. S. President Pierce, July 19. The family will probably remain in Frostburg through the ensuing year, in order that the children may continue their schooling here.

Marriage Announced

Announcement has been made of the marriage of Kenneth Edward Lint, Meyersdale, Pa., and Miss Virginia Margaret Raley, Finzel, Garrett county, Saturday evening, June 1, at the porsonage of Salem Reformed church by the Rev. Karl H. Beck, pastor. They were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Harry Fate of Salisbury, Pa.

MT. SAVAGE, June 6—"The Henpecked Husband," Mt. Savage high school's senior class play for 1940 will be presented Friday evening at 8:15 o'clock in the school auditorium. The play is a three-act comedy by James C. Parker.

Members of the cast selected and directed by Hamil Kenny are:

John Charles Martin, Miss Mary Lou Pressman, Miss Janet Wilson, Miss Margaret Johnson, Miss Dorothy Rizer, Miss Elvie Bowman, Patrick Purbaugh, Miss Lillian Diggs, Melvin McKenzie and Miss Melissa Murray. They were assisted by two junior players, Howard Blank and Theodore McKenzie.

Music between acts will be furnished by Smith's Luke orchestra.

Married in Baltimore

The wedding of Miss Adelaide Keyes, daughter of Mrs. Thomas Keyes, Baltimore, and Wilbur Logsdon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Logsdon, Mt. Savage, took place at a nuptial mass yesterday morning in St. Thomas' church, Baltimore. The Rev. Ronald Fannon, cousin of the bridegroom, officiated. Among the priests in the sanctuary were the Rt. Rev. Mansgr. John Dowling, pastor of Holy Name church, Washington; the Rev. Fr. McGraw, pastor of St. Thomas' church and the Rev. Fr. Rice. The altar was decorated in white peonies. Hymns were sung during the service by the St. Thomas choir.

The bride wore a floor length gown of cousseline de soie with a long train. Her veil was white net caught with orange blossoms. She carried a white prayerbook from which fell a shower of satin ribbons. The prayerbook had been carried by her mother and grandmother at their weddings. Miss Mary Shillemn, Baltimore, the bridesmaid, was attired in a turquois blue floor length gown and a natural leghorn picture hat trimmed with matching blue velvet ribbons. She carried a large old-fashioned bouquet. Edward Conway, Mt. Savage, was best man and Raymond Fannon and Thomas Keyes were ushers. The men were dressed in white suits. After the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the Stafford hotel for the bridal party, relatives and friends. The table was decorated with candles and cut flowers with a huge wedding cake as the centerpiece. The couple has left on a two weeks trip to New York. They will reside in Mt. Savage.

Class Night Program

The graduates of the Mt. Savage high school gave their class night program last night in the auditorium. John Charles Martin was masteh of ceremonies. A welcoming address was delivered by Miss Amy Turley. Miss Janet Wilson told the favorite sayings of the seniors and Dick Rizer enumerated their favorite haunts. The class history was read by Charles Schelbe and the class prophecy given by Miss Margaret Johnson. Miss Dorothy Rizer read the class will and Miss Mary Lou Pressman related the most embarrassing moments of the class.

The farewell address was given by Miss Elvie Bowman, president of the graduates, and she presented the key to the senior class to Miss Isabelle Adams, president of the juniors.

Others on the program were: Misses Melissa Murray, Dolores Stakem and Viola Abusceivcz, Carl Mulligan, Henry Lashley, George Bridges, and Melvin McKenzie. The program was under the direction of Miss Ruth Finzel.

After the entertainment a business meeting was held by the Parent - Teacher association. Mrs. Thomas Adams presided. The organization decided to postpone the election of officers until next September.

Youth Club Meets

The Catholic Youth organization held a meeting last night in the Knights of Columbus hall. Miss Mary Jo Logsdon presided. It was decided that the club will hold a semi-formal dance Wednesday, June 19, in St. Patrick's hall. Music will be furnished by Rudy Sullican and his Ambassadors. After the business had been concluded a social was held during which games and dancing featured the entertainment.

Personals

Mrs. Nan Conrow, Baltimore, is visiting her sister-in-law, Miss Annie Conroy.

John Cunningham, Florida, and William Cunningham, retired captain of the United States Army, Baltimore, are visiting Charles Cunningham.

JUNE WEEK AT ANNAPOLIS

Helen Barbara Engh, 19, of Irvington, N. Y., presents the colors to Midshipman William C. Croft, of Aiken, S. C., at June Week ceremonies at the United States Naval Academy, Annapolis. Midshipman Croft, whose company was winner of the inter-regimental drills, had the honor of selecting the Sweet Briar sophomore as "Color Girl."

John Byrnes Will Head Red Cross Drive in Lonaconing

LONACONING, June 6 — John Byrnes has been named to head the local Red Cross drive, being conducted here, with a goal of $300. Knitted garments are also sought. The drive is in conjunction with the nationwide campaign of the Red Cross to aid those in need in the war zone in Europe.

This morning the window of the former Crystal confectionery, Main street, in the Miller building, was being used as a display for the knitted garments which have been completed here in the past several weeks.

To further the cause, a candy sale will be conducted Saturday evening in the vacant Stakem building, Main street. Mrs. George Meyers is in charge of the sale.

Coin boxes have been placed in many of the local business places and in all the schools in the town and vicinity. Money donations from organizations have been coming in to the local Red Cross headquarters and will be made known in the next several days, it was announced by the officials.

Donations can be still sent to the Potomac Edison building, Main street, and will be received by Miss Margaret Hepburn.

Theater Party

Attending were: Dayton Beeman, Richard Brooks, Gilbert Duckworth, Billy Fazenbaker, Leon Green, Dewey Grove, Billy Hohing, Norvell Nines, George Robertson, Richard Robertson, Lawrence Rooney, Billy Savage, Don Shaw, Billy Smith, Hugh Speir, Joseph Wilson, Ethel Alexander, Agnes Beeman, Rose Marie Beeman, Norma Lee Bell, Verna Connors, Ursuline Cosgrove, Margaret Galloway, Mary Galloway, Dorothy Gardner, Alice Knatz, Viola McIntosh, Eva Lee Park, Edna Seib, Flora Jane Smith, Dorothy Watkinson, Lillian Williams, Richard Smith, Irvin Nichols and Jean Walters.

Dewey To Speak In Charleston

CHARLESTON, W. Va., June 6 (AP) — Thomas E. Dewey was enroute to Charleston tonight to tell West Virginia Republicans why he should be nominated for president, while party leaders took the first steps in their state election campaign.

The New York district attorney will be present tomorrow while the Republican State Committee organizes, almost certainly with Robert H. C. Kay of Charleston as its chairman for a second time.

Dewey will speak briefly before the committee and at night will deliver a radio address, presumably in a bid for support of the state's sixteen delegates to the June 24 Philadelphia convention.

The subject of Dewey's address was not announced and whether he would make his Charleston visit the occasion for discussing the rapidly changing defense picture in Washington was not determined.

The convention delegation will be here in full numbers to hear the youthful presidential aspirant, since National Committeeman Walter S. Hallanan has called a pre-convention caucus to select a member of the National Resolutions committee.

The fiery campaigner from New York has the pledged support of four members of the delegation but the other twelve have committed themselves to no one yet. While there is no dissention among the delegates, it has been figured they are evenly divided in sentiment between Dewey and Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio.

What they intend to do at their caucus in Philadelphia before the convention remains undetermined.

Weston Girl Is Strawberry Queen

BUCKHANNON, W. Va., June 6 (AP) — Smilingly triumphant, pretty Jean Bailey of Weston, became queen of the fifth annual West Virginia Strawberry Festival today as an estimated throng of 5,000 witnessed the colorful ceremony.

Former Governor John J. Cornwell of Romney, placed the crown on the young high school senior's blonde head, while J. B. McLaughlin, state commissioner of agriculture, similarly coronated Dyce Hinkle of Queens, Upshur county, as the new strawberry king.

The queen and a coterie of seventy-five princesses were chosen in a section-wide beauty contest, while King Dyce acceded to his royal position by reason of his outstanding strawberry crop.

Cornwell, in a brief address, discussed the scenic beauties and fertility of West Virginia, and said a national magazine soon would devote an entire issue to the state's "business, industry, scenic views and people."

Today's program began with a "circus" parade of 700 school children through the streets of the festival town to the college athletic field, where coronation ceremonies were carried out.

Afterward, there was a reception for Queen Jean and her princesses, outdoor field events and an old-fashioned fiddlers' contest. A horse show, pageant and queen's ball concluded the opening-day festivities.

Tomorrow's program will be inaugurated with a grand parade, featuring fifteen bands, floats and various marching units.

The many commercial and strawberry exhibits will be continued tomorrow, with an assortment of contests for growers and canners in the strawberry region embracing Upshur, Lewis, Harrison, Taylor and Barbour counties.

Garrett County Treasurer Is Out on Bond

J. J. Ashby, Jr., Is Charged with Obtaining Money Under False Pretenses

OAKLAND, June 6—A warrant was issued this morning charging Jesse J. Ashby, Jr., treasurer of Garrett county with obtaining $6,099 under false pretenses from the County Commissioners. The information was sworn to by Chester H. Browning, G. Blaine Geissman and Paul M. Friend, commissioners, according to Neil C. Fraley, state's attorney.

There was no further explanation on the information. The warrant was issued through the office of Charles F. White, magistrate, Ashley furnished $2,500 bond pending a hearing. Ashby may ask for a hearing now or waive a hearing which would hold him for action of the September grand jury, Fraley said.

Wooden and Benson, certified public accountants, have been engaged in auditing the accounts of the county for the past several months and the information furnished the commissioners was the basis upon which they proceeded with the warrant for his arrest.

On April 11 the commissioners released to the public a statement of the auditors made February 26, wherein they said they had "reached a point in the completion of the audit where we need an explanation of certain items and transactions."

One of the items was that of double credit for discount on taxes collected, levy 1934, $3,130.22; levy 1935, $2,968.89. Total $6,599.11.

The report said: "On January 20, 1936, both the treasurer's and clerk's ledger accounts showed charges against the 1936 Contingent fund supported by orders No. 2115 and No. 2113 respectively for the above amounts. Later on June 2, 1936, the treasurer received the above credits a second time by Order No. 2808 for $7,830.47 (which also included $1,731.36 for levy 1933) making an access cash allowance to him of $6,099.11."

Other items listed in this first report as needing explanation were collection of taxes on escaped property for years 1935 to 1938 $1,847.08; automobile tax collections not located $640.00, and others.

In a later report of the accountants filed with the Commissioners three weeks ago, there were listed items needing explanation amounting to $21,000 and credits of payments made since the first of the year 1940 allowed amounted to $4,000, leaving a net sum of items to be explanned $17,000 in round figures.

Contract Is Made

The contract transferring the stock of the Mountain Lake Park Association from the Methodist Board of Foreign Missions to an interdenominational religious corporation known as the West Virginia Training School, has now been executed, according to an announcement by Frank E. It's House-cleaning Time

--for YOU--and for us!

At this time of year, you're setting your house in order, tidying up, dusting the dark corners. So are we. Our house is a pretty large one, including hundreds of taverns throughout the state. The overwhelming majority of these taverns are operated respectably by respectable men and women, who make an honest living by serving good beer to their fellow-citizens. A few—a very few—need cleaning up. Help to locate that "dusty corner" by reporting it to this organization. Thank you.

Better To Tell Babies Stories Than To Read

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph. D.

At home and school, story reading is gradually displacing story telling. Time was, when great emphasis was placed on story telling in the training of children's librarian's and teachers of kindergarden and primary children. Twenty-five years ago, story reading was never mentioned in pedagogical literature. Today, reading to babies and young children is given a rapidly growing place both in theory and practice.

So far as I can ascertain, I am in print the first plea in the United States for story reading in preference to story telling, especially in the home. It appeared in my book, "The Learner and His Attitude," 1925. Continually, since then, I have in various books, magazine articles and in this column, as well as from the public platform, been hammering on the same idea. Perhaps I have had a little share in the present trend toward reading to young children.

Either reading or telling stories to the young child stimulates his imagination, cultivates habits of sustained attention (concentration) and affords the youngster a vast deal of knowledge, pleasure and ease of expression. While I have always believed that story-telling has great value, it hardly compares in worth, especially in the home, to story reading.

And Here's Why

Reading to the baby and young child at home is superior to telling stories to him, as a rule, because:

1. The baby will listen at an earlier age to materials read from a page which illustrates this material than to what is told to him. Unawares, he will absorb what he hears as he looks at a picture-related to it. Gradually, he will learn to listen without the aid of the picture.

2. At best, only a few babies and children can have stories told to them. Few adults can tell stories well. Few even suppose they can at all. Almost any parent, grandparent, maid, other adult or older child can read to the little tyke. Virtually every baby and young child may be read to.

3. Since any member of the family may read to the baby and young child, see how much wider is the family companionship possible. See how the nervous, weary mother might be relieved when the father or another family member reads to the baby.

4. A story read from a well-selected source has superior language, as a rule, to the story told and the child hears the same words, phrases and sentences over and over exactly the same way. School children who have been read to from early babyhood, at home, excell in oral English.

Ready to Read

Merely tell stories to the baby and young child and he associates the story with you, its source. Read to him, and he connects the story with the book as the origin. You make him long for the time when he can read from the book alone. Most of his school learning will be from reading books.

As we read to the baby and young child, the book which has his favorite stories becomes a kind of a previous personality. He handles it with affectionate care.

I have witnessed a good deal of story telling to young children at school in various parts of the United States. During public forums with kindergarten and primary teachers in places as widely separated as Salt Lake City, Nashville and Detroit, recently, I have learned of story reading at school. Furthermore, I have witnessed some very effective reading by teachers to children, junior and senior high school.

If you would like to receive a list of books for reading to the baby and young child, write me at 235 East Forty-fifth Street, New York City, enclosing a self-addressed envelop with a three-cent stamp on it.

Youth Congress Opposes U. S. Entry in War

WASHINGTON, June 6 (AP) — The American Youth Congress has called an "emergency peace mobilization" for Chicago August 3-4 to "express our determination to keep America out of war."

The national cabinet of the Congress said in a statement that "each day the danger of America's involvement in the war becomes more immediate" and called upon "the organizations of labor, the farm groups, the unemployed associations, the peace organizations, the women's leagues, the cooperative societies, the church movements, the youth and student organizations" to participate in the protest.

tificial lake of about forty acres, was tentatively sold two years ago to another concern for a sum around $30,000.

The West Virginia Training School is an orphanage and mission corporation and is the parent organization of fifteen different enterprises in religious work. C. A. Maddy is president and Miss Osie England is secretary and superintendent, both of Point Pleasant, W. Va. Charles A. Wetzel will be the local manager and superintendent. He and Mrs. Wetzel will operate Thoburn Inn at the Park this summer.

The organization will retain the name of Mountain Lake Park Association for this particular branch of the work, as all organizations are under separate management. The group now owns and operates faith institutions in several states and the estimated value of its holdings is said to exceed a million dollars. Its workers are unsalaried, according to Mr. Wetzel.

Donations Sought

That Garrett county was not responding to the plea of the American Red Cross for funds for war sufferers was evident from the report of the local treasurer.

Only $70 has been received thus far, according to a report of the county Red Cross treasurer this morning. The National Red Cross headquarters had asked Garrett county to raise $600 and then a few days later asked this amount be doubled, as the need for money for supplies was urgent.

"When people realize the immediate need for helping refugees in Belgium, France, Holland, and other war-torn countries, they will give money and support the Red Cross," Mrs. E. Z. Tower, county chairman, said, adding that she was sure the local contributions would be much increased within a very brief time.

To Elect Officers

Past Chancellors' Night will be observed and election of officers will take place at the regular meeting of the Knights of Pythias Friday evening, in Castle hall.

All past chancellors of the local order will be entitled to vote on grand lodge officers in the state. Local officers will be named to serve for aperiod of six months, beginning July 1. Paud M. Friend is the present chancellor commonded and Baitty Ridder is vice-chancellor.

Refreshments will be served, it was announced. An award of $12,50 which has accumulated over a period of several weeks will be made to one of the members present.

Engineer in Gas Case Is Examined

CLARKSBURG, W. Va., June 6 (AP) — George L. Rhodes, vice president of a New York engineering concern, was cross-examined today concerning his testimony before a Federal Power Commission examiner that it would cost $94,973,856 to reproduce Hope Natural Gas Company properties.

Rhodes' testimony and exhibit were introduced in a hearing on the petition of the cities of Cleveland and Akron, O., for gas rate reductions.

The Hope concern supplies gas to the East Ohio Gas Company, which in turn serves the two Ohio cities.

Examiner Edward B. Marsh reserved until later a ruling on whether exhibits offered yesterday by Percy W. Brown, partner in a Cleveland brokerage firm, should be admitted. The exhibits concern what Brown said would be a fair rate of return for the Hope company.

Church Society Discusses Home At Meeting

Grantsville Missionary Group To Hold Outing in July

GRANTSVILLE, June 6 — Mrs. Anna J. Warnick and Mrs. Lucinda Durst jointly entertained the ladies of the St. Johns Reformed church Missionary Society in the social room of the church last night. Mrs. Byron H. Bender, who presided, gave the Scripture reading and Mrs. A. Claude Stanton offered prayer.

The topic for the evening was "The Home—A Laboratory for Christian Nurture", on which Mrs. Hobart Speicher gave a reading. She also read an article on "Stewardship". Mrs. Benny Epstein continued her discussion of the book, "Homeland Harvest", her subject for the evening being, "Cost of Home Missions".

Mrs. C. O. Bender, Mrs. Paul Kinsinger and Mrs. J. R. Gnagey were appointed a committee to arrange for the Society's annual outing to be held next month. Guests, in addition to the nineteen members present, were Mrs. W. E. Stanton, Mrs. A. Claude Stanton, Mrs. Harry J. Bender and Mrs. Thomas D. Maurer.

Club Meets

The Grantsville Community Club met with Mrs. Orlando J. Glotfelty at her home here yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Delma Arnold, County Music Chairman, Mrs. O. P. Jones, County Peace Chairman, both of Kitzmiller, and Miss Martha Mitchell, County Reading Chairman, Oakland, were present and made short talks. Mrs. C. C. Beachy and Mrs. W. Harold Miller are the only members of the local club who expect to attend the Rural Womens Short Course to be held at College Park the week of June 17. There will be a delegation of about twenty ladies from other clubs over the county however.

The date of July 13 and 14 was set for the annual weekend outing to be held at the Pleasant Valley Recreational Area.

Aid Society Meets

Mrs. Charles Durst was hostess to members of the Mt. Zion Ladies Aid Society, which met at her home near here last night. She was assisted in entertaining by Mrs. Robert Crowe and Mrs. Henry Michael. The meeting was devoted chiefly to a general discussion. Two new members, Mrs. Ralph Mazer and Mrs. Wolford Warne, were also admitted at this time. Refreshments were served during the social hour which followed. Guests, in addition to the twenty-one members present, were Mrs. Harry Hall, Illinois, and the Rev. and Mrs. D. R. Carder.

Mrs. Wilbur Durst will serve as hostess at the next meeting, July 3.

Birthday Party

The meeting of the 4-H Club last evening was turned into a birthday party when Ray Houck appeared with her birthday cake and other refreshments. After a brief business session the meeting was devoted to games and other diversions. Those who helped Ray celebrate her fourteenth birthday anniversary were Mrs. Harvey Gortner, local leader, Mary Louise Paynich, Ruth Klotz, Louise and Margie Gortner, Lois Schaefer, Betty Beachy, Ruth and Mary Houck, Betty and Geraldine Carder and Audrey Speicher. She was also presented with a gift by the club.

Next Wednesday evening the club has planned a hike and weiner roast at the Casselman River Dam.

To Attend Conference

The Rev. and Mrs. J. C. Beahm and Mrs. Beahm's brother, Lloyd Bowser, left this morning for Ocean Grove, N. J., to attend the annual Conference of the Church of the Brethren which is being held there. The Rev. Beahm was appointed a delegate from the Maple Grove Church of the Brethren, near here.

After spending several days at the conference, they expected to go to New York City to visit the New York Worlds fair. They will also visit friends and relatives at Greencastle, Philadelphia and Easton before returning home.

Personals

Miss Christina Winterberg and Mrs. T. Olin Broadwater have returned from Knoxville, Tenn., where they spent several days with Miss Winterberg's nephew and niece, Dr. and Mrs. Samuel Winterberg. Mrs. Winterberg, with her baby daughter, and her mother, Mrs. Charles Andres, accompanied them home and will spend some time here as guests at the Winterberg home. Dr. Winterberg expects to join them here later in the month.

Approximately twenty-five members of the local Volunteer Fire Department went to Meyersdale last night to participate in the Firemens Convention held there. They expect to take part in a similar affair tonight at Berlin, Pa.

Mrs. Harry Hall, Illinois, is spending some time here as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. William Turner at their farm home near here.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Stanton have returned from a brief visit with Mrs. Stanton's brother-in-law and sisters, Dr. and Mrs. H. L. Brinkley, at Washington, D. C. Mrs. Stanton's father, Thomas J. Johnson, who has been in Washington for some time returned home with them.

The Rev. Lester Fike, Astoria, Ill., the Rev. Clarence Fike, Freeport, Ill., and the Rev. and Mrs. Galen Gerder, Pearl City, Ill., stopped here yesterday for a brief visit with their uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Beachy. They were enroute to Ocean Grove, N. J., to attend a Church of the Brethren conference and continued on their way this morning. This was their first visit east since the family moved to Missouri some thirty years ago.

"Gospel of Love" Is Need of World, Dr. Thorn Says

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., June 6 (AP) — Aggressor nations of the world "all seek to achieve the solidarity of humanity, at the expense of civilization if necessary," Dr. Nelson H. Thorn declared tonight, urging application of the "gospel of love" to the problems of all men and nations.

Dr. Thorn, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Clarksburg, delivered the sermon at the Seventy-third annual baccalaureate service for 600 West Virginia university seniors, who will receive their degrees Saturday.

"So today the ideal of Moscow is to create a Communistic state to extend to all nations under the sun with the state ruling for the best interests of the masses," Dr. Thorn said. "It matters not that this must come about through revolution, bloodshed and the twranny of the dictator. In a similar manner 'Der Fuehrer' would establish a global empire x x x. The lesser lights and ideologies as personified by Mussolini and the Japanese emperor have assumed a place in the sun preaching benevolent depotism x x x.

"We pray for a generation to come that will apply the gospel of love with all its implications to the problems of all men and nations. Perhaps that day has come and you are that generation."

TODAY'S GARDENGRAPH

By DEAN HALLIDAY

(Distributed by Central Press Association)

If the tips of the arborvitae evergreens turns whitish or brown in color you can very likely solve the mystery by suspecting the leaf-miner of being the culprit. This insect winters over in the "mined" portions of the foliage, and in May emerges as a moth. This moth lays its eggs and after they hatch the larvae enter the foliage by tunneling in between the tissues of the leaves.

The pale portions of the tips of arborvitae, pictured in the accompanying illustration, show the effects of the injury caused by the "mining" operations of the leaf-miner. These injured twig tips may be found throughout all parts of the arborvitae.

One method of control is to cut off and burn the damaged tips. Infestations of the leaf-miner may also be checked by spraying the plants in July with a solution of nicotine and arsenate of lead.

See Ireland in Danger Of Invasion

DUBLIN, June 6 (AP) — James Dillon, deputy leader of the opposition Cosgrave party, declared during a debate on defense measures in the Dail that he believed Ireland was "in immediate danger of invasion," and accused the government of failing to inform the public of the "true sense of peril hanging over the country."

Vest-Pocket Castle in Spain Is Adaptable to Any Climate

Although designed for semi-tropical climates, this modified Spanish bungalow, because of its compactness, is suitable for any climate.

The architect has made color and joy-of-living an integral part of it. A white stucco finish over concrete block construction is the basis for polychromed rafter-ends and shingle-tile variegated red roof.

The wide opening between the living room and dining room adds a spacious air to the living quarters, and the Mexican-style corner fireplace saves space while it adds charm.

Cost of this home should range from $3,500 to $4,500, without lot, depending on locality and heating arrangements. It may be constructed under Federal supervision through the Federal Home Building Service Plan. Full information is available at local lending agencies or the Federal Home Loan Bank board, Washington, D. C.

$14,300,000 Spent On WPA Projects In Maryland

BALTIMORE, June 6. (AP)—In the last five years, the Works Projects Administration and local sponsors have sent more than $14,300,000 for suppplies, materoals and equipment used on Maryland projects, State WPA Administrator Frank H. Dryden disclosed today.

Items included cement, clay products, concrete products, crushed stone, sand, gravel, cast iron pipe and fittings, iron and steel products, lumber, electrical equipment, explosives, paints, petroleums, coal and coke, office equipment and rubber products.

Also included in the expenditures, of which $7,200,000 represented federal funds and $7,100,000 funds spent by sponsors of WPA projects, were rentals for motor vehicles, teams and wagons and office space. Virtually every county in the state benefitted, Dryden said.

All of the materials bought with federal funds were obtained through the U. S. Treasury Procurement division through competitive bids and schedules used in all federal purchasing, he continued.

He noted that ot was the policy of the Procurement division to seek bids from firms in the area in which the projects were in operation, enabling local dealers to benefit directly.

Crossed Cables Blamed for Crash Of Bombing Plane

SANTA MONICA, Calif., June 6. (AP)—Crossed control cables that escaped many inspections were blamed today for the crash of a Douglas navy transport plane which killed its crew of four last Saturday.

Agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation declined to say whether they were inquiring into possible sabotage in the Douglas Aircraft Factory, but Maj. Carl A. Cover, vice-president and general manager of Douglas, said "investigations will be continued."

Officials of the air safety board of the Civil Aeronautics Authority, who participated with Douglas engineers in the probe, also declined comment.

A statement issued by Major Cover said that the crossed cables "interfered with the pilot's ability to properly control the airplane after the takeoff."

"In this conclusion we are joined by government experts and officials assigned to the investigation," he added. "To date no evidence has come to light to account for the condition resulting in the accident.

Keyser Negro Is Indicted on Criminal Assault Charge

Paul Tross Will Make His Plea This Morning

Indictments Are Returned against Six Other Persons by Jury

KEYSER, W. Va., June 6 — After a special grand jury here this morning returned an indictment against Paul Tross, 41-year-old Keyser negro charged with criminal assault upon Miss Mary Lynn Stebbins, Tross told Judge Robert McV. Drane he was not ready to enter a plea.

Tross will plead tomorrow morning, a court attache said.

The indictment against Tross was returned at 2 o'clock this afternoon. The negro said he had not retained counsel but would get a lawyer to represent him. Some considered it doubtful that any local attorney would accept the case. In that eventuality, a lawyer could be appointed by the court.

Apparently the negro was contemplating entering a not guilty plea.

Earlier this week at a preliminary hearing, Tross pleaded guilty to attacking Miss Stebbins, a Piedmont school teacher, early Sunday morning, in her apartment on north Main street here. The negro was employed by Dr. W. J. Koelz, owner of the building in which the apartment is located.

In his charge to the jury today, Judge Drane warned the jurors against allowing judgment to be influenced by personal feelings.

"You mustn't at any time allow your feelings to run away with your judgment," he said. "Law and order must pursue its course. This court must see that everyone gets a fair and honest trial. It is necessary for the welfare of all x x x that these should not be permitted disrespect of law and order."

Six others were indicted while the grand jury was in session, so that it would not be necessary to hold a July term of court. Those against whom indictments were returned, in addition to Tross, were: Haven Duling, driver of a truck involved in an automobile accident on Allegheny Front mountain near here, in which Ernest Bosley was killed; Wade Kimmell, charged with theft; Clen Arbogast, charged with breaking and entering the Armstrong street restaurant of A. C. Rinehart recently, and Charles M. Tranum, charged with transporting stolen property across a state line.

Graduates Hear Koontz

Arthur B. Koontz, Charleston president of the West Virginia University board of governors, told eighty-one Potomac State graduates at the college's thirty-seventh annual commencement exercises this morning in the gymnasium that "Education will be the principal factor in returning the world to a true way of life."

"Even the most casual study of history shows that the human race will not for long deprive itself of the advantage to be gained from full and free intercourse of those who have equipped themselves by study to pass along the results of their labors to others," Koontz said.

The program included two numbers by the Potomac Singers, college glee club, under the direction of Prof. Leonard Withers.

Married in Baltimore

The wedding of Miss Adelaide Keyes, daughter of Mrs. Thomas Keyes, Baltimore, and Wilbur Logsdon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Logsdon, Mt. Savage, took place at a nuptial mass yesterday morning in St. Thomas' church, Baltimore. The Rev. Ronald Fannon, cousin of the bridegroom, officiated. Among the priests in the sanctuary were the Rt. Rev. Mansgr. John Dowling, pastor of Holy Name church, Washington; the Rev. Fr. McGraw, pastor of St. Thomas' church and the Rev. Fr. Rice. The altar was decorated in white peonies. Hymns were sung during the service by the St. Thomas choir.

The bride wore a floor length gown of cousseline de soie with a long train. Her veil was white net caught with orange blossoms. She carried a white prayerbook from which fell a shower of satin ribbons. The prayerbook had been carried by her mother and grandmother at their weddings. Miss Mary Shillemn, Baltimore, the bridesmaid, was attired in a turquois blue floor length gown and a natural leghorn picture hat trimmed with matching blue velvet ribbons. She carried a large old-fashioned bouquet. Edward Conway, Mt. Savage, was best man and Raymond Fannon and Thomas Keyes were ushers. The men were dressed in white suits. After the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the Stafford hotel for the bridal party, relatives and friends. The table was decorated with candles and cut flowers with a huge wedding cake as the centerpiece. The couple has left on a two weeks trip to New York. They will reside in Mt. Savage.

Dewey To Speak In Charleston

CHARLESTON, W. Va., June 6 (AP) — Thomas E. Dewey was enroute to Charleston tonight to tell West Virginia Republicans why he should be nominated for president, while party leaders took the first steps in their state election campaign.

The New York district attorney will be present tomorrow while the Republican State Committee organizes, almost certainly with Robert H. C. Kay of Charleston as its chairman for a second time.

Dewey will speak briefly before the committee and at night will deliver a radio address, presumably in a bid for support of the state's sixteen delegates to the June 24 Philadelphia convention.

The subject of Dewey's address was not announced and whether he would make his Charleston visit the occasion for discussing the rapidly changing defense picture in Washington was not determined.

The convention delegation will be here in full numbers to hear the youthful presidential aspirant, since National Committeeman Walter S. Hallanan has called a pre-convention caucus to select a member of the National Resolutions committee.

The fiery campaigner from New York has the pledged support of four members of the delegation but the other twelve have committed themselves to no one yet. While there is no dissention among the delegates, it has been figured they are evenly divided in sentiment between Dewey and Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio.

What they intend to do at their caucus in Philadelphia before the convention remains undetermined.

Weston Girl Is Strawberry Queen

BUCKHANNON, W. Va., June 6 (AP) — Smilingly triumphant, pretty Jean Bailey of Weston, became queen of the fifth annual West Virginia Strawberry Festival today as an estimated throng of 5,000 witnessed the colorful ceremony.

Former Governor John J. Cornwell of Romney, placed the crown on the young high school senior's blonde head, while J. B. McLaughlin, state commissioner of agriculture, similarly coronated Dyce Hinkle of Queens, Upshur county, as the new strawberry king.

The queen and a coterie of seventy-five princesses were chosen in a section-wide beauty contest, while King Dyce acceded to his royal position by reason of his outstanding strawberry crop.

Cornwell, in a brief address, discussed the scenic beauties and fertility of West Virginia, and said a national magazine soon would devote an entire issue to the state's "business, industry, scenic views and people."

Today's program began with a "circus" parade of 700 school children through the streets of the festival town to the college athletic field, where coronation ceremonies were carried out.

Afterward, there was a reception for Queen Jean and her princesses, outdoor field events and an old-fashioned fiddlers' contest. A horse show, pageant and queen's ball concluded the opening-day festivities.

Tomorrow's program will be inaugurated with a grand parade, featuring fifteen bands, floats and various marching units.

The many commercial and strawberry exhibits will be continued tomorrow, with an assortment of contests for growers and canners in the strawberry region embracing Upshur, Lewis, Harrison, Taylor and Barbour counties.

Garrett County Treasurer Is Out on Bond

J. J. Ashby, Jr., Is Charged with Obtaining Money Under False Pretenses

OAKLAND, June 6—A warrant was issued this morning charging Jesse J. Ashby, Jr., treasurer of Garrett county with obtaining $6,099 under false pretenses from the County Commissioners. The information was sworn to by Chester H. Browning, G. Blaine Geissman and Paul M. Friend, commissioners, according to Neil C. Fraley, state's attorney.

There was no further explanation on the information. The warrant was issued through the office of Charles F. White, magistrate. Ashley furnished $2,500 bond pending a hearing. Ashby may ask for a hearing now or waive a hearing which would hold him for action of the September grand jury, Fraley said.

Wooden and Benson, certified public accountants, have been engaged in auditing the accounts of the county for the past several months and the information furnished the commissiners was the basis upon which they proceeded with the warrant for his arrest.

On April 11 the commissioners released to the public a statement of the auditors made February 26, wherein they said they had "reached a point in the completion of the audit where we need an explanation of certain items and transactions."

One of the items was that of double credit for discount on taxes collected, levy 1934, $3,130.22; levy 1935, $2,968.89. Total $6,599.11.

The report said: "On January 20, 1936, both the treasurer's and clerk's ledger accounts showed charges against the 1936 Contingent fund supported by orders No. 2115 and No. 2113 respectively for the above amounts. Later on June 2, 1936, the treasurer received the above credits a second time by Order No. 2808 for $7,830.47 (which also included $1,731.36 for levy 1933) making an access cash allowance to him of $6,099.11."

Other items listed in this first report as needing explanation were collection of taxes on escaped property for years 1935 to 1938 $1,847.08; automobile tax collections not located $640.00, and others.

In a later report of the accountants filed with the Commissioners three weeks ago, there were listed items needing explanation amounting to $21,000 and credits of payments made since the first of the year 1940 allowed amounted to $4,000, leaving a net sum of items to be explanned $17,000 in round figures.

Contract Is Made

The contract transferring the stock of the Mountain Lake Park Association from the Methodist Board of Foreign Missions to an interdenominational religious corporation known as the West Virginia Training School, has now been executed, according to an announcement by Frank E. It's House-cleaning Time

--for YOU--and for us!

At this time of year, you're setting your house in order, tidying up, dusting the dark corners. So are we. Our house is a pretty large one, including hundreds of taverns throughout the state. The overwhelming majority of these taverns are operated respectably by respectable men and women, who make an honest living by serving good beer to their fellow-citizens. A few—a very few—need cleaning up. Help to locate that "dusty corner" by reporting it to this organization. Thank you.

Old-Time Parties Aid Cupid More Than Rush Stuff

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX, Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage — Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

High-pressure methods in courtship, as well as high-pressure salesmanship in business, are sometimes doomed to failure. So much effort is expended in producing the result that a fear complex often ensues.

I've had a letter from a group of girls who tell me, with a dash of humor, that while they entertain strictly honorable intentions towards certain young men, they find themselves just about where they were when the snow began to fall last year.

They've rushed about in automobiles at sixty miles an hour. They've danced, tapped, swung. The pace had been so hectic that the young men haven't had time to think about anything that suggested domesticity. They were always rushing somewhere, then rushing to go somewhere else. No one ever seemed to spend a quiet evening at home.

Return Suggested

Then the mother of one of these girls, wise in her generation, suggested a return to less violent methods of companionship. They harked back not only to her day, but to her mother's day. The speeding youngsters thought these old-fashioned parties were just too quaint for anything—but it seems they are producing results. Among these antiquated diversions was the box social and apron and necktie party.

The box social as you know, or if you've ever read Edna Ferber's "So Big", gives a girl a chance to show what a good cook she is in contriving the "eats" for her box. Boxes are auctioned off for a worthy cause—milk fund for underprivileged children, for instance—and the young man who bids in a certain girl's box has the privilege of eating supper with her. Boxes revealing a golden-brown fried chicken, tomato surprise, and good, dependable homemade cake are wonderful for turning a young man's thoughts to love in a cottage.

On His Knees

The tie-and-apron party probably sent grandpa on his knees—that's the way they used to propose in his day—even before he realized it. Again the worthy cause was sought, and the girls made the prettiest and most feminine aprons. These were auctioned, and bid in by the admiring swains. The next move in the game was to find the neckties that matched the girls' aprons. The girls made the neckties too — the whole charming scheme just reeked with suggestions of delightful domesticity.

Box socials must be coming back because only the other day, at Mrs. Roosevelt's White House Conference, I heard Mrs. Florence Kerr, chairman of the Woman's Division, W. P. A., tell that in the thousands of dinners held all over the country to open W.P.A. week, the box social was a prime favorite.

Picnic days are here again. If my young friends would like to try out some of these old-fashioned parties so antiquated that they seem positively new, I'll be very glad to send them a party bulletin, if they'll write me, enclosing a self-addressed three-cent stamped envelope.

Needs Sense of Responsibility

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My daughter, around whom my entire life has revolved for the last twenty-two years, has made a very painful discovery about a mistake in my earl life. Her father and I were not married. We could not be, as he had a wife and family. I did everything for my little daughter, and refused to marry a good man because I felt it might make a difference in her life.

I never told her that she was an illegitimate child, because I felt that in giving up my entire life to her I had atoned for any mistake I made when I was 18 years of age. She got these facts from a relative of mine, who has been cruel and unfriendly to me always.

My daughter has a fine position, making over two thousand dollars a year, but she will not see me or help me, now that I am ill and temporarily out of work. I've never felt guilty about this girl, because she has always been my first consideration in life. But I do not know how to face this estrangement, her refusal to grant me a little aid until I am better and am able to get on my feet again.

UNHAPPY MOTHER.

It would be well if this daughter of yours would stop and think! Many girls in your position have left their children, born out of wedlock, in doorways or on the streets. You accepted your maternity magnificently and much is forgiven you because you loved much.

This revelation about her birth has been too much for her for the moment, but surely she'll remember all that you have done for her, and love you again as she once did. If she does not have an awakening as to her responsibility and love for you, she is an unworthy daughter. But surely she'll realize how fine you've been, and I hope a reconciliation has been accomplished by this time.

Shall He Send Flowers?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

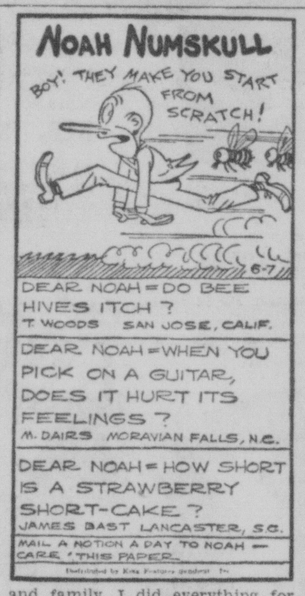

I don't know her very well, but that doesn't prevent me from loving her from afar. She is graduating in a little while, and I want to send her some flowers. Would it be all right? Or would I seem presumptuous? She hardly knows of my existence, and still, every waking moment, I am aware of her.

Potters' Head Dies

EAST LIVERPOOL, O., June 6 (AP)—James McGowan, 60, former vice-president and national organizer for the National Brotherhood of Operative Potters, died yesterday.

Hair is popularly thought to be a living tissue. Actually beyond the follicle, it, like fingernails, is a dead, horny substance. It stays on the head for about two to four years, and becomes brittle and dull without proper care.

tificial lake of about forty acres, was tentatively sold two years ago to another concern for a sum around $30,000.

The West Virginia Training School is an orphanage and mission corporation and is the parent organization of fifteen different enterprises in religious work. C. A. Maddy is president and Miss Osie England is secretary and superintendent, both of Point Pleasant, W. Va. Charles A. Wetzel will be the local manager and superintendent. He and Mrs. Wetzel will operate Thoburn Inn at the Park this summer.

The organization will retain the name of Mountain Lake Park Association for this particular branch of the work, as all organizations are under separate management. The group now owns and operates faith institutions in several states and the estimated value of its holdings is said to exceed a million dollars. Its workers are unsalaried, according to Mr. Wetzel.

Donations Sought

That Garrett county was not responding to the plea of the American Red Cross for funds for war sufferers was evident from the report of the local treasurer.

Only $70 has been received thus far, according to a report of the county Red Cross treasurer this morning. The National Red Cross headquarters had asked Garrett county to raise $600 and then a few days later asked this amount be doubled, as the need for money for supplies was urgent.

"When people realize the immediate need for helping refugees in Belgium, France, Holland, and other war-torn countries, they will give money and support the Red Cross," Mrs. E. Z. Tower, county chairman, said, adding that she was sure the local contributions would be much increased within a very brief time.

To Elect Officers

Past Chancellors' Night will be observed and election of officers will take place at the regular meeting of the Knights of Pythias Friday evening, in Castle hall.

Engineer in Gas Case Is Examined

CLARKSBURG, W. Va., June 6 (AP) — George L. Rhodes, vice president of a New York engineering concern, was cross-examined today concerning his testimony before a Federal Power Commission examiner that it would cost $94,973,856 to reproduce Hope Natural Gas Company properties.

Rhodes' testimony and exhibit were introduced in a hearing on the petition of the cities of Cleveland and Akron, O., for gas rate reductions.

The Hope concern supplies gas to the East Ohio Gas Company, which in turn serves the two Ohio cities.

Examiner Edward B. Marsh reserved until later a ruling on whether exhibits offered yesterday by Percy W. Brown, partner in a Cleveland brokerage firm, should be admitted. The exhibits concern what Brown said would be a fair rate of return for the Hope company.

Church Society Discusses Home At Meeting

Grantsville Missionary Group To Hold Outing in July

GRANTSVILLE, June 6 — Mrs. Anna J. Warnick and Mrs. Lucinda Durst jointly entertained the ladies of the St. Johns Reformed church Missionary Society in the social room of the church last night. Mrs. Byron H. Bender, who presided, gave the Scripture reading and Mrs. A. Claude Stanton offered prayer.

The topic for the evening was "The Home—A Laboratory for Christian Nurture", on which Mrs. Hobart Speicher gave a reading. She also read an article on "Stewardship". "Gospel of Love" Is Need of World, Dr. Thorn Says

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., June 6 (AP) — Aggressor nations of the world "all seek to achieve the solidarity of humanity, at the expense of civilization if necessary," Dr. Nelson H. Thorn declared tonight, urging application of the "gospel of love" to the problems of all men and nations.

Dr. Thorn, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Clarksburg, delivered the sermon at the Seventy-third annual baccalaureate services for 600 West Virginia university seniors, who will receive their degrees Saturday.

"So today the ideal of Moscow is to create a Communistic state to extend to all nations under the sun with the state ruling for the best interests of the masses," Dr. Thorn said. "It matters not that this must come about through revolution, bloodshed and the twranny of the dictator. In a similar manner 'Der Fuehrer' would establish a global empire x x x. The lesser lights and ideologies as personified by Mussolini and the Japanese emperor have assumed a place in the sun preaching benevolent depotism x x x.

"We pray for a generation to come that will apply the gospel of love with all its implications to the problems of all men and nations. Perhaps that day has come and you are that generation."

Reds Playing To Many Customers

CINCINNATI, June 6. (AP)—Warren Giles' white collar was wilted and wet on the hottest day of the year today, but the boss-man of Cincinnati's Reds scanned home attendance figures, recollected games played in near-freezing weather and exclaimed:

"This is wonderful! And I mean the heat just as much as the gate-record."

In twenty-two home contests, his records showed, the national league champions played to 243,231 cash customers, plus 35,052 of the fair sex who attended four ladies' day games.

The total, Giles conceded, was "about 25,000 less than this time last year," but, said he:

"Think of the days up to a week ago when the boys really should have played in their red flannels. One day it was thirty-six degrees!"

The whole picture, commented the club's vice president and general manager, is a swell argument against a suggestion heard this spring that major leagues delay their season-opening until May 1.

"We've had five postponements at home because of weather and six more on the road," he said. "Dayton, (in the mid-Atlantic league) just fifty miles north, has had a total of twelve. That loop started its season in May."

The Crosley field schedule includes six more night games and eight Sunday games — the latter mostly double headers.

If last year's experience means anything, they should average between 20,000 and 25,000 attendance.

P. S.—Remember, it was only two years ago that Giles offered Manager Bill McKechnie a $5,000 bonus if he brought in 450,000 cash customers through the turnstiles. He got it in mid-season!

Hood College Has "Moving Up" Day

FREDERICK, Md., June 6 (AP) — Commencement activities at Hood College opened tonight with "step sings" at Alumnae hall followed by the traditional "moving up" exercises at the final service in the chapel.

At the "moving up" exercises, members of the Senior class in caps and gowns marched to the rear of the chapel, surrendering their places of priority to the Juniors, who will be the incoming Senior class next fall.

A brief address of welcome was given by President Henry I Stahr. Miss Josephine Hessinger of Reading, Pa., retiring Senior class president, presented the Senior cap and gown, Hood ring and class president's ring to Miss Natalie Townsend of Jersey City, N. J., who will be president of the new Senior class. Commencement will be Monday.

Sailor Killed in Freight Train Wreck

CONNELLSVILLE, Pa., June 6 (AP)—One man, identified tentatively as a sailor in the U. S. navy, was killed and nine others hurt tonight when a Pittsburgh and West Virginia freight left the rails and tumbled over a steep embankment near Banning, Pa., twelve miles northwest of here.

The dead man was identified by social security card as William J. Doran, 40, of Lawrenceville, Mass., believed to have been riding on a freight car from Toledo to Baltimore.

The injured included Fireman J. A. Stafferton, whose skull was fractured, engineer S. B. Moser, Conductor D. O. Nolver and Brakeman Edward Toler, all of Pittsburgh, and two riders, Walter Hankins, 26, Connellsville and Theodore Poedh, 26, Duncannon, Pa.

Names of three of those hurt were not immediately known.

Nine cars loaded with steel, grain and other finished products were described by state police as being "demolished". The officers said investigators told them they believed a run buckle in the rail caused the accident.

The engineer and fireman escaped death by leaping from their cab.

Many Seek Place On State Payroll

BALTIMORE, June 6. (AP)—Headed by some 240 would-be office boys, a small army of job-hunters will converge on Baltimore's eastern high school Saturday to take civil service examinations for seventeen state jobs.

State employment commissioner Harry C. Jones said a total of 1,138 applications had been filed for the various positions, most of which are open to residents of all sections of the state. Three classifications are limited to county residents.

Commissioner Jones emphasized that no one would be permitted to take an examination unless his application already was on file in the commissioner's office.

Running the office-boy applicants a close second were 229 persons seeking appointments as laboratory helpers. One hundred and seventy-three will take exams for jobs as junior social workers, 128 for license inspectors, and 101 for gasoline tax investigators.

Prince Wilhelm Killed

BERLIN, June 6 (AP) — Prince Friedrich Wilhelm of Schleswig-Holstein-Glucksburg was killed in action in the west, an obituary notice disclosed today. The prince, forty years old, was a reserve officer in a calvary regiment.

DOWNED BY FRENCH BULLETS

This view of a German plane shot down on French soil during a raid speaks well for the marksmanship of the French gunners . The Allies claim they are bringing down three Nazi planes for one.

Airmail Service May Be Extended

WASHINGTON, June 6 (AP) — Extension of pick-up airmail service to all parts of the United States and employment of army and navy reserves as pilots, to provide an ever available reservoir of fliers, was proposed to the army today.

The suggestion was made to Louis A. Johnson, assistant secretary of war and Major General H. H. Arnold, chief of the army air corps, by Representative Edmiston (D-WVa.) member of the House Military Affairs Committee.

Edmiston said he also discussed the idea with navy, postoffice and civilian aeronautics authority officials.

Edmiston added that Richard Dupont, president of all-American Aviation, Inc., holder of patents on the non-stop pick-up device, had promised "full financial cooperation" in the plan.

He said that such employment of reserve pilots would avoid in the future any need for a hasty training period for military fliers.

The All-American Aviation operated for a year over routes in West Virginia, Ohio and Pennsylvania. It now seeks extension of the service to towns in New Jersey, New York, Delaware and Kentucky.

Coal Producers To Discuss War Needs

WASHINGTON, June 6 (AP)—The part of the coal fields in national defense will be a principal topic at a meeting in Washington June 21, of producers from the Appalachian fields.

From their mines comes the greater share of the tonnage for the nation's big industrial centers.

And, it is from those mines, fuel technicians have said, that most of the "munitions coal" must be obtained, technicians have explained that coal used in preparation of steel for armor plate and ordnance must meet higher requirements than fuel for ordinary use.

Louis A. Johnson, assistant secretary of war, holds a major spot on the speaking program of the engineering conference called by Appalachian Coals, Inc., representing producers of coal mined in eastern Kentucky, Eastern Tennessee, southwestern Virginia and southern West Virginia.

Strike Ties Up Bus Line Temporarily

BALTIMORE, June 6 (AP) — Safeway Trails Inc., and Eastern Trails, Inc., Interstate Bus Lines operating through Maryland notified the Public Service Commission today a strike of drivers had forced a temporary suspension of operations.

Service between Baltimore and Washington and Baltimore and New York was halted, commission officials said, tying up thirty-five buses.

The companies advised the commission, however, that "unless unforeseen circumstances make it inadvisable" they planned to resume normal operations Friday.

Annenberg Denies One Tax Charge

CHICAGO, June 6 (AP)——Counsel for M. L. Annenberg today challenged the government's contention that he evaded taxes on more than $1,000,000 in dividends of the Cecelia company—largest item in the income tax evasion indictment against him.

Weymouth Kirkland, attorney for the Philadelphia publisher who said that he planned to ask clemency for his client, told Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson that Annenberg has paid taxes in full on his share of the dividends.

The lengthy statement was a prelude to action by the jurist on Annenberg's plea of guilty to failure to pay $1,217,296 in taxes on his 1936 income. The plea was entered on one count of a six-count indictment alleging that Annenberg owed a total of $5,548,383 in taxes, penalties and interest on his earnings for the 1933-36 period.

The government has agreed to drop all other charges after Annenberg is sentenced on his plea. Annenberg has agreed with the treasury to settle his civil tax claim for $8,000,000.

Judge Wilkerson adjourned the hearing before Kirkland had finished his 138-page statement on Annenberg's financial affairs. The jurist announced that if the defense and prosecuting attorneys had not completed their arguments by noon tomorrow he would continue the case to next week.

Bomb Explosions Felt in Paris

PARIS, June 7. (Friday) (AP)—The reverberations of heavy bomb explosions to the south were felt in Paris this morning after anti-aircraft fire had awakened the city.

Searchlights were seen sweeping the sky in that region, away from the battle zone, and guns were firing.

New Castle Man Appointed Judge

RICHMOND, VA., June 6 (AP) — Col. W. M. Kemper, executive assistant to Governor Price, announced today the appointment of Earl L. Abbott of New Castle as judge of the Nineteenth jurdicial circuit to succeed the late Judge Benjamin Haden of Fincastle.

The appointment is for an unexpired term ending Feb. 1, 1942, Colonel Kemper said. Governor Price was out of the city.

Abbott, 38, is a native of Craig county. He now practices law in Roanoke as well as Craig but maintains his legal residence in the county.

The Nineteenth circuit includes the counties of Alleghany, Bath, Botetourt and Craig and the city of Clifton Forge.

Report Two Thirds of Nazi Bombers Destroyed

NEW YORK, June 7 (AP) — Two-thirds of "the famous dive bombers" of the German air force have been destroyed, according to a broadcast on the wave length of the French government radio picked up by CBS. The total remaining was not given.

West Virginia Seeks To Attract Tourists

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., June 6 (AP)—Arduous work lies ahead for the tourist committee of the West Virginia State Chamber of Commerce in any program to "sell" the state as a travel attraction, members were told at a meeting today.

Robert F. Nelson, publicity director of the Virginia chamber, told the group the first objective was to "sell the state to the natives, since only citizens who know the beauties and advantages of their state can sell it to outsiders."

"After sixteen years of effort, we are still doing spade work selling Virginia," Nelson asserted.

M. S. Aldrich of Charleston, urged the committee "press upon the state road commission the necessity for safe and adequate detours where road construction is in progress."

Chairman Loren R. Johnston presided at the session, which was attended by E. G. Otey, Bluefield, state chamber president, and Managing Director Harry A. Stansbury.

Beverly Gains 57

BEVERLY, W. Va., June 6 (AP) — This former Randolph county seat gained fifty-seven persons in the last ten years, according to the 1940 census which showed a population of 485.

Nearby Huttonsville gained five during the same period for a 1940 population of 308.

Phila. Preparing For Convention

PHILADELPHIA, June 6 (AP) — Philadelphia hung out the welcome sign today for an expected 125,000 visitors for the Republican National Convention and announced an entertainment program ranging from a marathon race to street dancing.

With Samuel F. Pryor, chairman of the convention arrangements committee and Mayor Robert E. Lamberton among the spectators, a workman climbed a ladder and attached a ten-foot streamer to a lamp standard on city hall plaza.

As the streamer unrolled, an elephant stood against a blue field below "welcome Republicans."

Thus the city began donning the fancy togs—bunting, flags, and signs—it will wear for the presidential nominating session opening in convention hall June 24.

Distance runners of the United States and Canada have been invited to participate in a thirty-kilometer marathon, the winner to be crowned International Amateur Athletic Union champion for the distance. Runners will start from convention hall.

Several "big name" orchestras will play for the Parkway ball with five blocks of the street roped off for the dancers.

The Philadelphia mummers, who present a spectacular carnival each New Year's day, will pass before the visitors in their traditional feathered headgear and spangles. A water carnival on the Schuylkill river will offer a parade of colorful floats.

Mexico To Arm

MEXICO CITY, June 6. (AP)—Informed sources reported tonight that an extraordinary session of the Mexican Congress would be called this month to consider legislation for controlling the movements of foreigners, for regulating the possession of arms and for strengthening the republic's army and navy.

Annapolis City Treasurer Dies

ANNAPOLIS, Md., June 6 (AP) — Funeral services were being arranged today for George Francis Quaid, 63, city treasurer for twenty-one years, who died unexpectedly at his home of a heart attack.

Quaid, a Democrat, served under both Democratic and Republican mayors.

Vest-Pocket Castle in Spain Is Adaptable to Any Climate

Although designed for semi-tropical climates, this modified Spanish bungalow, because of its compactness, is suitable for any climate.

The architect has made color and joy-of-living an integral part of it. A white stucco finish over concrete block construction is the basis for polychromed rafter-ends and shingle-tile variegated red roof.

The wide opening between the living room and dining room adds a spacious air to the living quarters, and the Mexican-style corner fireplace saves space while it adds charm.

Cost of this home should range from $3,500 to $4,500, without lot, depending on locality and heating arrangements. It may be constructed under Federal supervision through the Federal Home Building Service Plan. Full information is available at local lending agencies or the Federal Home Loan Bank board, Washington, D. C.

$14,300,000 Spent On WPA Projects In Maryland

BALTIMORE, June 6. (AP)—In the last five years, the Works Projects Administration and local sponsors have sent more than $14,300,000 for suppplies, materoals and equipment used on Maryland projects, State WPA Administrator Frank H. Dryden disclosed today.

Items included cement, clay products, concrete products, crushed stone, sand, gravel, cast iron pipe and fittings, iron and steel products, lumber, electrical equipment, explosives, paints, petroleums, coal and coke, office equipment and rubber products.

Also included in the expenditures, of which $7,200,000 represented federal funds and $7,100,000 funds spent by sponsors of WPA projects, were rentals for motor vehicles, teams and wagons and office space. Virtually every county in the state benefitted, Dryden said.

All of the materials bought with federal funds were obtained through the U. S. Treasury Procurement division through competitive bids and schedules used in all federal purchasing, he continued.

He noted that ot was the policy of the Procurement division to seek bids from firms in the area in which the projects were in operation, enabling local dealers to benefit directly.

Crossed Cables Blamed for Crash Of Bombing Plane

SANTA MONICA, Calif., June 6. (AP)—Crossed control cables that escaped many inspections were blamed today for the crash of a Douglas navy transport plane which killed its crew of four last Saturday.

Agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation declined to say whether they were inquiring into possible sabotage in the Douglas Aircraft Factory, but Maj. Carl A. Cover, vice-president and general manager of Douglas, said "investigations will be continued."

Officials of the air safety board of the Civil Aeronautics Authority, who participated with Douglas engineers in the probe, also declined comment.

A statement issued by Major Cover said that the crossed cables "interfered with the pilot's ability to properly control the airplane after the takeoff."

"In this conclusion we are joined by government experts and officials assigned to the investigation," he added. "To date no evidence has come to light to account for the condition resulting in the accident.

Leigh and Taylor Are Starred in Picture

Miss Leigh and Taylor are teamed as the romantic lovers in the Robert E. Sherwood drama. As Myra Lester, a petite ballet dancer, Miss Leigh displays a different side of her personality than she did in her Academy Award performance of Scarlett O'Hara.

Taylor has a difficult characterization as a young British officer, Capt. Roy Cronin, who meets the little dancer on historic Waterloo Bridge during an air raid, winning her heart in a whirlwind twenty-four hour romance. One of the demands of his role requires him to age from twenty-five to forty-eight, giving him a new maturity and dignity.

With its background London of the war years, 1917 and 1940, the film offers spctacular settings with the picturization of a London blackout, underground air raids shelters, and troops leaving for the front from Waterloo Station.

Garden Offers a Paramount Drama

A beautiful, spunky girl reporter sets out to get a good story on the "suicide battalion" of her city's police department and ends up with the scoop of a lifetime, a romance with a handsome young officer and a first-class war against desperate racketeers, in Paramount's thrill drama, "Emergency Squad," which opens today at the Garden theater.

With Louise Campbell cast as the girl newshawk on a metropolitan daily, and William Henry, Richard Denning and Robert Paige as a daredevil trio on the "Emergency Squad," the picture tells the story of men who risk their lives every time they go out on an assignment and hardly ever get in the news.

The film's dramatic conflict comes from racketeers' efforts to wreck a million-dollar tunnel project and the girl reporter's plan to outwit them and save her city its most valued public work. In the climax, Miss Campbell is caught with the gangsters in a tunnel cave-in, with all hope of rescue resting in the heroes of the "Emergency Squad."

Crosby and Jean Are Starred in Feature

Starring Bing Crosby and Gloria Jean, "If I Had My Way", an unusual production, will be seen tomorrow on the screen of the New Liberty theater.

"If I Had My Way" is said to give Crosby an unusual variety of original songs. Unusual also is said to be the cast, which includes stars of three generations. In addition to twelve-year-old Gloria Jean, are Charles Winninger, El Brendel and such yesteryear celebrities as Gr... LaRue, Trixie Fraganza, Julian ... tinge, Eddie Leonard and Blan... Ring.

Old-Time Parties Aid Cupid More Than Rush Stuff

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX, Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage — Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

High-pressure methods in courtship, as well as high-pressure salesmanship in business, are sometimes doomed to failure. So much effort is expended in producing the result that a fear complex often ensues.

I've had a letter from a group of girls who tell me, with a dash of humor, that while they entertain strictly honorable intentions towards certain young men, they find themselves just about where they were when the snow began to fall last year.

They've rushed about in automobiles at sixty miles an hour. They've danced, tapped, swung. The pace had been so hectic that the young men haven't had time to think about anything that suggested domesticity. They were always rushing somewhere, then rushing to go somewhere else. No one ever seemed to spend a quiet evening at home.

Return Suggested

Then the mother of one of these girls, wise in her generation, suggested a return to less violent methods of companionship. They harked back not only to her day, but to her mother's day. The speeding youngsters thought these old-fashioned parties were just too quaint for anything—but it seems they are producing results. Among these antiquated diversions was the box social and apron and necktie party.

The box social as you know, or if you've ever read Edna Ferber's "So Big", gives a girl a chance to show what a good cook she is in contriving the "eats" for her box. Boxes are auctioned off for a worthy cause—milk fund for underprivileged children, for instance—and the young man who bids in a certain girl's box has the privilege of eating supper with her. Boxes revealing a golden-brown fried chicken, tomato surprise, and good, dependable homemade cake are wonderful for turning a young man's thoughts to love in a cottage.

On His Knees

The tie-and-apron party probably sent grandpa on his knees—that's the way they used to propose in his day—even before he realized it. Again the worthy cause was sought, and the girls made the prettiest and most feminine aprons. These were auctioned, and bid in by the admiring swains. The next move in the game was to find the neckties that matched the girls' aprons. The girls made the neckties too — the whole charming scheme just reeked with huggestions of delightful domesticity.

Box socials must be coming back because only the other day, at Mrs. Roosevelt's White House Conference, I heard Mrs. Florence Kerr, chairman of the Woman's Division, W. P. A., tell that in the thousands of dinners held all over the country to open W.P.A. week, the box social was a prime favorite.

Picnic days are here again. If my young friends would like to try out some of these old-fashioned parties so antiquated that they seem positively new, I'll be very glad to send them a party bulletin, if they'll write me, enclosing a self-addressed three-cent stamped envelope.

Needs Sense of Responsibility

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My daughter, around whom my entire life has revolved for the last twenty-two years, has made a very painful discovery about a mistake in my earl life. Her father and I were not married. We could not be, as he had a wife and family. I did everything for my little daughter, and refused to marry a good man because I felt it might make a difference in her life.

I never told her that she was an illegitimate child, because I felt that in giving up my entire life to her I had atoned for any mistake I made when I was 18 years of age. She got these facts from a relative of mine, who has been cruel and unfriendly to me always.

My daughter has a fine position, making over two thousand dollars a year, but she will not see me or help me, now that I am ill and temporarily out of work, I've never felt guilty about this girl, because she has always been my first consideration in life. But I do not know how to face this estrangement, her refusal to grant me a little aid until I am better and am able to get on my feet again.

UNHAPPY MOTHER.

It would be well if this daughter of yours would stop and think! Many girls in your position have left their children, born out of wedlock, in doorways or on the streets. You accepted your maternity magnificently and much is forgiven you because you loved much.

This revelation about her birth has been too much for her for the moment, but surely she'll remember all that you have done for her, and love you again as she once did. If she does not have an awakening as to her responsibility and love for you, she is an unworthy daughter. But surely she'll realize how fine you've been, and I hope a reconciliation has been accomplished by this time.

Shall He Send Flowers?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

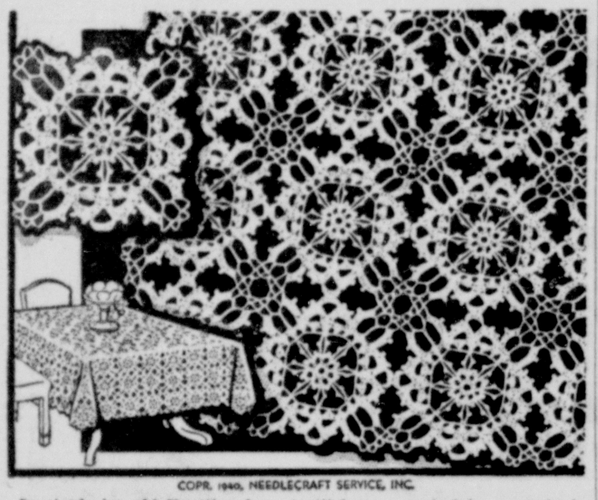

I don't know her very well, but that doesn't prevent me from loving her from afar. She is graduating in a little while, and I want to send her some flowers. Would it be all right? Or would I seem presumptuous? She hardly knows of my existence, and still, every waking moment, I am aware of her.

UNRECOGNIZED.

Potters' Head Dies

EAST LIVERPOOL, O., June 6 (AP)—James McGowan, 60, former vice-president and national organizer for the National Brotherhood of Operative Potters, died yesterday.

Hair is popularly thought to be a living tissue. Actually beyond the follicle, it, like fingernails, is a dead, horny substance. It stays on the head for about two to four years, and becomes brittle and dull without proper care.

Stocks Recover Some of Losses But Traders Show No Interest

War Tension Relaxes Somewhat in Wall Street

By FREDERICK GARDNER

NEW YORK, June 6 (AP) — War tension seemed to have relaxed a bit on Wall street today and selected stocks, led by steels, put on market recoveries of fractions to a point or so.

Transfers totaled 427,315 shares.

In the final hour blocks of 1,000 to 10,0000 shares of Packard motors, up a major fraction, tilted volume appreciably. Willys Overland, another low-priced issue up a trifle, also was lively.

Although last quotations were under the best in most cases, well ahead were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Republic, Youngstown Sheet, Douglas Aircraft., United Aircraft, Westinghouse, Dow Chemical, Eastman Kodak, International Nickel, Standard Oil of N. J., Texas Corp., Phillips Petroleum, Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck and Great Northern.

Most rails, utilities, rubbers and coppers held to a narrowly higher range.

Aluminum of America and Aluminum Ltd., got up about five points each in the Curb. Lesser gainers were American Gas, American Cyanamid "B" and International Petroleum. Transfers here were around 70,000 shares.

Bonds Irregular

NEW YORK, June 6 (AP) — A few railroad bonds attracted a fair amount of buying in today's market but the general run of corporates, foreigns and governments leaned backward, some for substantial losses.

U. S. governments were little changed.

Total sales were $3,590,000, par value.

Reds Playing To Many Customers

CINCINNATI, June 6. (AP)—Warren Giles' white collar was wilted and wet on the hottest day of the year today, but the boss-man of Cincinnati's Reds scanned home attendance figures, recollected games played in near-freezing weather and exclaimed:

"This is wonderful! And I mean the heat just as much as the gate-record."

In twenty-two home contests, his records showed, the national league champions played to 243,231 cash customers, plus 35,052 of the fair sex who attended four ladies' day games.

The total, Giles conceded, was about 25,000 less than this time last year," but, said he:

"Think of the days up to a week ago when the boys really should have played in their red flannels. One day it was thirty-six degrees!"

The whole picture, commented the club's vice president and general manager, is a swell argument against a suggestion heard this spring that major leagues delay their season-opening until May 1.

"We've had five postponements at home because of weather and six more on the road," he said. "Dayton, (in the mid-Atlantic league) just fifty miles north, has had a total of twelve. That loop started its season in May."

The Crosley field schedule includes six more night games and eight Sunday games — the latter mostly double headers.

If last year's experience means anything, they should average between 20,000 and 25,000 attendance.

P. S.—Remember, it was only two years ago that Giles offered Manager Bill McKechnie a $5,000 bonus if he brought in 450,000 cash customers through the turnstiles. He got it in mid-season!

Hood College Has "Moving Up" Day

FREDERICK, Md., June 6 (AP) — Commencement activities at Hood College opened tonight with "step sings" at Alumnae hall followed by the traditional "moving up" exercises at the final service in the chapel.

At the "moving up" exercises, members of the Senior class in caps and gowns marched to the rear of the chapel, surrendering their places of priority to the Juniors, who will be the incoming Senior class next fall.

A brief address of welcome was given by President Henry I Stahr. Miss Josephine Hessinger of Reading, Pa., retiring Senior class president, presented the Senior cap and gown, Hood ring and class president's ring to Miss Natalie Townsend of Jersey City, N. J., who will be president of the new junior class. Commencement will be Monday.

Sailor Killed in Freight Train Wreck

CONNELLSVILLE, Pa., June 6 —One man, identified tentatively as a sailor in the U. S. navy, was killed and nine others hurt tonight when a Pittsburgh and West Virginia freight left the rails and tumbled over a steep embankment near Banning, Pa., twelve miles southwest of here.

The dead man was identified by social security card as William J. Moran, 40, of Lawrenceville, Mass., believed to have been riding on a freight car from Toledo to Baltimore.

The injured included Fireman J. Stafferton, whose skull was fractured, engineer S. B. Beer, Conductor D. O. Nolver and Brakeman Edward Toler, all of Pittsburgh, and two riders, Walter Hopkins, 26, Connellsville and Theodore Poedh, 26, Duncannon, Pa.

The names of three of those hurt were not immediately known.

The cars loaded with steel, grain and other finished products were described by state police as being "demolished". The officers said investigators told them they believed a broken buckle in the rail caused the accident.

The engineer and fireman escaped injury by leaping from their cab.

Many Seek Place On State Payroll

BALTIMORE, June 6. (AP)—Headed by some 240 would-be office holders, a small army of job-hunters will converge on Baltimore's east-side high school Saturday to take civil service examinations for seven-hundred state jobs.

The state employment commissioner Walter C. Jones said a total of 1,138 applications had been filed for the 700 positions, most of which are open to residents of all sections of the state. Three classifications are limited to county residents.

Commissioner Jones emphasized that no one would be permitted to take an examination unless his application already was on file in the commissioner's office.

Among the office-boy applicants in the second were 229 persons seeking appointments as laboratory assistants. One hundred and seventy-seven will take exams for jobs as junior social workers, 128 for liquor inspectors, and 101 for gasoline tax investigators.

Prince Wilhelm Killed

BERLIN, June 6 (AP) — Prince Friedrich Wilhelm of Schleswig-Holstein-Glucksburg was killed in action in the west, an obituary notice disclosed today. The prince, 29 years old, was a reserve officer in a calvary regiment.

DOWNED BY FRENCH BULLETS

This view of a German plane shot down on French soil during a raid speaks well for the marksmanship of the French gunners. The Allies claim they are bringing down three Nazi planes for one.

Airmail Service May Be Extended

WASHINGTON, June 6 (AP) — Extension of pick-up airmail service to all parts of the United States and employment of army and navy reserves as pilots, to provide an ever available reservoir of fliers, was proposed to the army today.

The suggestion was made to Louis A. Johnson, assistant secretary of war and Major General H. H. Arnold, chief of the army air corps, by Representative Edmiston (D-WVa.) member of the House Military Affairs Committee.

Edmiston said he also discussed the idea with navy, postoffice and civilian aeronautics authority officials.

Edmiston added that Richard Dupont, president of all-American Aviation, Inc., holder of patents on the non-stop pick-up device, had promised "full financial cooperation" in the plan.

He said that such employment of reserve pilots would avoid in the future any need for a hasty training period for military fliers.

The All-American Aviation operated for a year over routes in West Virginia, Ohio and Pennsylvania. It now seeks extension of the service to towns in New Jersey, New York, Delaware and Kentucky.

Coal Producers To Discuss War Needs

WASHINGTON, June 6 (AP)—The part of the coal fields in national defense will be a principal topic at a meeting in Washington June 21, of producers from the Appalachian fields.

From their mines comes the greater share of the tonnage for the nation's big industrial centers.

And, it is from those mines, fuel technicians have said, that most of the "munitions coal" must be obtained, technicians have explained that coal used in preparation of steel for armor plate and ordnance must meet higher requirements than fuel for ordinary use.

Louis A. Johnson, assistant secretary of war, holds a major spot on the speaking program of the engineering conference called by Appalachian Coals, Inc., representing producers of coal mined in eastern Kentucky, Eastern Tennessee, southwestern Virginia and southern West Virginia.

Strike Ties Up Bus Line Temporarily

BALTIMORE, June 6 (AP) — Safeway Trails Inc., and Eastern Trails, Inc., Interstate Bus Lines operating through Maryland notified the Public Service Commission today a strike of drivers had forced a temporary suspension of operations.

Service between Baltimore and Washington and Baltimore and New York was halted, commission officials said, tying up thirty-five buses.

The companies advised the commission, however, that "unless unforeseen circumstances make it inadvisable" they planned to resume normal operations Friday.

Bomb Explosions Felt in Paris

PARIS, June 7. (Friday) (AP)—The reverberations of heavy bomb explosions to the south were felt in Paris this morning after anti-aircraft fire had awakened the city.

Searchlights were seen sweeping the sky in that region, away from the battle zone, and guns were firing.

New Castle Man Appointed Judge

RICHMOND, VA., June 6 (AP) — Col. W. M. Kemper, executive assistant to Governor Price, announced today the appointment of Earl L. Abbott of New Castle as judge of the Nineteenth juridicial circuit to succeed the late Judge Benjamin Haden of Fincastle.

The appointment is for an unexpired term ending Feb. 1, 1942, Colonel Kemper said. Governor Price was out of the city.

Abbott, 38, is a native of Craig county. He now practices law in Roanoke as well as Craig but maintains his legal residence in the county.

Annenberg Denies One Tax Charge

CHICAGO, June 6 (AP)——Counsel for M. L. Annenberg today challenged the government's contention that he evaded taxes on more than $1,000,000 in dividends of the Cecelia company—largest item in the income tax evasion indictment against him.

Weymouth Kirkland, attorney for the Philadelphia publisher who said that he planned to ask clemency for his client, told Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson that Annenberg has paid taxes in full on his share of the dividends.

The lengthy statement was a prelude to action by the jurist on Annenberg's plea of guilty to failure to pay $1,217,296 in taxes on his 1936 income. The plea was entered on one count of a six-count indictment alleging that Annenberg owed a total of $5,548,383 in taxes, penalties and interest on his earnings for the 1933-36 period.

The government has agreed to drop all other charges after Annenberg is sentenced on his plea. Annenberg has agreed with the treasury to settle his civil tax claim for $8,000,000.

Judge Wilkerson adjourned the hearing before Kirkland had finished his 138-page statement on Annenberg's financial affairs. The jurist announced that if the defense and prosecuting attorneys had not completed their arguments by noon tomorrow he would continue the case to next week.

Report Two Thirds of Nazi Bombers Destroyed

NEW YORK, June 7 (AP) — Two-thirds of "the famous dive bombers" of the German air force have been destroyed, according to a broadcast on the wave length of the French government radio picked up by CBS. The total remaining was not given.

West Virginia Seeks To Attract Tourists

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., June 6 (AP)—Arduous work lies ahead for the tourist committee of the West Virginia State Chamber of Commerce in any program to "sell" the state as a travel attraction, members were told at a meeting today.

Robert F. Nelson, publicity director of the Virginia chamber, told the group the first objective was to "sell the state to the natives, since only citizens who know the beauties and advantages of their state can sell it to outsiders."

"After sixteen years of effort, we are still doing spade work selling Virginia," Nelson asserted.

M. S. Aldrich of Charleston, urged the committee "press upon the state road commission the necessity for safe and adequate detours where road construction is in progress."

Chairman Loren R. Johnston presided at the session, which was attended by E. G. Otey, Bluefield, state chamber president, and Managing Director Harry A. Stansbury.

Beverly Gains 57

BEVERLY, W. Va., June 6 (AP) — This former Randolph county seat gained fifty-seven persons in the last ten years, according to the 1940 census which showed a population of 485.

Nearby Huttonsville gained five during the same period for a 1940 population of 308.

Phila. Preparing For Convention

PHILADELPHIA, June 6 (AP) — Philadelphia hung out the welcome sign today for an expected 125,000 visitors for the Republican National Convention and announced an entertainment program ranging from a marathon race to street dancing.

With Samuel F. Pryor, chairman of the convention arrangements committee and Mayor Robert E. Lamberton among the spectators, a workman climbed a ladder and attached a ten-foot streamer to a lamp standard on city hall plaza.

Thus the city began donning the fancy togs—bunting, flags, and signs—it will wear for the presidential nominating session opening in convention hall June 24.

Distance runners of the United States and Canada have been invited to participate in a thirty-kilometer marathon, the winner to be crowned International Amateur Athletic Union champion for the distance. Runners will start from convention hall.

Several "big name" orchestras will play for the Parkway ball with five blocks of the street roped off for the dancers.

The Philadelphia mummers, who present a spectacular carnival each New Year's day, will pass before the visitors in their traditional feathered headgear and spangles. A water carnival on the Schuylkill river will offer a parade of colorful floats.

Mexico To Arm

MEXICO CITY, June 6. (AP)—Informed sources reported tonight that an extraordinary session of the Mexican Congress would be called this month to consider legislation for controlling the movements of foreigners, for regulating the possession of arms and for strengthening the republic's army and navy.

Annapolis City Treasurer Dies

ANNAPOLIS, Md., June 6 (AP) — Funeral services were being arranged today for George Francis Quaid, 63, city treasurer for twenty-one years, who died unexpectedly at his home of a heart attack.

Quaid, a Democrat, served under both Democratic and Republican mayors.

Berkeley Panthers Split in Two Games

Berkeley Springs, W. Va., June 6—The Berkeley Springs Panthers split even in two recent baseball games, coming back to defeat Cherry Run 7-4 after losing to the Williamsport (Md.) Wildcats 3-1.

Behind the four-hit pitching of Meyers, Williamsport had little trouble winning. Only one Berkeley batsman, Edler, had more than one blow. Meyers struck out ten.

Miller, on the peak for the Panthers, allowed seven hits and fanned six. The visitors' runs came in the second and third frame while the Panthers pushed across their lone tally in the eighth as the result of an error.

Cherry Run, held in check for eight innings by Ambrose, drove out four hits in the last inning to score three runs but the rally fell short by three runs of tying the score.

Berkeley collected 11 hits and had two-run spurts in each the third and sixth frames and a three-marker outburst in the ninth. In clinching the game in the final inning, Edler, Kline, Goldstrom and B. Michael had successive hits. The scores:

WILLIAMSPORT	012 000 000—3	8	4
BERKELEY	000 000 010—1	4	2

Williamsport—Myers and Brant. Berkeley—Miller and Waugh.

BERKELEY	002 002 003—7	14	0
CHERRY RUN	000 000 103—4	8	1

Berkeley—Ambrose and Miller. Cherry Run—F. Rhoe, Johnson and Pickett.

Devon Club Ends Tri-Towns Slump

Westernport, June 6—Devon Club's pacesetting outfit got back in the Tri-Towns Softball League win column yesterday by drubbing the WPA-Legion ten, 21-5.

"Tubby" Wilcox gave the losers five hits over the seven-inning route including two in three trips by Butler. L. Diaz had a home run and single for the Devon Club.

The McIntyre Bakers defeated the Eagles, 14-6. Robinson and Kiddy had homers and Bartlett smashed out two blows for the Bakers. "Bud" Evans collected two of the Eagles' half-dozen safeties. Five of the Baker runs were the result of errors. The scores:

WPA-LEGION	011 012 0—	5	5	6
DEVON CLUB	(10)32 501 x—21	14	3

WPA-Legion—Clark, Warnick and Butler. Devon Club—Wilcox and A. DiUbaldo.

Roy Weatherly Fined For Sassing Umpire

Washington, June 6. (AP) — Roy Weatherly, Cleveland outfielder, drew a $25 fine and a three-day suspension for sassing Umpire George Moriarty in Tuesday's game with Washington, Oscar Vitt, Cleveland manager, said the news came in a telegram from President Harridge of the American League.

"I don't know what Roy said, but whatever he said it wasn't half enough," Vitt commented when Weatherly was ordered from the game.

"He didn't try to show up Moriarty in front of the crowd. He didn't kick dirt or throw his bat. He just told him what he thought of him for calling a lousy strike. If a ball player can't do that without being thrown out of the game, we'd better all take up knitting."

Jubilee Follies Comes to Strand

When the curtain rises at the Strand theater today on Jubilee Follies, Cumberland theater-going public will have the opportunity of seeing Princess Chiyo who does a weird native dance.

Another star is Mlle. Jean, lovely Chanteuse, who appears with Joe Termini. Among the ensemble there are a number of outstanding girls. Kay Walsh, demure little blonde, is an artist's model. Miss Jackie Maye holds the Chicago women's title as as exhibit fencer, and is a member of several well known women's bowling teams. Car-Ahmen and Elizabeth Smith are both swimmers of exceptional ability, and the other girls all excell at some sport of another.

Other outstanding acts with the revue are the famous comedians Burton and Kaye, Miss Joan, the American Venus and Billy Samuel, Hollywood's one man vaudeville show.

On the screen is Florence Rice, Kent Taylor, Lionel Atwill and Katharine Aldridge are featured in "Girl in 313," lively Twentieth Century-Fox film drama.

The story of a woman who was determined to marry wealth, but ended pitting two men against each other, when love upset her plans, is told in Paramount's drama, "Safari," co-starring Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and Madeline Carroll, which opens Sunday at the Strand theater. Playing featured roles are Tullie Carminati, Murial Angelus, Lynne Overman and Billy Gilbert.

WILL APPEAR AT STRAND

The Jubilee Follies girls with the revue at the Strand today and tomorrow. On the screen will be the "Girl in 313" a new mystery picture.

Two Features Are Offered at Embassy

Two feature pictures will be offered today at the Embassy theater.

Ken Maynard, cowboy star, will be seen in "Phantom Rancher", and Edmund Lowe and Constance Cummings will appear in mystery and action drama, "Seven Sinners."

On the same program another chapter of "The Shadow" will be included.

Leigh and Taylor Are Starred in Picture

Miss Leigh and Taylor are teamed as the romantic lovers in the Robert E. Sherwood drama. As Myra Lester, a petite ballet dancer, Miss Leigh displays a different side of her personality than she did in her Academy Award performance of Scarlett O'Hara.

Taylor has a difficult characterization as a young British officer, Capt. Roy Cronin, who meets the little dancer on historic Waterloo Bridge during an air raid, winning her heart in a whirlwind twenty-four hour romance. One of the demands of his role requires him to age from twenty-five to forty-eight, giving him a new maturity and dignity.

With its background London of the war years, 1917 and 1940, the film offers spectacular settings with the picturization of a London blackout, underground air raids shelters, and troops leaving for the front from Waterloo Station.

Garden Offers a Paramount Drama

A beautiful, spunky girl reporter sets out to get a good story on the "suicide battalion" of her city's police department and ends up with the scoop of a lifetime, a romance with a handsome young officer and a first-class war against desperate racketeers, in Paramount's thrill drama, "Emergency Squad," which opens today at the Garden theater.

With Louise Campbell cast as the girl newshawk on a metropolitan daily, and William Henry, Richard Denning and Robert Paige as a daredevil trio on the "Emergency Squad," the picture tells the story of men who risk their lives every time they go out on an assignment and hardly ever get in the news.

The film's dramatic conflict comes from racketeers' efforts to wreck a million-dollar tunnel project and the girl reporter's plan to outwit them and save her city its most valued public work. In the climax, Miss Campbell is caught with the gangsters in a tunnel cave-in, with all hope of rescue resting in the heroes of the "Emergency Squad."

Crosby and Jean Are Starred in Feature

Starring Bing Crosby and Gloria Jean, "If I Had My Way", an unusual production, will be seen tomorrow on the screen of the New Liberty theater.

"If I Had My Way" is said to give Crosby an unusual variety of original songs. Unusual also is said to be the cast, which includes stars of three generations. In addition to twelve-year-old Gloria Jean, are Charles Winninger, El Brendel and such yesteryear celebrities as Gr LaRue, Trixie Fraganza, Julian tinge, Eddie Leonard and Blan Ring.

Snead Shoots Dazzling 67 to Lead Open

Mountaineer Five Under Par, Paces Field Two Strokes

Smith, Oliver and Parks Trail Him--Hogan Scores 70

Some of Expected Leaders Fall Down--Nelson In 72 Group

By GAYLE TALBOT

CANTERBURY GOLF COURSE, CLEVELAND, June 6 (AP) — Sam Snead, the heart-broken boy of a year ago, came back today to shoot a dazzling 67 in the opening round of the National Open golf championship.

Sam's score, 5 under par and the lowest first round ever shot in the long history of the open, was the final answer to those who wondered whether the lanky mountaineer would come back from the disaster that struck him last year on the outskirts of Philadelphia when he blew the championship with an incredible eight on the 72nd hole.

Sam shot one of the greatest rounds of his career today and fully justified the faith of the bookmakers who had made him a joint favorite with Ben Hogan at odds of 6 to 1 to win this tournament.

Game Sheer Artistry

In clipping five strokes from Canterbury's par, Snead had the benefit of a calm, hot day, and the balls rolled a mile. He missed only two shots, and each time he made brilliant recoveries. He stroked his way around the long, tortuous course in 13 pars and 5 birdies. It was sheer artistry, a record for the course.

Tonight Slammin' Sam was two full strokes ahead of all pursuers. Bracketed at 69 were Horton Smith, Ed Oliver and Sam Parks, three well-known stars. Parks won the championship in 1935 at Oakmont, the year they said it was an "accident." His score of 34-35 today came as a jolt.

Three more were tied at 70 — Hogan, Vic Ghezzi and Al Huske, of Dekalb, Ill. Hogan, who has won the most money of any of them the past Winter, played with a cold and was running a temperature.

Bracketed at 71 were Gene Sarazen, Leland Gibson, of Kansas City, Andy Gibson, of Baltimore, Henry Kaiser of Racine, Wis., and Robert Rabbish, an amateur out of Rochester, Mich. Marvin (Bud) Ward, the amateur champion from Spokane, Wash., practically shot himself out of the tournament with a 78.

Many Off to Weak Start

Some of those who had been expected to give Snead his opposition broke away to a weak start. Ralph Guldahl, winner of the open in 1937 and 1938, landed in a big group at 72. Byron Nelson, defending champion, had a 72, along with Craig Wood, Leonard Dobson, Sam Byrd and Matt Kowal.

Henry Picard, the PGA champion, was another 73, as also were Johnny Revolta, Jimmy Hines, Tommy Armour, Ray Mangrum, Ed Dudley, Frank Walsh and others.

Paul Runyan soared to a two-over-par 74, along with Harold (Jug) McSpaden, Jimmy Demaret, Ky Laffoon, Dutch Harrison and Dick Chapman, the amateur.

From there on the scores ran unusually high. Dick Metz soared to 76, together with such well known stick wielders as Johnny Farrell, Tony Manero, Lloyd Mangrum, Johnny Bulla and Bill Barbour. Clayton Haefner treated himself to 77, as also did Harry Cooper and they were out of it.

Johnny Goodman, the former amateur and open champion, had 82 and Johnny Thomson an 80. They played with Walter Hagen, who showed up late and was not feeling any too serious about another open championship, more or less.

Oakland Softball Loop Schedule Opens June 18

OAKLAND, June 6 (Special)—Oakland's church softball league will be under way on Tuesday, June 18, it was announced following a meeting of the executive committee this evening.

The committee made up the schedule of games to be played and worked out other details of the summer's program. The games are to be played on the high school field, Eighth and Green streets, and will be of seven innings each. Players are to be required to be on the field at six o'clock p. m., and the games will start at 6:15. It was also announced that the winning team will receive a trophy donated by the Wilson Hardware Company, of Cumberland.

In preparation for the opening games, practice sessions will be held Tuesday and Thursday evenings, June 11 and 13.

The schedule is as follows:

Lutherans vs. Episcopals, June 18, July 11, August 1, August 22.

Methodists vs. Catholics, June 20, July 16, August 6 and August 27.

Lutherans vs. Methodists, June 25, July 18, August 8 and August 29.

Catholics vs. Lutherans, June 27, July 23, August 13 and September.

Episcopals vs. Catholics, July 2, July 25, August 15 and September 5.

Methodists vs. Episcopals, July 9, July 30, August 20 and Sept. 10.

Indian Keystone Combination Goes On Hitting Spree

Boudreau and Mack Chief Figures in Eleven Inning 5-4 Win

WASHINGTON, June 6. (AP)—Lou Boudreau and Ray Mack, the Cleveland Indians sensational keystone combination, today put on a hitting act to beat the Washington Senators 5 to 4 in 11 innings.

Mack tied it up for the Indians in the 8th when he belted a homer into the left field bleachers with Beau Bell on base, and Boudreau won the game when he singled Frank Pytlak home in the 11th. Pytlak had tripled with none out.

Cubs Clout Ball To Trounce Phils 11-5

CHICAGO, June 6. (AP) — Bill Nicholson homered twice and Phil Cavarretta hit three consecutive doubles today as Chicago's Cubs went on their 1940 biggest batting spree—17 hits for 31 bases — to trounce the Philadelphia Phillies 11 to 5 and sweep the three game series.

Bill Lee was credited with his fifth triumph against seven defeats although Jake Mooty had to finish for him.

Dodgers Narrow Reds' Lead on Win

ST. LOUIS, June 6. (AP) — The Brooklyn Dodgers built their latest winning streak to five games today with a 9 to 5 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals to narrow the gap between Cincinnati's idle league leaders to .004 in the standings.

Luke Hamlin was hit hard, including the 15th home run of the season by John Mize and another by Joe Orengo, but the Dodgers jumped out in front with four runs in the third and old "hot potato" got credit for his fourth victory even though he didn't go the route.

The Dodgers got their margin by batting around against Fiddler Bill McGee and Ernie White in the third.

THE SECOND ROUND.

CLEVELAND—The second round at a National Open also has its share of jittery locations. There are two main elements involved, which the reader can follow from the first day's scoring—

1. The battle offered by the leading eight or ten to hold their places near the front.

2. The harder battle on the part of those more than five or six strokes away to crowd back into closer running.

For example, few who have been more than five or six strokes away on Friday's close have had much of a chance on the final day. Under normal scoring conditions those still carrying the championship torch shouldn't be over 146. They have too much to make up in the stretch.

If those who had a good round on Thursday can add another good round on Friday, they are well set for the final spin. Those who were slightly off on Thursday can still close the gap by a good Friday showing.

The Big Maulers

The three longest hitters in the field are still Jimmy Thomson, Sam Snead and Ben Hogan. From this group Thomson has the longest carry, while Snead and Hogan make up their ground with carry and roll.

This trio is really terrific where length is concerned. And Hogan, at 132 stripped, is still the marvel of the field. Thomson weighs 190. Snead, an all-around athlete, strong and wiry, weighs 175. Hogan is nearly 60 pounds lighter than Thomson and around 45 pounds below Snead.

Yet when all three really hit the ball there is little to spare, a few yards at best. Craig Wood, with a much shorter back swing, isn't far behind the trio named. Wood, another all-around athlete, is a 200-pounder.

But there is one detail you can notice—all four mentioned have big, strong hands and wrists and well-developed forearms.

How far can they drive? From 250 to 280 yards without a baked turf or a favoring wind. Under better conditions they can pass 300.

Demaret is fairly long—quite long enough—with no great effort shown in one of golf's smoothest and best-timed swings. Demaret also has big hands and powerful forearms.

"They count most in swinging the club," he tells you. "This is what to think first."

Iron Players.

Two of the better long-iron players are Demaret and Picard. There are no better from 190 to 220 yards. Snead also belongs in this class. Ben Hogan can also manipulate a long iron with the best.

The best spoon player in the field is Paul Runyan, who needs this club more than the longer hitters. Paul has a flock of spoons and he is deadly with most of them.

Runyan is also one of the best from 140 yards to the bottom of the cup, where his controlled short game makes up for his lack of range against the mastodon maulers.

There is always an argument about the best putters. There was a day when Runyan, Revolta and Horton Smith lead the pack in this respect.

Runyan is still one of the best. Horton Smith is top man on the long approach putts, from 40 to 60 feet away. Demaret, Hogan and Nelson are all consistent on the green carpet and so is Henry Picard. Craig Wood can have brilliant days, and when he is good around the pin he is always up or near the front.

There is still no putter in the field who surpasses the Walter Hagen of ten years ago.

The fastest putter in the field is Gene Sarazen, who takes one quick look at the line, and then strokes the ball. It would help pace the field far better if many more used the Sarazen system. There are too many engineers within range of the cup who put on too many surveying acts.

In regard to bunker play, the modern wedge has made a tremendous difference. Few have any trouble now in placing the ball near the cup from almost any sort of sanded location.

The playing qualities of this field are well matched among the first twenty. As usual, it gets down to a matter of concentration and determiantion through the three-day grind, especially on Saturday when they all have to fire both barrels.

This matter of concentration and determination is the most important factor in the field in such a 72-hole test. Here we find Demaret, Hogan and Nelson at their best. Also Gene Sarazen.—(Released by North American Newspaper Alliance.)

White Sox Come From Behind Twice To Beat Yanks 4-3

Chicago Takes Series off Champs with Ninth Inning Rally

NEW YORK, June 6. (AP)—The Chicago White Sox came from behind twice today to take the deciding game of their series with the world champion Yankees 4 to 3.

Their two-run winning rally in the ninth victimized Spud Chandler, who had allowed only three hits in the first eight frames. Chandler was replaced by Johnny Murphy.

Chicago had come from behind in the sixth with two runs on one hit, a single followed by a hit batsman, a sacrifice and an error.

Elks Batter 20 Hits To Beat Junior A. of C.

With four players accounting for 12 of their 20 hits, the Cumberland Elks defeated the Junior Association of Commerce team in a Rockingchair League softball game yesterday 16 to 9.

Buirge, Lowndes, Wallis and Wagner each had three hits for the Elks while Broadbeck came through with a four-ply swat in the big fifth inning uprising.

Cowherd served up the slants for the losers with Brown behind the bat, while Wallis and Lowndes formed the Elks battery.

John Shelton Named Coach at Keyser Hi

KEYSER, W. Va., June 6 —John Shelton, former Davis and Elkins athletic star and coach of basketball last year at Elk Garden, has been named coach for the Keyser High school basketball and football teams by the Mineral County Board of Education. He succeeds Homer Fizer, who asked for a leave of absence that he might become director of physical education and coach of football and basketball at University High School, Morgantown. He was coach at Keyser High for the past five years.

Parasang Now Rates As Whitney's "Ace"

BALTIMORE, June 6.—Parasang, a son of Halcyon, started out the year as the "third-stringer" in Sonny Whitney's stable, behind Carrier Pigeon and Flight Command. But those two have been distance disappointments, while Parasang now has two good victories to his credit in three outings. He won the experimental handicap at Jamaica, worth $3,750, and yesterday scored easily over ten others, in the Swift Stakes by three lengths to pick up another $4,150.

Buddy Baer Scores One Round Kayo; Pat Comiskey Beats Dudas

NEW YORK, June 6 (AP) — Buddy Baer dropped a fast-exploding bomb in Madison Square Garden's ring tonight and it blew Valentin Campolo to sleep in less than two minutes, thereby bouncing Max's kid brother up quite a few notches in the heavyweight ranks. Buddy weighed 246, his Argentine rival 225.

By his kayo in 1:53 of the first round, Baer not only stayed in the heavyweight "elimination tournament" promoter Mike Jacobs has brewing, but his performance completely overshadowed the victorious return of Pat Comiskey, young Paterson, N. J. Irishman, to the ring wars. Pat punched out an eight-round decision over Steve Dudas, the only man ever to beat him.

Jacobs announced immediately after the show, which grossed $9,978, that Buddy and Pat would tangle early in August.

Joe's Aces of Coney Beat Corriganville

Joe's Aces of Lonaconing beat the Corriganville softball aggregation 12 to 6 Wednesday at Corriganville behind the five hit pitching of Cook. The Aces collected 16 hits off Fleegle with Bob Woods getting four bingles, three singles and a double. The batteries for the Aces were W. Cook and Robertson while Fleegle and Often did the chores for Corriganville.

5,500 YEARS--AND LITTLE CHANGE

Experts say the Saluki hound probably has changed less down through the ages than any other breed of dog. As proof, they point to findings of archaeologists at Tepe Gawra, a mountain in Northeastern Iraq. In a mound there scientists found a dog's skull identical with the skull of the Saluki hound of today, shown here. Rare in America, the breed is prized in Persia as a hunter. Some have been clocked at speeds as great as 50 miles an hour—and because of their great stamina have been known literally to run rabbits to death. The breed has become better known in America in the last few years through the dog show exploits of Marjan II, owned by Mrs. Anna Marie Paterno of Irvington on Hudson, N. Y. Marjan II was exhibited at the recent opening in New York of an exhibition of Persian art which included some of the prehistoric objects taken from the Tepe Gawra mound.

Stocks Recover Some of Losses But Traders Show No Interest

War Tension Relaxes Somewhat in Wall Street

By FREDERICK GARDNER

NEW YORK, June 6 (AP) — War tension seemed to have relaxed a bit in Wall street today and selected stocks, led by steels, put on market recoveries of fractions to a point or so.

Transfers totaled 427,315 shares.

In the final hour blocks of 1,000 to 10,000 shares of Packard motors, up a major fraction, tilted volume appreciably. Willys Overland, another low-priced issue up a trifle, also was lively.

Although last quotations were under the best in most cases, well ahead were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Republic, Youngstown Sheet, Douglas Aircraft, United Aircraft, Westinghouse, Dow Chemical, Eastman Kodak, International Nickel, Standard Oil of N. J., Texas Corp., Phillips Petroleum, Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck and Great Northern.

Most rails, utilities, rubbers and coppers held to a narrowly higher range.

Aluminum of America and Aluminum Ltd., got up about five points each in the Curb. Lesser gainers were American Gas, American Cyanamid "B" and International Petroleum. Transfers here were around 1,000 shares.

Foxx's Homer in Ninth Wins for Grove 3-1

Two On; Two Out And Two Strikes On Him at Time

Frank Merriwell Climax Gives Vet Third Win of Year

First Time He Has Gone Route Since Opener at Washington

BOSTON, June 6. (AP)—Captain Jimmy Foxx's 14th homer of the season, made with two out, two mates on and two strikes against him in the ninth inning, enabled the veteran Lefty Bob Grove to gain his third 1940 victory for the Red Sox today, a 3-1 decision over the St. Louis Browns.

It was the first time the venerable southpaw had gone the full distance since he opened the Red Sox's season with a two-hit performance against the Washington Senators.

Grove gave six hits, two passes and had six strikeouts, but one of the St. Louis hits was a seventh inning homer by Chet Laabs.

Don DiMaggio opened the Boston ninth attack against Emil Bildilli, the Brown's rookie southpaw, by lashing out a two-bagger. DiMaggio made third when Doc Cramer flied out. After Ted Williams was passed, Foxx poled a drive into the left field screen to boost his runs driven in total to 48.

Eddie Brennan Busy With Steeplechasers At Delaware Park

DELAWARE PARK, June 6—With six hunt clubs within a fifty-mile radius of this William du Pont-constructed course, steeplechasing is a popular branch of the sport and plenty of excitement in this division is promised with the beginning of infield activity next Wednesday.

Racing Secretary Edward J. Brennan, who is considered tops in the business of arranging jumping races, asserts the strongest division of timber-toppers ever to race here will be on hand for the last eighteen days of the meeting.

Steeplechase racing has not started here yet, due to the fact it would have conflicted with the hedge-hopping at Belmont Park. The New York track closes its gates on Saturday, then at least fifty jumpers will head for this greensward.

These thoroughbreds, added to the forty-eight already on the grounds and an equal number at Fair Hill, ten miles up the road, should enable Brennan to arrange an infield contest for each day's program.

Heading the jumpers coming from Belmont are Thomas Hitchcock's Annibal and Louis B. Mayer's Ossabaw, who met in a special match race at the Westchester track today, which was won by Annibal.

While these two horses were selected as the best timber-toppers seen at Belmont, they are not what can be called standouts in the division and there is a very good chance of one or two jumpers putting them in the backgrounds here at Delaware.

Ready to take a crack at the match-race runers will be Ambrose Clark's Bachelor Philip, Torturer and Lancastrian; C. Mahlon Kline's Whaddon Chase, which thrilled Maryland racegoers at Pimlico; Brandywine's Blanket; Groton Stable's Saluda; W. M. Jefford's Warspite; Emile Pfizer's Farndale, champion jumper of last season on his hunt-meet figures; Rokeby Stable's Good Chance and Jack Skinner's Mad Policy.

All of these horses are eligible for the three steeplechase stakes to be run here—the $6,000 Georgetown Steeplechase Handicap, at two miles and a half, on June 26; and the $2,500 Vigmead Steeplechase Handicap, at two miles and a half, on July 3.

Dykes Says White Sox Will Worry Everybody

By JOHN LARDNER

NEW YORK, June 6 — It's a pleasure to converse with James J. Dykes, of the Chicago White Sox. He says what he thinks, one of the few big league managers to do so since Rogers Hornsby's time.

"What are they kidding around about?" demands Mr. Dykes, warming up for his afternoon's social engagement with the umpires by sticking his lower lip well out and assuming a cold, hostile stare. "The Yankees are the best team in our league. Boston is good. Cleveland is nothing. And my team will make trouble for all of 'em."

Where does Mr. Dykes get these strange restless notions? Well he's about to tell you.

"The yanks have got too much pitching," he says. "Boston hasn't got enough, but how those guys can powder the ball! Cleveland? Now listen. I have no grudge against Cleveland, outside of the fact that I would like to lick 'em every day and twice on Sunday, but why is Cleveland any better than they were last year?

Where Is the Hitting?

"The new shortstop and the new second baseman? Boudreau and Mack? All right, so those boys can come up with the ball now and then and make a double play. But where is all the hitting they're supposed to do? I haven't seen it. Maybe Boudreau and Mack save their base hits for the other clubs. That suits me.

"Oscar Vitt is short on pitching. After Feller and Milnar, what can Vitt say but that he's sorry? Those two fellows are his pitching staff, with maybe Harder winning a few in the hot weather, if it's not too hot. Al Smith? Say, I can throw the ball harder than that left-hander. What's more, I often do."

Mr. Dykes then rambles on about his own ball club, which is here and there in the second division.

"You think we're not going any place? Well, all I can say is, for a team that's not going any place, we're tough to beat. We do the rest of the league a favor by knocking off the Yankees and Red Sox this trip, but we don't get any gratitude. There ain't any gratitude.

"My team," continues Mr. Dykes, "could use a couple more pitchers, I grant you, but what's wrong with the rest of it? Mike Kreevich is one of the greatest players in the game. No, nobody ever heard of him. I guess that's what happens to a man when he keeps his trap shut. Taft Wright is banging the ball for me, and he's a better outfielder since he came to us from Washington. I'm not shedding any tears for Gee Walker, who was traded for Wright.

Nothing Wrong with Infield

"Tresh is a fine catcher. Nothing wrong with my infield, either. They come up with the ball. Kuhel and McNair can hit. Appling is still one of the toughest men in the league to pitch to. And young Kennedy, at third base — well, take a look at him," says Mr. Dykes, resting his case.

Young Robert Kennedy, at third base for Chicago, is worth looking at. He may or may not be the best rookie to break into major league baseball this year, as Mr. Dykes says he is, but there is no mistaking the young man's class. He behaves like a ball player.

Kennedy belongs to the school of big, powerful third basemen who dominate the American League today and give it a mighty margin over the National League at that position — Ken Keltner, of Cleveland; Pinky Higgins, of Detroit; Harlond Clift, of St. Louis; Buddy Lewis (when he plays there), of Washington; Red Rolfe, of the Yankees; and Jim Tabor, of Boston.

His throwing arm has to be seen to be believed. Tabor throws as strongly, but he throws all over the lot. Kennedy has not given Joe Kuhel, the White Sox first baseman, a hard chance on a catch all season. The other day, against the Yankees, he made the best play, on a brutal smash by Joe DiMaggio, that I have seen a third baseman make since Pie Traynor's day. Maybe he won't hit much. He won't have to hit more than .280 to become a great third baseman.

Such are the White Sox of Chicago, and if they're not going any place, they're going there under a good, plain-spoken, hard-fighting manager.

Fort Hill Meets Allegany Today In "Title" Game

Sentinels Must Win or Be Content with Triple Deadlock

The 1940 scholastic baseball season in this section will draw to a close here this afternoon when Allegany and Fort Hill combinations meet in an intra-city engagement on the Campobello diamond at 4 o'clock.

Fort Hill's Sentinels, who were stopped by LaSalle 6-3 earlier this week for their first setback in the city series, can capture the championship by beating the Campers. If Allegany should win, then all three schools would finish in a deadlock with a record of two victories and as many defeats.

The West Siders have a better record than the Sentinels and will be slight favorites to even accounts for a 4-2 defeat they suffered last week.

Allegany has won eight of 12 battles and has at least broken even with all schools played so far. LaSalle defeated the Campers 4-2 but lost the return game 13-6. Paw Paw blanked the Blue and White 4-0 but bowed 9-7 in the second meeting while Beall nosed out the Alleganians 9-8 but lost the series finale 11-7.

Fort Hill has copped seven games while dropping a like number. Coach "Bobby" Cavanaugh's tossers have won four of their last six skirmishes. Paw Paw has been the only team to beat the Sentinels twice.

Coach Cavanaugh said yesterday that he probably will send Richard Frey to the mound with Homer Frye doing the catching. Coach Hubert Radcliffe of Allegany will likely start Harvey Conners or Jim Gaffney.

Rookies Rap Ball; Bucs Beat Bees 7-6

PITTSBURGH, June 6. (AP)—The struggling Pittsburgh Pirates, aided by thumping triples off the bats of rookies Bob Elliott and Frankie Gustine, tallied six runs in a third inning rally today to overcome the hapless Boston Bees 7 to 6. The victory left the two teams tied for the last two posts in the National League race.

Boston grabbed an early lead in the second frame and drove Bob Klinger from the mound, the first six batters lining out safe hits to score five markers. Rip Sewell relieved the Pirates' numer 1 hurler and was credited with the victory.

Trozzo and Post Teams Win Games

Trip Trozzo's Whirlwinds won another game in the South End Booster League yesterday, tripping Lacy's Delicatets 7 to 5 at the Penn Avenue Field before a crowd of approximately 350 fans.

It was a well played, hard-hitting game with both teams putting on an errorless exhibition afield. Trozzo's banged out 11 bingles to eight by the Lacy's. Clark, Turano and Spoltore each had two bingles for the winners who were sparked by Sammy DeLuca's fine play afield.

On the Taylor Field the Post Cardinals scored four times in the seventh to pull the game out of the fire from the Davis Gassers, 4 to 3. Each team produced the same number of hits as runs, but the Davis crew was erratic afield with six miscues.

A double-header between the teams was scheduled but the first tilt was postponed when the Cardinals showed up five minutes late through a misunderstanding. It was agreed to play this game off at a later date.

Line scores:

Tackle Is Orchid-Fancier

Bob Staubitz, 270-pound tackle candidate for the University of Miami's 1940 football squad, had only one complaint to register when spring training time came around at Miami, Fla. His football chores interfered with his hobby—growing orchids. But Bob, 6 feet, 4 inches tall, occasionally found time to sneak away and admire one of his prizes just as he's doing here. He's from Buffalo, N. Y.

OPEN GOLF BECOMES ANNUAL RALLY FOR GRANTLAND RICE

By JOHN LARDNER

(Released by North American Newspaper Alliance)

They refer to Grantland Rice these days as the dean of American sports writers. His friends (whose name is legion) and his wife (whose name was Hollis before she married the Dean) call him Granny. You get the impression of age, senility, and decrepitude. If there is anybody older than Rice in this country, you figure, he has no business at large.

Well the truth is somewhat otherwise. Rice did not charge at Gettysburg with Picket, or without Pickett. He did not vote for James G. Blaine in 1884 (nor did Blaine vote for him; there was a coolness between the boys at the time). Compared to some of the sports writers I know, the fellow is a beardless rookie.

Also, compared to some of the sports writers I know he's a sports writer. The dean? That's as may be. The best. Now we're getting somewhere. The best-liked? Take it away.

Vital Statistics

Before proceeding with our account of this picturesque character, who once made an enemy back in 1922 (the guy was struck by lightning two days later, at the corner of Main and Spruce), here are some vital statistics:

He was born Henry Grantland Rice, in Murfreesboro, Tenn., at an early age.

He has written more verse than Kipling, and, between you and me, better stuff.

He will recite the verse of other poets at the drop of an anapest. The last time he misquoted a line was in the spring of 1915.

He knows 1,091,726 people by their first names, and 6,578,902 people know him.

He runs a hotel at Easthampton, L. I., and another on Fifth Avenue, New York City.

He does not write about golf from hearsay.

He gave the "Four Horsemen" of Notre Dame their name, and from what I've heard of the Horsemen since, it did them no harm financially.

On the wrong side of the ledger, I offer, the following:

Rice plays bridge.

He pours maple syrup over his sliced oranges before partaking of same, and has been known to put catsup on ice cream. All right, all right, I've got affidavits.

He received one-third of a vote for President at the Republican convention of 1920.

Speaking of votes, there was a random incident during the Presidential campaign of 1916 that serves as well as anything else to illustrate the respect and affection which Rice commands in all quarters of this country, high, low and wide — for, frankly, it would take a Tin Pan Alley lyric-writer with a good steak under his belt to say it with adjectives.

In the heat of the Hughes-Wilson dogfight in 1916, John Tecumseh Doyle, who made the odds for Broadway, got a telegram signed by a group of citizens in a small west Georgia town offering to bet $10,000 on Wilson. Doyle made inquiries before he even bothered to answer the wire, for phony propositions were pouring in, and the name of the Georgia town meant no more to him than the works of Shravinsky. He made his inquiries, and answered the telegram, and a few days later the $10,000 was banked in his name at a New York bank.

The election came and went. Doyle paid off. The winter the delegation from Georgia, i.. New York on business called around at Doyle's place to pass the time of day. Introducing himself, one of the Southerners said: "How'd you happen to take that bet of ous? You never heard of us, did you?"

"I asked Grantland Rice," said the Sage of Broadway. "He recognized the name of your town. He said the cotton crop was in and you boys probably had some loose change, sure enough."

Later, as the Georgians were weighing anchor again, Doyle asked the question that was bothering him.

"That's all right about why I took the bet," he said, "but why in hell did you people lay the dough right in my hands? How did you know I wouldn't jump to Canada with it?"

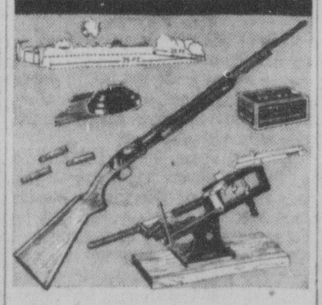

"Grantland Rice," said the visiting firemen. "We saw your name in his column. He spoke well of you."

And, strangely enough, I hear Grantland Rice well spoken of, too.

They're holding a golf tournament this week which is laughingly known as the National Open. They held it before Rice's time—I never did find out just why. You can bet they won't hold it without him again, for the thing is not a golf tournament at all — it's the annual rally of the friends and constituents of H. Grantland Rice.

"Back to Farm" Move Needed for Good of Baseball

Old Chief Bender Believes City Life Hampers Young Players

PHILADELPHIA, June 6 (AP)—You still have to keep the boys down on the farm if you expect them to become good baseball pitchers.

So believes old Chief Bender, the 56-year old Chippewa Indian who pitched himself to fame back in the early 1900's and has been around in baseball for 40 years.

"Too many kids are going to the city these days," he lamented today. "And there they don't get that practice of throwing stones — or anything — to develop the muscles necessary to pitching and control."

A case in point, the Chief said, is young Bob Feller, the Van Meter, Ia., farm boy, who has won eight—including a no-hit, no run game — against two defeats so far this season.

Bender, currently managing the Wilmington, Del., Interstate League club, a Philadelphia Athletics' farm, also believes the trouble with most modern pitchers is lack of control.

Lost Art of Game

"That's why 75 to 90 per cent of pitchers fail to find a career in the majors," he ventured. "Morning practices to improve the pitching and hitting of a team is one of the lost arts — unless some last-place club manager happens to think of it."

Back when he was pitching for Connie Mack, Bender said, "Connie used to send a boy out to steal the ball from me to get me to stop practicing. My advice to kids is to keep throwing every day. You've got to get control."

"Albert" to Connie and "Chief" to the fans, Bender won 206 major league games for the A's from 1903-1914 and for the Phillies in 1916-17. He reached his peak in 1910—eight years after he joined the A's, with 23 victories against five defeats.

"If everything depended on one game, I never worried," Connie once said. "I just used Albert, the greatest money 'pitch-aw' of all time."

"Little Elmer" Has Him A Great Big Horse; The Horse's Name It's "Fred"

"Little Elmer" Craddock, popular member of the local sporting fraternity, prefers pooches and can call off the ancestry of famous hunting hounds, but none of his many friends figured Elmer would "go to the dogs." What is meant is that he would take up "riding to the hounds."

To do that Elmer would have to have a horse, and Elmer didn't have a horse . . . to call his horse . . . until yesterday or the day before. Now Elmer does have a horse and it looks like Elmer is "going to the dogs," or rather, "going to ride to the hounds."

Leastways, friends can't figure just why Elmer bought the big bay horse that was carted into town in a trailer the other day, unless he means to ride him.

Elmer has seen the horse. It's a big horse. The horse, probably, hasn't seen Elmer. Elmer is a big fellow, which means that the horse, which name's "Fred" (which is a good name for a horse) has his work cut out for him, if 'Little Elmer" really means to ride big "Fred".

This is all in fun "Fred"!

Maryland Yacht Club Will Open Tomorrow

BALTIMORE, June 6. — Informal speedboat and cruiser races will feature the Maryland Yacht Club's annual opening-day celebration Saturday at the club's headquarters in Spring Gardens.

According to Harvey E. Reaney, chairman of the racing committee, a free-for-all speedboat race will open the program at 2:30 p. m. followed by a cruiser race for single-motored craft up to 35 feet in length and a free-for-all cruiser race.

Club activities will start at 10 a. m. when there will be an inspection of Maryland Yacht Club boats by Commander LeRoy Reinburg, of the Coast Guard, and his staff. Opening-day ceremonies will be a flag raising and greeting by Commodore R. W. Marsheck.

Predicts Record

Continue Play in CCC Golf Tourney

Second and fourth flight matches marked the continuation of play in the Cumberland Country Club annual Spring golf tournament yesterday.

In the second flight William Douglas defeated Col. Frank Halford, 4 and 2, and Elmo Gower won from William Jenkins, 2 up on the 18th.

In a fourth flight match A. W. Keight defeated William Bibby, 1 up on the 18th.

In the only women's tournament match of the day Mrs. Arden Lowndes defeated Mrs. Harry Benneman, 4 and 2.

Berkeley Panthers Split in Two Games

Berkeley Springs, W. Va., June 6—The Berkeley Springs Panthers split even in two recent baseball games, coming back to defeat Cherry Run 7-4 after losing to the Williamsport (Md.) Wildcats 3-1.

Behind the four-hit pitching of Meyers, Williamsport had little trouble winning. Only one Berkeley batsman, Edler, had more than one blow. Meyers struck out ten.

Miller, on the peak for the Panthers, allowed seven hits and fanned six. The visitors' runs came in the second and third frame while the Panthers pushed across their lone tally in the eighth as the result of an error.

Cherry Run, held in check for eight innings by Ambrose, drove out four hits in the last inning to score three runs but the rally fell short by three runs of tying the score.

Berkeley collected 11 hits and had two-run spurts in each the third and sixth frames and a three-marker outburst in the ninth. In clinching the game in the final inning, Edler, Kline, Goldstrom and B. Michael had successive hits. The scores:

WILLIAMSPORT	012 000 000—3	8	4

Williamsport—Myers and Brant. Berkeley—Miller and Waugh.

BERKELEY	002 002 003—7	14	0
CHERRY RUN	000 000 103—4	8	1

Berkeley—Ambrose and Miller. Cherry Run—F. Rhoe, Johnson and Pickett.

Devon Club Ends Tri-Towns Slump

Westernport, June 6—Devon Club's pacesetting outfit got back in the Tri-Towns Softball League win column yesterday by drubbing the WPA-Legion ten, 21-5.

"Tubby" Wilcox gave the losers five hits over the seven-inning route including two in three trips by Butler. L. Diaz had a home run and single for the Devon Club.

The McIntyre Bakers defeated the Eagles, 14-6. Robinson and Kiddy had homers and Bartlett smashed out two blows for the Bakers. "Bud" Evans collected two of the Eagles' half-dozen safeties. Five of the Baker runs were the result of errors. The scores:

WPA-LEGION	011 012 0—	5	5
DEVON CLUB	(10)32 501 x—21	14	3

WPA-Legion—Clark, Warnick and Butler. Devon Club—Wilcox and A. DiUbaldo.

McINTYRE	008 111 3—14	12	3
EAGLES	210 002 0—	6	6

McIntyre—Robinson and Humes. Eagles—I. Wilson and Hamer.

Roy Weatherly Fined For Sassing Umpire

Washington, June 6. (AP) — Roy Weatherly, Cleveland outfielder, drew a $25 fine and a three-day suspension for sassing Umpire George Moriarty in Tuesday's game with Washington, Oscar Vitt, Cleveland manager, said the news came in a telegram from President Harridge of the American League.

"I don't know what Roy said, but whatever he said it wasn't half enough," Vitt commented when Weatherly was ordered from the game.

"He didn't try to show up Moriarty in front of the crowd. He didn't kick dirt or throw his bat. He just told him what he thought of him for calling a lousy strike. If a ball player can't do that without being thrown out of the game, we'd better all take up knitting."

Allegany Under Handicap in State Meet

State Rule Real Hardship as Four Firsts Withdraw

Double-Winners Barred From More Than One Event

147 Athletes To Make Trip To College Park Tomorrow

Allegany County will send the full strength of its scholastic track and field complement to the Western Shore games tournament tomorrow but it will be like going into battle with one hand tied behind its back. The reason is that several individual event's winners have given up participation in the specialty which they won in the county meet in order to compete as members of the relay teams.

This became necesary when the State Board of Education, under the direction of which the College Park meet is held, ruled that double or triple winners in county meets can appear in only one event.

Allegany will send 147 athletes and 13 elementary and high school officials to the meet. The party will leave here tomorrow morning by train from the Queen City Station. Train time is shortly after 8 a. m. Getting up to catch the train is an athletic event in itself, and it would not surprise to find many of the youngsters pretty well fatigued before they don their track and field togs.

The return trip is scheduled to start from College Park at about 7:19 p. m.

Four Winners Out

In four individual boys' events, winners have decided to stick with victorious relay teams and let athletes who came in second, and in one instance third, represent the county.

Turner Ramey II of Beall, who won the 95-pound dodgeball throw with a distance of 93 feet, three inches, will run with the relay team and Joseph Bradley of Barton, who tossed the sphere 85 feet, seven inches, will do the honors in the dodgeball heave.

A boy who took third in the 95-pound standing broad jump will go to College Park. John Linaweaver of Beall who won the event with seven feet, six and one-half inches, and Billy Sleeman of Beall, second with seven feet, five and one-half inches, passed up this contest to take part in the relay. Claude Ravenscroft of Bruce, third with seven feet, four inches, is the broad jump replacement.

Moody Only Triple Winner

Chester Moody of Allegany, the only triple winner, will run in the 115-pound relay rather than compete in the running broad jump, which he captured, or play with the junior high softball team. Moody leaped 16 feet, six and one-half inches but Kenneth Price of Beall, who jumped 15 feet, nine inches, will be the county's representative. In the senior unlimited division, Allegany High's Vernon Miller, who won the broad jump with 20 feet, four inches, will run with Allegany's relay quartet and let the jump up to Emil DiUbaldo of Bruce who soared 19 feet, six inches.

The other double winner was Kathleen Shober of Allegany, who won and elected to remain in the standing broad jump rather than compete with the Campobello relay team. Her winning distance was seven feet, eight inches.

The Western Shore meets were started in 1938 when Washington County finished on top. Allegany County was fourth that year with 17 points.

17 Records Set In 1939

Last year, Anne Arundel counties captured honors with 76 markers while Allegany county, improving greatly on its 1938 showing, was a close second with 71½ tallies. Previous to the Shore meets, state contests were held annually at Baltimore.

Seventeen new records, with three of them being set by Alleganians, were registered in the second annual contests a year ago. Approximately 1,500 boys and girls competed at Frederick.

Allegany county stood out in the days with all its records coming in these events. Allegany High's 880-yard senior unlimited quartet of Jim Gaffney, Paul Durst, Paul Kemp and Lawrence Shaner, the same school's 660-yard junior unlimited combination of Miles Snyder, R. Serf, Miller and F. Rudd, and Beall's 95-pound 440-yard relay crew of J. Evans, K. Price, M. Duckworth and R. Watson turned in new marks.

Find to Guldahl

Cherry Hill, where he won his second national open title in 1938, is still be Ralph Guldahl's favorite course. He bagged a 65, seven under par, in a recent exhibition with Sam Snead.

Past Games Cleanest

Statistics show that Far Western football games were the cleanest in the with an average of only 28.1 yards in penalties exacted. Midwestern teams were penalized most, with an average of 37.6.

Up and Over

They Say This Newcomer Will Crack the Record Any Time Now

By AUSTIN BEALMEAR

By The (AP) Feature Service

STILLWATER, Okla.—Dust off a cloud for long Don Boydston of the Oklahoma Aggies. He high jumped to fame on his first attempt and won't be satified until he has set a new world record.

The sophomore came out of nowhere to jump 6 feet, 8¼ inches at the Southwest Exposition meet this spring.

Then, with the cross-bar set at 6 feet, 10 inches—a quarter-inch over the world mark held jointly by Cornelius Johnson and David Albritton — Boydston hurled his lean, 6-feet, 2-inch, 145 - pound body up and over.

But an elbow caught the bar, knocking it off and robbing the 19-year-old thin man of a world record in his initial varsity appearance.

That performance caused the sports world to acclaim him the season's find—but it dimmed his chances of smashing the record this year.

His takeoff leg has bothered him ever since, and in a half - dozen meets he hasn't come close to his Fort Worth mark.

But Boydston has two more years on the varsity squad. Neither he nor Coach Ralph Higgins has any doubt that he can reach 6-10, although both agree it probably won't be this year.

"I think I need warmer weather," Boydston says. "I pulled a muscle in that takeoff leg and it bothers me when the weather's cold."

He is banking on the sun to help him in the National Intercollegiate meet at Minneapolis, June 21 and 22, and in the National A.A.U. meet at Fresno, Calif., the following weekend.

Boydston, so frail he has to conserve his strength, waits until his opponents pass 6 feet, 2 inches before he starts jumping. He never jumps between meets and works out only twice a week.

His secret is a "flutter" kick which he developed when he was in grade school. He uses a variation of the western roll, taking off on his left foot after a very short run, and administers his "flutter" with his right leg at the top of his leap. The kick, he says, jerks him upward.

He never had a coach in Sand Springs, Okla., high school, but he made the high school meets by hitch-hiking six miles to Tulsa and riding with the Tulsa Central high school team.

Boydston is sports editor of the Daily O'Collegian, campus newspaper at Oklahoma A. and M., and may follow journalism as a profession, although his first ambition is to be a radio sports announcer.

The SPORT TRAIL

By WHITNEY MARTIN

NEW YORK, June 6. (AP)—Dizzy Dean has gone back to the minors, and his attempt to be philosophical about it strikes a pathetic note, particularly his hope that the southwest Sun will bring comfort to his ailing arm. The Sun for most Texas League games is supplied by the power company at so much a beam, and arc lights never cured anything but darkness.

Sure, he's been an arrogant showoff. Sure, he got in more jams than a kid in a pantry. But Dizzy Dean was great when he had it, and sometimes when he didn't and even his severest critics will miss him and hope he can come back.

The chances seem to be against it. He takes heart in the comeback of Tex Carleton, but Carleton's trouble was the arm alone, while Dizzy's goes deeper. It's his shoulder, and take it from Al Schacht, when a shoulder goes back on a pitcher he might as well start asking his friends how they're fixed for insurance.

Schacht was a pretty fair pitcher in his day. Now he's more than a pretty fair clown. A sore shoulder eased him off the mound, and this Spring he said he believed Dizzy was through.

"I described his symptons to him," Schacht said, "using my own as the example. Dizzy agreed that his symptoms were identical to mine, and I know from experience you don't get over it."

Dizzy traces his trouble to the 1937 all-star game in which he suffered a fractured toe which forced him to adopt an unnatural delivery, but the seeds of the ailment probably go farther back than that.

They probably go back to the gala year of 1934, when the great one won 30 games and lost seven for the Cardinals during the regular season, won two out of three in the world series, then embarked on a barnstorming tour during which, with Dean pride, he bore down to show the crossroad natives just how good he was.

He had good seasons in 1935 and 1936, but there is an old saying among baseball men that there are just so many pitches in an arm.

At any rate Dizzy Dean today is a far cry from the Dizzy Dean who saw the world as his oyster. It is difficult to picture the pathetically hopeful figure as the same man who just three years ago this week was reinstated by Ford Frick after suspension for alleged derogatory remarks about Frick and Umpire George Barr. That was when Dean won a moral victory by living up to his classic statement: "I ain't gonna sign nuthin.'"

Whether Dizzy can win in the Texas League is problematical. It's a fast league, and has turned out some fine ball players, including Dean himself, who was with Houston in 1930 and 1931.

Anyway, he should prove a valuable addition from a gate standpoint. He still has that intangible something called color, and if it isn't as admirable as the subdued color of a Carl Hubbell, at least it has served Dizzy well from a financial standpoint.

Keyser Bat Star Leads Swatters In Bi-State Loop

Charley Johnson Has .600 Average -- Urbas Is Runner-Up

Early Bi-State Baseball League batting averages, as compiled and releosed recently by Secretary Don Shires, show that Charley Johnson of Keyser's pacesetting Moose outfit, is on top with the extremely hight mark of .600 for four games and nine hits in 15 trips to the plate.

The figures do not include games played after Sunday, May 26, and the Westvaco A. A.-Cumberland Colt tussle of May 11 at Westernport which was protested by the Dobbins.

In the runnerup notch is Frank Urbas of the Frostburg American Legion. Playing in six games and going to bat 29 times, Urbas smashed 16 hits for an average of .592.

Three Tied At .500

"Bud" Mosser of Keyser, Charley Stahl of Westvaco and Don Lane of the Pulpmen are tied for third with .500. Each has appeared in four games with Mosser and Stahl each getting nine hits in 18 trips and Lane eight in 16.

"Jaggers" Drew of Frostburg holds sixth place with .481 for six games while "Nebs" George of the Colts and Van Roby of the Dobbins are knotted for seventh with .472. Each had played in five games when the averages were compiled and had batted 19 times.

Charley Popalo of the Midland Red Sox is ninth with .470 for four games while the "Big Ten" is completed with the addition of Joe Wagner of Frostburg who in four games batted at a .466 clip.

Urbas leads in runs with nine and has collected the greatest number of hits. He also has hit for the most bases. "Jaggers" Drew is ahead in the runs-batted-in department with ten, and Joe McGinn of Frostburg second with eight.

Marble Hits Most Doubles

"Jobie" Marble of Midland has swatted the most doubles, five; Harry Steindel of Midland is setting the pace in triples with two, and Mosser, George Netzer of Midland, McGinn and "Bee" Scarpelli of Frostburg each has clouted a home run. Joe Geatz taps baseстealers with four while another Colt, George, is second with three.

Frostburg, tied for second in the loop race with Cumberland and Westvaco, has the best team batting average with .346. Keyser is second with .313, Cumberland third with .305, Westvaco fourth with .298, Hyndman fifth with .294 and Midland last with .287.

Frostburg leads in doubles with 21, triples with five and home runs with two. The Colts top the baseстealing department with 12. Individual and team batting records follow:

Nile Kinnick Receives Scholarship at Iowa

Iowa City, Iowa, June 6. (AP)—Nile Kinnick, All-America halfback, yesterday was awarded a scholarship in the college of law at the University of Iowa graduation exercises.

Kinnick has indicated he will enter the law college here next fall, passing up a professional football career.

Gallahadion Wins Support as Horse To Take Belmont

Bimelech Works Beyond Distance for Race Tomorrow

NEW YORK, June 6 (AP) — The word around Belmont is that Saturday's Belmont Stakes is as wide open as the mouth of New York's Holland tunnel.

However, Gallahadion, Mrs. Ethel V. Mars' Kentucky Derby winner, gained new support by his latest workout, turning in a 2.36 3-5 performance over the full mile-and-a-half route with speed to spare. He was caught at the mile in 1.42.

Bimelech's Latest

Bimelech's latest had him moving a mile and five-eighths in 2.50, a departure from his regular training and a good move to prevent his being short Saturday. He went the mile in 1.46 3-5 and looked good going out the final quarter in.23 2-5.

Your Chance off his victory Monday over Century Note and Andy K, has a world of supporters around the track.

Juveniles

Latest press releases bring word that four of the 2-year-old stakes in the offing are going to be well filled with the class of the juveniles.

These are the Polly Drummond at Delaware and the Joliet at Lincoln, both on Saturday, and Arlington's rich pair — the Lassie for fillies on July 13 and the Futurity on July 27.

Mrs. N. K. Beal's Hardy Bud, winner of two straight — the last a five-eighths affair in 1:00 2-5 — will bear watching in the Polly Drummond.

Fifteen are expected to go postward in the Joliet, including the undefeated mid-westerner, Clarksville, winner of four straight. The Lassie still has 77 eligible and the Futurity 107, including 13 nominated by E. F. Woodward of Texas (Valdina Farms). If 15 go in the Futurity, it'll be worth some $61,000.

Howard Pair

Charles S. Howard's Kayak and Mioland are about recovered from their ailments and nearly ready for shipments back to California from the East. With them, the Pacific Coast sportman wil have his "Varsity" ready for both the Hollywood Gold Cup and the Hollywood Derby.

Kayak, Mioland, The Surprising Alvocator and Count D'Or are eligible for the $50,000-added cup event. Mioland, Driza (a sister to Kayak), Suoto (a full brother to Sorteado) and Diafano (big South American by Kayak's sire) are the Derby nominees.

Grounded

First jockey suspension of the Delaware meeting was handed out yesterday to Roy Duncan, Columbus, (Ohio) Apprentice. He was set down for five days for rough riding aboard War Streak in Tuesday's eighth race.

Vino Puro

There's quite a "wondering" session going on at Lincoln Fields these days over the Argentine-bred Vino Puro.

Horatio Luro, Argentine sportsman, brought him to this country and sold him to Mrs. J. F. Waters, San Francisco socialite. He won a mile-and-sixteenth handicap at Santa Anita during the winter by seven lengths in 1.43 3-5 eased up, beating Airflame, No Competition and some other better-than-fair steppers.

Shipped to Lincoln Fields, he has twice been entered in stakes—and twice scratched. And now everyone's wondering why. Trainer Euall Wyatt just shrugs his shoulders and promises: "Oh, he'll be stepping out soon —and when he does, you'll see a good stepper."

Boxers of Every Race Known by Irish Names

Some great names have been written into the records of the ring, but only those who remember the fighters as active participants recall that Hugo Kelly, Jim Flynn, Frankie Conley, Jasck Sharkey, (the bantamweight) and Eddie Shea were Italians, Mushy Callahan, Tommny Ryan and a host of others were of Jewish origin. Jack Sharkey was of Lithuanian extraction. Tommy Burns, a French-Canadian; Joe Gorman, a Mexican, and Billy Murray, a Portuguese.

Just three have been same true sons of Erin who have reached the heights, writes Bill McKinnon in "The Columbus Dispatch." Notable among the have been John L. Sullivan, Jim Corbett, Eddie McGoorty, Jimmy Clabby, Harry Gilmore, Johnny Kilbane, Jack Dempsey, Toby Irwin, Terry McGovern, Jake Kilrain, Iish Patsy Kline, Jim Jeffries, Mike and Tom Gibbons, Milke McTigue, Jim Braddock, Bryan Downey, Jock Malone, Packey McFarland and Gene Tunney.

Homer Off Bill Terry

Snead Shoots Dazzling 67 to Lead Open

Mountaineer Five Under Par, Paces Field Two Strokes

Smith, Oliver and Parks Trail Him--Hogan Scores 70

By GAYLE TALBOT

CANTERBURY GOLF COURSE, CLEVELAND, June 6 (AP) — Sam Snead, the heart-broken boy of a year ago, came back today to shoot a dazzling 67 in the opening round of the National Open golf championship.

Sam's score, 5 under par and the best first round ever shot in the long history of the open, was the final answer to those who wondered whether the lanky mountaineer could come back from the disaster that struck him last year on the outskirts of Philadelphia when he threw the championship with an incredible eight on the 72nd hole.

Sam shot one of the greatest rounds of his career today and fully justified the faith of the bookmakers who had made him a joint favorite with Ben Hogan at odds of 6 to 1 to win this tournament.

Game Sheer Artistry

In clipping five strokes from Canterbury's par, Snead had the benefit of a calm, hot day, and the hills rolled a mile. He missed only two shots, and each time he made brilliant recoveries. He stroked his way around the long, tortuous course in 13 pars and 5 birdies. It was sheer artistry, a record for the course.

Tonight Slammin' Sam was two full strokes ahead of all pursuers. Bracketed at 69 were Horton Smith, Lloyd Oliver and Sam Parks, three well-known stars. Parks won the championship in 1935 at Oakmont, the year they said it was an "accident." His score of 34-35 today came as a jolt.

Three more were tied at 70 — Ky Ogan, Vic Ghezzi and Al Huske, of Dekalb, Ill. Hogan, who has won the most money of any of them the past Winter, played with a cold and was running a temperature.

Bracketed at 71 were Gene Sarazen, Leland Gibson, of Kansas City, Dandy Gibson, of Baltimore, Henry Kaiser of Racine, Wis., and Robert Hobbish, an amateur out of Rochester, Mich. Marvin (Bud) Ward, the amateur champion from Spokane, Wash., practically shot himself out of the tournament with a 78.

Many Off to Weak Start

Some of those who had been expected to give Snead his opposition broke away to a weak start. Ralph Guldahl, winner of the open in 1937 and 1938, landed in a big group at 72 with Byron Nelson, defending champion, had a 72, along with Craig Wood, Leonard Dobson, Sam Byrd and Matt Kowal.

Henry Picard, the PGA champion, had another 73, as also were Johnny Revolta, Jimmy Hines, Tommy Armour, Ray Mangrum, Ed Dudley, Denny Shute, Walsh and others.

Paul Runyan soared to a two-under-par 74, along with Harold (Jug) McSpaden, Jimmy Demaret, Vic Ghezzi, Laffoon, Dutch Harrison and Henry Chapman, the amateur.

From there on the scores ran unusually high. Dick Metz soared to 76, together with such well known stick wielders as Johnny Farrell, Ky Manero, Lloyd Mangrum, Sammy Bulla and Bill Barbour. Byron Haefner treated himself to 77, as also did Harry Cooper and Craig were out of it.

Johnny Goodman, the former amateur and open champion, had 82 and Johnny Thomson an 80. Ky played with Walter Hagen, who showed up late and was not playing any too serious about another open championship, more or less.

Oakland Softball Loop Schedule Opens June 18

OAKLAND, June 6 (Special)—Oakland's church softball league will get under way on Tuesday, June 18, it was announced following a meeting of the executive committee this evening.

The committee made up the schedule of games to be played and ironed out other details of the season's program. The games are to be played on the high school field, Eighth and Green streets, and will be of seven innings each. Players are to be required to be on the field at six o'clock p. m., and the games will start at 6:15. It was also announced that the winning team will receive a trophy donated by the Wilson Hardware Company, of Cumberland.

In preparation for the opening game practice sessions will be held Wednesday and Thursday evenings, June 12 and 13.

The schedule is as follows:

Methodists vs. Episcopals, June 18, August 1, August 22.
Lutherans vs. Catholics, June 20, August 6 and August 27.
Methodists vs. Methodists, June 25, August 8 and August 29.
Catholics vs. Lutherans, June 27, August 13 and September.
Episcopals vs. Catholics, July 2, August 15 and September 5.
Lutherans vs. Episcopals, July 9, August 20 and Sept. 10.

Indian Keystone Combination Goes On Hitting Spree

Boudreau and Mack Chief Figures in Eleven Inning 5-4 Win

WASHINGTON, June 6. (AP)—Lou Boudreau and Ray Mack, the Cleveland Indians sensational keystone combination, today put on a hitting act to beat the Washington Senators 5 to 4 in 11 innings.

Mack tied it up for the Indians in the 8th when he belted a homer into the left field bleachers with Beau Bell on base, and Boudreau won the game when he singled Frank Pytlak home in the 11th. Pytlak had tripled with none out.

Cubs Clout Ball To Trounce Phils 11-5

CHICAGO, June 6. (AP) — Bill Nicholson homered twice and Phil Cavarretta hit three consecutive doubles today as Chicago's Cubs went on their 1940 biggest batting spree—17 hits for 31 bases — to trounce the Philadelphia Phillies 11 to 5 and sweep the three game series.

Bill Lee was credited with his fifth triumph against seven defeats although Jake Mooty had to finish for him.

Dodgers Narrow Reds' Lead on Win

ST. LOUIS, June 6. (AP) — The Brooklyn Dodgers built their latest winning streak to five games today with a 9 to 5 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals to narrow the gap between Cincinnati's idle league leaders to .004 in the standings.

Luke Hamlin was hit hard, including the 15th home run of the season by John Mize and another by Joe Orengo, but the Dodgers jumped out in front with four runs in the third and old "hot potato" got credit for his fourth victory even though he didn't go the route.

The Dodgers got their margin by batting around against Piddler Bill McGee and Ernie White in the third.

THE SECOND ROUND.

CLEVELAND—The second round at a National Open also has its share of jittery locations. There are two main elements involved, which the reader can follow from the first day's scoring—

1. The battle offered by the leading eight or ten to hold their places near the front.

2. The harder battle on the part of those more than five or six strokes away to crowd back into closer running.

For example, few who have been more than five or six strokes away on Friday's close have had much of a chance on the final day. Under normal scoring conditions those still carrying the championship torch shouldn't be over 146. They have too much to make up in the stretch.

If those who had a good round on Thursday can add another good round on Friday, they are well set for the final spin. Those who were slightly off on Thursday can still close the gap by a good Friday showing.

The Big Maulers

The three longest hitters in the field are still Jimmy Thomson, Sam Snead and Ben Hogan. From this group Thomson has the longest carry, while Snead and Hogan make up their ground with carry and roll.

This trio is really terrific where length is concerned. And Hogan, at 132 stripped, is still the marvel of the field. Thomson weighs 190. Snead, an all-around athlete, strong and wiry, weighs 175. Hogan is nearly 60 pounds lighter than Thonson and around 45 pounds below Snead.

Yet when all three really hit the ball there is little to spare, a few yards at best. Craig Wood, with a much shorter back swing, isn't far behind the trio named. Wood, another all-around athlete, is a 200-pounder.

But there is one detail you can notice—all four mentioned have big, strong hands and wrists and well-developed forearms.

How far can they drive? From 250 to 280 yards without a baked turf or a favoring wind. Under better conditions they can pass 300.

Demaret is fairly long—quite long enough—with no great effort shown in one of golf's smoothest and best-timed swings. Demaret also has big hands and powerful forearms.

"They count most in swinging the club," he tells you. "This is what to think first."

Iron Players.

Two of the better long-iron players are Demaret and Picard. There are no better from 190 to 220 yards. Snead also belongs in this class. Ben Hogan can also manipulate a long iron with the best.

The best spoon player in the field is Paul Runyan, who needs this club more than the longer hitters. Paul has a flock of spoons and he is deadly with most of them.

Runyan is also one of the best from 140 yards to the bottom of the cup, where his controlled short game makes up for his lack of range against the mastodon maulers.

There is always an argument about the best putters. There was a day when Runyan, Revolta and Horton Smith lead the pack in this respect.

Runyan is still one of the best. Horton Smith is top man on the long approach putts, from 40 to 60 feet away. Demaret, Hogan and Nelson are all consistent on the green carpet and so is Henry Picard. Craig Wood can have brilliant days, and when he is good around the pin he is always up or near the front.

There is still no putter in the field who surpasses the Walter Hagen of ten years ago.

The fastest putter in the field is Gene Sarazen, who takes one quick look at the line, and then strokes the ball. It would help pace the field far better if many more used the Sarazen system. There are too many engineers within range of the cup who put on too many surveying acts.

In regard to bunker play, the modern wedge has made a tremendous difference. Few have any trouble now in placing the ball near the cup from almost any sort of sanded location.

The playing qualities of this field are well matched among the first twenty. As usual, it gets down to a matter of concentration and determiantion through the three-day grind, especially on Saturday when they all have to fire both barrels.

This matter of concentration and determination is the most important factor in the field in such a 72-hole test. Here we find Demaret, Hogan and Nelson at their best. Also Gene Sarazen.—(Released by North American Newspaper Alliance.)

5,500 YEARS--AND LITTLE CHANGE

Experts say the Saluki hound probably has changed less down through the ages than any other breed of dog. As proof, they point to findings of archaeologists at Tepe Gawra, a mountain in Northeastern Iraq. In a mound there scientists found a dog's skull identical with the skull of the Saluki hound of today, shown here. Rare in America, the breed is prized in Persia as a hunter. Some have been clocked at speeds as great as 50 miles an hour—and because of their great stamina have been known literally to run rabbits to death. The breed has become better known in America in the last few years through the dog show exploits of Marjan II, owned by Mrs. Anna Marie Paterno of Irvington on Hudson, N. Y. Marjan II was exhibited at the recent opening in New York of an exhibition of Persian art which included some of the prehistoric objects taken from the Tepe Gawra mound.

White Sox Come From Behind Twice To Beat Yanks 4-3

Chicago Takes Series off Champs with Ninth Inning Rally

NEW YORK, June 6. (AP)—The Chicago White Sox came from behind twice today to take the deciding game of their series with the world champion Yankees 4 to 3.

Their two-run winning rally in the ninth victimized Spud Chandler, who had allowed only three hits in the first eight frames. Chandler was replaced by Johnny Murphy.

Chicago had come from behind in the sixth with two runs on one hit, a single followed by a hit batsman, a sacrifice and an error.

John Shelton Named Coach at Keyser Hi

KEYSER, W. Va., June 6 —John Shelton, former Davis and Elkins athletic star and coach of basketball last year at Elk Garden, has been named coach for the Keyser High school basketball and football teams by the Mineral County Board of Education. He succeeds Homer Fizer, who asked for a leave of absence that he might become director of physical education and coach of football and basketball at University High School, Morgantown. He was coach at Keyser High for the past five years.

Parasang Now Rates As Whitney's "Ace"

BALTIMORE, June 6.—Parasang, a son of Halcyon, started out the year as the "third-stringer" in Sonny Whitney's stable, behind Carrier Pigeon and Flight Command. But those two have been distance disappointments, while Parasang now has two good victories to his credit in three outings. He won the experimental handicap at Jamaica, worth $3,750, and yesterday scored easily over ten others, in the Swift Stakes by three lengths to pick up another $4,150.

Buddy Baer Scores One Round Kayo; Pat Comiskey Beats Dudas

NEW YORK, June 6 (AP) — Buddy Baer dropped a fast-exploding bomb in Madison Square Garden's ring tonight and it blew Valentin Campolo to sleep in less than two minutes, thereby bouncing Max's kid brother up quite a few notches in the heavyweight ranks. Buddy weighed 246, his Argentine rival 225.

By his kayo in 1:53 of the first round, Baer not only stayed in the heavyweight "elimination tournament" promoter Mike Jacobs has brewing, but his performance completely overshadowed the victorious return of Pat Comiskey, young Paterson, N. J. Irishman, to the ring wars. Pat punched out an eight-round decision over Steve Dudas, the only man ever to beat him.

Jacobs announced immediately after the show, which grossed $9,978, that Buddy and Pat would tangle early in August.

Foxx's Homer in Ninth Wins for Grove 3-1

Two On; Two Out And Two Strikes On Him at Time

Frank Merriwell Climax Gives Vet Third Win of Year

First Time He Has Gone Route Since Opener at Washington

BOSTON, June 6. (AP)—Captain Jimmy Foxx's 14th homer of the season, made with two out, two mates on and two strikes against him in the ninth inning, enabled the veteran Lefty Bob Grove to gain his third 1940 victory for the Red Sox today, a 3-1 decision over the St. Louis Browns.

It was the first time the venerable southpaw had gone the full distance since he opened the Red Sox's season with a two-hit performance against the Washington Senators.

Grove gave six hits, two passes and had six strikeouts, but one of the St. Louis hits was a seventh inning homer by Chet Laabs.

Don DiMaggio opened the Boston ninth attack against Emil Bildilli, the Brown's rookie southpaw, by lashing out a two-bagger. DiMaggio made third when Doc Cramer flied out. After Ted Williams was passed, Foxx poled a drive into the left field screen to boost his runs driven in total to 48.

Eddie Brennan Busy With Steeplechasers At Delaware Park

DELAWARE PARK, June 6—With six hunt clubs within a fifty-mile radius of this William du Pont-constructed course, steeplechasing is a popular branch of the sport and plenty of excitement in this division is promised with the beginning of infield activity next Wednesday.

Racing Secretary Edward J. Brennan, who is considered tops in the business of arranging jumping races, asserts the strongest division of timber-toppers ever to race here will be on hand for the last eighteen days of the meeting.

Steeplechase racing has not started here yet, due to the fact it would have conflicted with the hedge-hopping at Belmont Park. The New York track closes its gates on Saturday, then at least fifty jumpers will head for this greensward.

These thoroughbreds, added to the forty-eight already on the grounds and an equal number at Fair Hill, ten miles up the road, should enable Brennan to arrange an infield contest for each day's program.

Heading the jumpers coming from Belmont are Thomas Hitchcock's Annibal and Louis B. Mayer's Ossabaw, who met in a special match race at the Westchester track today, which was won by Annibal.

While these two horses were selected as the best timber-toppers seen at Belmont, they are not what can be called standouts in the division and there is a very good chance of one or two jumpers putting them in the backgrounds here at Delaware.

Ready to take a crack at the match-race runers will be Ambrose Clark's Bachelor Philip, Torturer and Lancastrian; C. Mahlon Kline's Whaddon Chase, which thrilled Maryland racegoers at Pimlico; Brandywine's Blanket; Groton Stable's Saluda; W. M. Jefford's Warspite; Emile Pfizer's Farndale, champion jumper of last season on his hunt-meet figures; Rokeby Stable's Good Chance and Jack Skinner's Mad Policy.

All of these horses are eligible for the three steeplechase stakes to be run here—the $6,000 Georgetown Steeplechase Handicap, at two miles and a half, on June 26; and the $2,500 Vigmead Steeplechase Handicap, at two miles and a half, on July 3.

Local 1874 Will Play at Moorefield on Sunday

Local 1874 baseball team will go to Moorefield, W. Va., Sunday to play the Moorefield Moose Lodge 358 in the first game of the season for the Celanese clubbers. The Local lineup will be selected from; Dale Broadwater, Dean Broadwater, A. Bradley, R. Long, S. Hawse, B. Frantz, L. Irvins, H. Hahn, B. Orndorff, J. Wells and G. Allen.

Dykes Says White Sox Will Worry Everybody

By JOHN LARDNER

NEW YORK, June 6 — It's a pleasure to converse with James J. Dykes, of the Chicago White Sox. He says what he thinks, one of the few big league managers to do so since Rogers Hornsby's time.

"What are they kidding around about?" demands Mr. Dykes, warming up for his afternoon's social engagement with the umpires by sticking his lower lip well out and assuming a cold, hostile stare. "The Yankees are the best team in our league. Boston is good. Cleveland is nothing. And my team will make trouble for all of 'em."

Where does Mr. Dykes get these strange restless notions? Well he's about to tell you.

"The yanks have got too much pitching," he says. "Boston hasn't got enough, but how those guys can powder the ball! Cleveland? Now listen. I have no grudge against Cleveland, outside of the fact that I would like to lick 'em every day and twice on Sunday, but why is Cleveland any better than they were last year?

Where Is the Hitting?

"The new shortstop and the new second baseman? Boudreau and Mack? All right, so those boys can come up with the ball now and then and make a double play. But where is all the hitting they're supposed to do? I haven't seen it. Maybe Boudreau and Mack save their base hits for the other clubs. That suits me.

"Oscar Vitt is short on pitching. After Feller and Milnar, what can Vitt say but that he's sorry? Those two fellows are his pitching staff, with maybe Harder winning a few in the hot weather, if it's not too hot. Al Smith? Say, I can throw the ball harder than that left-hander. What's more, I often do."

Mr. Dykes then rambles on about his own ball club, which is here and there in the second division.

"You think we're not going any place? Well, all I can say is, for a team that's not going any place, we're tough to beat. We do the rest of the league a favor by knocking off the Yankees and Red Sox this trip, but we don't get any gratitude. There ain't any gratitude.

"My team," continues Mr. Dykes, "could use a couple more pitchers, I grant you, but what's wrong with the rest of it? Mike Kreevich is one of the greatest players in the game. No, nobody ever heard of him. I guess that's what happens to a man when he keeps his trap shut. Taft Wright is banging the ball for me, and he's a better outfielder since he came to us from Washington. I'm not shedding any tears for Gee Walker, who was traded for Wright.

Nothing Wrong with Infield

"Tresh is a fine catcher. Nothing wrong with my infield, either. They come up with the ball. Kuhel and McNair can hit. Appling is still one of the toughest men in the league to pitch to. And young Kennedy, at third base — well, take a look at him," says Mr. Dykes, resting his case.

Young Robert Kennedy, at third base for Chicago, is worth looking at. He may or may not be the best rookie to break into major league baseball this year, as Mr. Dykes says he is, but there is no mistaking the young man's class. He behaves like a ball player.

Kennedy belongs to the school of big, powerful third basemen who dominate the American League today and give it a mighty margin over the National League at that position — Ken Keltner, of Cleveland; Pinky Higgins, of Detroit; Harlond Clift, of St. Louis; Buddy Lewis (when he plays there), of Washington; Red Rolfe, of the Yankees; and Jim Tabor, of Boston.

His throwing arm has to be seen to be believed. Tabor throws as strongly, but he throws all over the lot. Kennedy has not given Joe Kuhel, the White Sox first baseman, a hard chance on a catch all season. The other day, against the Yankees, he made the best play, on a brutal smash by Joe DiMaggio, that I have seen a third baseman make since Pie Traynor's day. Maybe he won't hit much. He won't have to hit more than .280 to become a great third baseman.

Such are the White Sox of Chicago, and if they're not going any place, they're going there under a good, plain-spoken, hard-fighting manager.

Fort Hill Meets Allegany Today In "Title" Game

Sentinels Must Win or Be Content with Triple Deadlock

The 1940 scholastic baseball season in this section will draw to a close here this afternoon when Allegany and Fort Hill combinations meet in an intra-city engagement on the Campobello diamond at 4 o'clock.

Fort Hill's Sentinels, who were stopped by LaSalle 6-3 earlier this week for their first setback in the city series, can capture the championship by beating the Campers. If Allegany should win, then all three schools would finish in a deadlock with a record of two victories and as many defeats.

The West Siders have a better record than the Sentinels and will be slight favorites to even accounts for a 4-2 defeat they suffered last week.

Allegany has won eight of 12 battles and has at least broken even with all schools played so far. LaSalle defeated the Campers 4-2 but lost the return game 13-6. Paw Paw blanked the Blue and White 4-0 but bowed 9-7 in the second meeting while Beall nosed out the Alleganians 9-8 but lost the series finale 11-7.

Fort Hill has copped seven games while dropping a like number. Coach "Bobby" Cavanaugh's tossers have won four of their last six skirmishes. Paw Paw has been the only team to beat the Sentinels twice.

Coach Cavanaugh said yesterday that he probably will send Richard Frey to the mound with Homer Frye doing the catching. Coach Hubert Radcliffe of Allegany will likely start Harvey Conners or Jim Gaffney.

Rookies Rap Ball; Bucs Beat Bees 7-6

PITTSBURGH, June 6. (AP)—The struggling Pittsburgh Pirates, aided by thumping triples off the bats of rookies Bob Elliott and Frankie Gustine, tallied six runs in a third inning rally today to overcome the hapless Boston Bees 7 to 6. The victory left the two teams tied for the last two posts in the National League race.

Boston grabbed an early lead in the second frame and drove Bob Klinger from the mound, the first six batters lining out safe hits to score five markers. Rip Sewell relieved the Pirates' numer 1 hurler and was credited with the victory.

Trozzo and Post Teams Win Games

Trip Trozzo's Whirlwinds won another game in the South End Booster League yesterday, tripping Lacy's Delicatets 7 to 5 at the Penn Avenue Field before a crowd of approximately 350 fans.

It was a well played, hard-hitting game with both teams putting on an errorless exhibition afield. Trozzo's banged out 11 bingles to eight by the Lacy's. Clark, Turano and Spoltore each had two bingles for the winners who were sparked by Sammy DeLuca's fine play afield.

On the Taylor Field the Post Cardinals scored four times in the seventh to pull the game out of the fire from the Davis Gassers, 4 to 3. Each team produced the same number of hits as runs, but the Davis crew was erratic afield with six miscues.

A double-header between the teams was scheduled but the first tilt was postponed when the Cardinals showed up five minutes late through a misunderstanding. It was agreed to play this game off at a later date.

Line scores:

Tackle Is Orchid-Fancier

Bob Staubitz, 270-pound tackle candidate for the University of Miami's 1940 football squad, had only one complaint to register when spring training time came around at Miami, Fla. His football chores interfered with his hobby—growing orchids. But Bob, 6 feet, 4 inches tall, occasionally found time to sneak away and admire one of his prizes just as he's doing here. He's from Buffalo, N. Y.

OPEN GOLF BECOMES ANNUAL RALLY FOR GRANTLAND RICE

On the eve of the start of the 1940 National Open Golf Championship at the Canterbury Golf Club at Cleveland, O., friends and admirers of Grantland Rice among the nation's sports writers and golfers gave a banquet in his honor and presented him with a gold mashie. Here one of Rice's colleagues seizes the occasion to set down some observations on the career of the dean of American sports writers.

By JOHN LARDNER

(Released by North American Newspaper Alliance)

They refer to Grantland Rice these days as the dean of American sports writers. His friends (whose name is legion) and his wife (whose name was Hollis before she married the Dean) call him Granny. You get the impression of age, senility, and decrepitude. If there is anybody older than Rice in this country, you figure, he has no business at large.

Well the truth is somewhat otherwise. Rice did not charge at Gettysburg with Picket, or without Pickett. He did not vote for James G. Blaine in 1884 (nor did Blaine vote for him; there was a coolness between the boys at the time). Compared to some of the sports writers I know, the fellow is a beardless rookie.

Also, compared to some of the sports writers I know he's a sports writer. The dean? That's as may be. The best. Now we're getting somewhere. The best-liked? Take it away.

Vital Statistics

Before proceeding with our account of this picturesque character, who once made an enemy back in 1922 (the guy was struck by lightning two days later, at the corner of Main and Spruce), here are some vital statistics:

He was born Henry Grantland Rice, in Murfreesboro, Tenn., at an early age.

He has written more verse than Kipling, and, between you and me, better stuff.

He will recite the verse of other poets at the drop of an anapest. The last time he misquoted a line was in the spring of 1915.

He knows 1,091,726 people by their first names, and 6,578,902 people know him.

He runs a hotel at Easthampton, L. I., and another on Fifth Avenue, New York City.

He does not write about golf from hearsay.

He gave the "Four Horsemen" of Notre Dame their name, and from what I've heard of the Horsemen since, it did them no harm financially.

On the wrong side of the ledger, I offer, the following:

Rice plays bridge.

He pours maple syrup over his sliced oranges before partaking of same, and has been known to put catsup on ice cream. All right, all right, I've got affidavits.

He received one-third of a vote for President at the Republican convention of 1920.

Speaking of votes, there was a random incident during the Presidential campaign of 1916 that serves as well as anything else to illustrate the respect and affection which Rice commands in all quarters of this country, high, low and wide — for, frankly, it would take a Tin Pan Alley lyric-writer with a good steak under his belt to say it with adjectives.

In the heat of the Hughes-Wilson dogfight in 1916, John Tecumseh Doyle, who made the odds for Broadway, got a telegram signed by a group of citizens in a small west Georgia town offering to bet $10,000 on Wilson. Doyle made inquiries before he even bothered to answer the wire, for phony propositions were pouring in, and the name of the Georgia town meant no more to him than the works of Shravinsky. He made his inquiries, and answered the telegram, and a few days later the $10,000 was banked in his name at a New York bank.

The election came and went. Doyle paid off. The winter the delegation from Georgia, i. New York on business called around at Doyle's place to pass the time of day. Introducing himself, one of the Southerners said: "How'd you happen to take that bet of ous? You never heard of us, did you?"

"I asked Grantland Rice," said the Sage of Broadway. "He recognized the name of your town. He said the cotton crop was in and you boys probably had some loose change, sure enough."

Later, as the Georgians were weighing anchor again, Doyle asked the question that was bothering him.

"That's all right about why I took the bet," he said, "but why in hell did you people lay the dough right in my hands? How did you know I wouldn't jump to Canada with it?"

"Grantland Rice," said the visiting firemen. "We saw your name in his column. He spoke well of you."

And, strangely enough, I hear Grantland Rice well spoken of, too.

They're holding a golf tournament this week which is laughingly known as the National Open. They held it before Rice's time—I never did find out just why. You can bet they won't hold it without him again, for the thing is not a golf tournament at all — it's the annual rally of the friends and constituents of H. Grantland Rice.

"Back to Farm" Move Needed for Good of Baseball

Old Chief Bender Believes City Life Hampers Young Players

PHILADELPHIA, June 6 (AP)—You still have to keep the boys down on the farm if you expect them to become good baseball pitchers.

So believes old Chief Bender, the 56-year old Chippewa Indian who pitched himself to fame back in the early 1900's and has been around in baseball for 40 years.

"Too many kids are going to the city these days," he lamented today. "And there they don't get that practice of throwing stones — or anything — to develop the muscles necessary to pitching and control."

A case in point, the Chief said, is young Bob Feller, the Van Meter, Ia., farm boy, who has won eight—including a no-hit, no run game — against two defeats so far this season.

Bender, currently managing the Wilmington, Del., Interstate League club, a Philadelphia Athletics' farm, also believes the trouble with most modern pitchers is lack of control.

Lost Art of Game

"That's why 75 to 90 per cent of pitchers fail to find a career in the majors," he ventured. "Morning practices to improve the pitching and hitting of a team is one of the lost arts — unless some last-place club manager happens to think of it."

Back when he was pitching for Connie Mack, Bender said, "Connie used to send a boy out to steal the ball from me to get me to stop practicing. My advice to kids is to keep throwing every day. You've got to get control."

"Albert" to Connie and "Chief" to the fans, Bender won 206 major league games for the A's from 1903-1914 and for the Phillies in 1916-17. He reached his peak in 1910—eight years after he joined the A's, with 23 victories against five defeats.

"If everything depended on one game, I never worried," Connie once said. "I just used Albert, the greatest money 'pitch-aw' of all time."

"Little Elmer" Has Him A Great Big Horse; The Horse's Name It's "Fred"

"Little Elmer" Craddock, popular member of the local sporting fraternity, prefers pooches and can call off the ancestry of famous hunting hounds, but none of his many friends figured Elmer would "go to the dogs." What is meant is that he would take up "riding to the hounds."

To do that Elmer would have to have a horse, and Elmer didn't have a horse . . . to call his horse . . . until yesterday or the day before. Now Elmer does have a horse and it looks like Elmer is "going to the dogs," or rather, "going to ride to the hounds."

Leastways, friends can't figure just why Elmer bought the big bay horse that was carted into town in a trailer the other day, unless he means to ride him.

Elmer has seen the horse. It's a big horse. The horse, probably, hasn't seen Elmer. Elmer is a big fellow, which means that the horse, which name's "Fred" (which is a good name for a horse) has his work cut out for him, if 'Little Elmer" really means to ride big "Fred".

This is all in fun "Fred"!

Maryland Yacht Club Will Open Tomorrow

BALTIMORE, June 6. — Informal speedboat and cruiser races will feature the Maryland Yacht Club's annual opening-day celebration Saturday at the club's headquarters in Spring Gardens.

According to Harvey E. Reaney, chairman of the racing committee, a free-for-all speedboat race will open the program at 2:30 p. m. followed by a cruiser race for single-motored craft up to 35 feet in length and a free-for-all cruiser race.

Club activities will start at 10 a. m. when there will be an inspection of Maryland Yacht Club boats by Commander LeRoy Reinburg, of the Coast Guard, and his staff. Opening-day ceremonies will be a flag raising and greeting by Commodore R. W. Marsheck.

Predicts Record

Continue Play in CCC Golf Tourney

Second and fourth flight matches marked the continuation of play in the Gumberland Country Club annual Spring golf tournament yesterday.

In the second flight William Douglas defeated Col. Frank Halford, 4 and 2, and Elmo Gower won from William Jenkins, 2 up on the 18th.

In a fourth flight match A. W. Keight defeated William Bibby, 1 up on the 18th.

In the only women's tournament match of the day Mrs. Arden Lowndes defeated Mrs. Harry Benjaman, 4 and 2.

State Rule Real Hardship as Four Firsts Withdraw

Double-Winners Barred From More Than One Event

147 Athletes To Make Trip To College Park Tomorrow

Allegany County will send the full strength of its scholastic track and field complement to the Western Shore games tournament tomorrow but it will be like going into battle with one hand tied behind its back. The reason is that several individual event's winners have given up participation in the specialty which they won in the county meet in order to compete as members of the relay teams.

This became necesary when the State Board of Education, under the direction of which the College Park meet is held, ruled that double or triple winners in county meets can appear in only one event.

Allegany will send 147 athletes and 13 elementary and high school officials to the meet. The party will leave here tomorrow morning by train from the Queen City Station. Train time is shortly after 6 a. m. Getting up to catch the train is an athletic event in itself, and it would not surprise to find many of the youngsters pretty well fatigued before they don their track and field togs.

The return trip is scheduled to start from College Park at about 7:19 p. m.

Four Winners Out

In four individual boys' events, winners have decided to stick with victorious relay teams and let athletes who came in second, and in one instance third, represent the county.

Turner Ramey II of Beall, who won the 95-pound dodgeball throw with a distance of 93 feet, three inches, will run with the relay team and Joseph Bradley of Barton, who tossed the sphere 85 feet, seven inches, will do the honors in the dodgeball heave.

A boy who took third in the 95-pound standing broad jump will go to College Park. John Linaweaver of Beall who won the event with seven feet, six and one-half inches, and Billy Sleeman of Beall, second with seven feet, five and one-half inches, passed up this contest to take part in the relay. Claude Ravenscroft of Bruce, third with seven feet, four inches, is the broad jump replacement.

Moody Only Triple Winner

Chester Moody of Allegany, the only triple winner, will run in the 95-pound relay rather than compete in the running broad jump, which he captured, or play with the junior high softball team. Moody shaped 16 feet, six and one-half inches but Kenneth Price of Beall, who jumped 15 feet, nine inches, will be the county's representative. In the senior unlimited division, Allegany High's Vernon Miller, who won the broad jump with 20 feet, four inches, will run with Allegany's relay quartet and let the jump up to Emil DiUbaldo of Bruce who soared 19 feet, six inches.

The other double winner was Kathleen Shober of Allegany, who won and elected to remain in the standing broad jump rather than compete with the Campobello relay team. Her winnifig distance was seven feet, eight inches.

The Western Shore meets were started in 1938 when Washington County finished on top. Allegany County was fourth that year with 7 points.

17 Records Set In 1939

Last year, Anne Arundel counties captured honors with 76 markers while Allegany county, improving greatly on its 1938 showing, was a close second with 71½ tallies. Previous to the Shore meets, state tests were held annually at Baltimore.

Seventeen new records, with three of them being set by Alleganians, were registered in the second annual contests a year ago. Approximately 1,500 boys and girls competed at Frederick.

Allegany county stood out in the days with all its records coming in these events. Allegany High's 880-yard senior unlimited quartet of Jim Gaffney, Paul Durst, Paul Camp and Lawrence Shaner, the latter school's 660-yard junior unlimited combination of Miles Snyder, R. Serf, Miller and F. Rudd, and Beall's 95-pound 440-yard relay crew of J. Evans, K. Price, M. Ackworth and R. Watson turned in new marks.

Up and Over

By AUSTIN BEALMEAR

STILLWATER, Okla.—Dust off a cloud for long Don Boydston of the Oklahoma Aggies. He high jumped to fame on his first attempt and won't be satified until he has set a new world record.

The sophomore came out of nowhere to jump 6 feet, 8¼ inches at the Southwest Exposition meet this spring.

Then, with the cross-bar set at 6 feet, 10 inches—a quarter-inch over the world mark held jointly by Cornelius Johnson and David Albritton — Boydston hurled his lean, 6-feet, 2-inch, 145 - pound body up and over.

But an elbow caught the bar, knocking it off and robbing the 19-year-old thin man of a world record in his initial varsity appearance.

That performance caused the sports world to acclaim him the season's find—but it dimmed his chances of smashing the record this year.

His takeoff leg has bothered him ever since, and in a half - dozen meets he hasn't come close to his Fort Worth mark.

But Boydston has two more years on the varsity squad. Neither he nor Coach Ralph Higgins has any doubt that he can reach 6-10, although both agree it probably won't be this year.

"I think I need warmer weather," Boydston says. "I pulled a muscle in that takeoff leg and it bothers me when the weather's cold."

He is banking on the sun to help him in the National Intercollegiate meet at Minneapolis, June 21 and 22, and in the National A.A.U. meet at Fresno, Calif., the following weekend.

Boydston, so frail he has to conserve his strength, waits until his opponents pass 6 feet, 2 inches before he starts jumping. He never jumps between meets and works out only twice a week.

His secret is a "flutter" kick which he developed when he was in grade school. He uses a variation of the western roll, taking off on his left foot after a very short run, and administers his "flutter" with his right leg at the top of his leap. The kick, he says, jerks him upward.

He never had a coach in Sand Springs, Okla., high school, but he made the high school meets by hitch-hiking six miles to Tulsa and riding with the Tulsa Central high school team.

Boydston is sports editor of the Daily O'Collegian, campus newspaper at Oklahoma A. and M., and may follow journalism as a profession, although his first ambition is to be a radio sports announcer.

Caseys Clip Cops

The Cumberland Caseys softball team defeated the Police Department in a Rockingchair League contest last evening 18-11.

The boys were too tired after their tussle to call in the score, but will recover in time to request advance ballyhoo for any activity they may plan in the future.

The SPORT TRAIL

By WHITNEY MARTIN

NEW YORK, June 6. (AP)—Dizzy Dean has gone back to the minors, and his attempt to be philosophical about it strikes a pathetic note, particularly his hope that the southwest Sun will bring comfort to his ailing arm. The Sun for most Texas League games is supplied by the power company at so much a beam, and arc lights never cured anything but darkness.

Sure, he's been an arrogant showoff. Sure, he got in more jams than a kid in a pantry. But Dizzy Dean was great when he had it, and sometimes when he didn't and even his severest critics will miss him and hope he can come back.

The chances seem to be against it. He takes heart in the comeback of Tex Carleton, but Carleton's trouble was the arm alone, while Dizzy's goes deeper. It's his shoulder, and take it from Al Schacht, when a shoulder goes back on a pitcher he might as well start asking his friends how they're fixed for insurance.

Schacht was a pretty fair pitcher in his day. Now he's more than a pretty fair clown. A sore shoulder eased him off the mound, and this Spring he said he believed Dizzy was through.

"I described his symptons to him," Schacht said, "using my own as the example. Dizzy agreed that his symptoms were identical to mine, and I know from experience you don't get over it."

Dizzy traces his trouble to the 1937 all-star game in which he suffered a fractured toe which forced him to adopt an unnatural delivery, but the seeds of the ailment probably go farther back than that.

They probably go back to the gala year of 1934, when the great one won 30 games and lost seven for the Cardinals during the regular season, won two out of three in the world series, then embarked on a barnstorming tour during which, with Dean pride, he bore down to show the crossroad natives just how good he was.

He had good seasons in 1935 and 1936, but there is an old saying among baseball men that there are just so many pitches in an arm.

At any rate Dizzy Dean today is a far cry from the Dizzy Dean who saw the world as his oyster. It is difficult to picture the pathetically hopeful figure as the same man who just three years ago this week was reinstated by Ford Frick after suspension for alleged derogatory remarks about Frick and Umpire George Barr. That was when Dean won a moral victory by living up to his classic statement: "I ain't gonna sign nuthin.'"

Whether Dizzy can win in the Texas League is problematical. It's a fast league, and has turned out some fine ball players, including Dean himself, who was with Houston in 1930 and 1931.

Anyway, he should prove a valuable addition from a gate standpoint. He still has that intangible something called color, and if it isn't as admirable as the subdued color of a Carl Hubbell, at least it has served Dizzy well from a financial standpoint.

Keyser Bat Star Leads Swatters In Bi-State Loop

Charley Johnson Has .600 Average -- Urbas Is Runner-Up

Early Bi-State Baseball League batting averages, as compiled and released recently by Secretary Don Shires, show that Charley Johnson of Keyser's pacesetting Moose outfit, is on top with the extremely hight mark of .600 for four games and nine hits in 15 trips to the plate.

The figures do not include games played after Sunday, May 26, and the Westvaco A. A.-Cumberland Colt tussle of May 11 at Westernport which was protested by the Dobbins.

In the runnerup notch is Frank Urbas of the Frostburg American Legion. Playing in six games and going to bat 29 times, Urbas smashed 16 hits for an average of .592.

Three Tied At .500

"Bud" Mosser of Keyser, Charley Stahl of Westvaco and Don Lane of the Pulpmen are tied for third with .500. Each has appeared in four games with Mosser and Stahl each getting nine hits in 18 trips and Lane eight in 16.

"Jaggers" Drew of Frostburg holds sixth place with .481 for six games while "Nebs" George of the Colts and Van Roby of the Dobbins are knotted for seventh with .472. Each had played in five games when the averages were compiled and had batted 19 times.

Charley Popalo of the Midland Red Sox is ninth with .470 for four games while the "Big Ten" is completed with the addition of Joe Wagner of Frostburg who in four games batted at a .466 clip.

Urbas leads in runs with nine and has collected the greatest number of hits. He also has hit for the most bases. "Jaggers" Drew is ahead in the runs-batted-in department with ten, and Joe McGinn of Frostburg second with eight.

Marble Hits Most Doubles

"Jobie" Marble of Midland has swatted the most doubles, five; Harry Steindel of Midland is setting the pace in triples with two, and Mosser, George Netzer of Midland, McGinn and "Bee" Scarpelli of Frostburg each has clouted a home run. Joe Geatz taps base-stealers with four while another Colt, George, is second with three.

Frostburg, tied for second in the loop race with Cumberland and Westvaco, has the best team batting average with .346. Keyser is second with .313, Cumberland third with .305, Westvaco fourth with .298, Hyndman fifth with .294 and Midland last with .287.

Frostburg leads in doubles with 21, triples with five and home runs with two. The Colts top the base-stealing department with 12. Individual and team batting records follow:

Nile Kinnick Receives Scholarship at Iowa

Iowa City, Iowa, June 6. (AP)—Nile Kinnick, All-America halfback, yesterday was awarded a scholarship in the college of law at the University of Iowa graduation exercises.

Kinnick has indicated he will enter the law college here next fall, passing up a professional football career.

Gallahadion Wins Support as Horse To Take Belmont

Bimelech Works Beyond Distance for Race Tomorrow

NEW YORK, June 6 (AP) — The word around Belmont is that Saturday's Belmont Stakes is as wide open as the mouth of New York's Holland tunnel.

However, Gallahadion, Mrs. Ethel V. Mars' Kentucky Derby winner, gained new support by his latest workout, turning in a 2.36 3-5 performance over the full mile-and-a-half route with speed to spare. He was caught at the mile in 1.42.

Bimelech's Latest

Bimelech's latest had him moving a mile and five-eighths in 2.56, a departure from his regular training and a good move to prevent his being short Saturday. He went the mile in 1.46 3-5 and looked good going out the final quarter in.23 2-5.

Your Chance, off his victory Monday over Century Note and Andy K, has a world of supporters around the track.

Juveniles

Latest press releases bring word that four of the 2-year-old stakes in the offing are going to be well filled with the class of the juveniles.

These are the Polly Drummond at Delaware and the Joliet at Lincoln, both on Saturday, and Arlington's rich pair — the Lassie for fillies on July 13 and the Futurity on July 27.

Mrs. N. K. Beal's Hardy Bud, winner of two straight — the last a five-eighths affair in 1:00 2-5 — will bear watching in the Polly Drummond.

Fifteen are expected to go postward in the Joliet, including the undefeated mid-westerner, Clarksville, winner of four straight. The Lassie still has 77 eligible and the Futurity 107, including 13 nominated by E. F. Woodward of Texas (Valdina Farms). If 15 go in the Futurity, it'll be worth some $61,000.

Howard Pair

Charles S. Howard's Kayak and Mioland are about recovered from their ailments and nearly ready for shipments back to California from the East. With them, the Pacific Coast sportman wil have his "Varsity" ready for both the Hollywood Gold Cup and the Hollywood Derby.

Kayak, Mioland, The Surprising Alvocator and Count D'Or are eligible for the $50,000-added cup event. Mioland, Driza (a sister to Kayak), Suoto (a full brother to Sorteado) and Diafano (big South American by Kayak's sire) are the Derby nominees.

Grounded

First jockey suspension of the Delaware meeting was handed out yesterday to Roy Duncan, Columbus, (Ohio) Apprentice. He was set down for five days for rough riding aboard War Streak in Tuesday's eighth race.

Vino Puro

There's quite a "wondering" session going on at Lincoln Fields these days over the Argentine-bred Vino Puro.

Horatio Luro, Argentine sportsman, brought him to this country and sold him to Mrs. J. F. Waters, San Francisco socialite. He won a mile-and-sixteenth handicap at Santa Anita during the winter by seven lengths in 1.43 3-5 eased up, beating Airflame, No Competition and some other better-than-fair steppers.

Shipped to Lincoln Fields, he has twice been entered in stakes—and twice scratched. And now everyone's wondering why. Trainer Euall Wyatt just shrugs his shoulders and promises: "Oh, he'll be stepping out soon—and when he does, you'll see a good stepper."

Boxers of Every Race Known by Irish Names

Some great names have been written into the records of the ring, but only those who remember the fighters as active participants recall that Hugo Kelly, Jim Flynn, Frankie Conley, Jasck Sharkey, (the bantamweight) and Eddie Shea were Italians, Mushy Callahan, Tommny Ryan and a host of others were of Jewish origin. Jack Sharkey was of Lithuanian extraction. Tommy Burns, a French-Canadian; Joe Gorman, a Mexican, and Billy Murray, a Portuguese.

Homer Off Bill Terry

Fort Hill Artist Wins State-Wide Poster Contest

Will Use Prize Money To Perfect Skill As Craftsman

The announcement was made in Annapolis by Governor O'Conor's Traffic Safety Committee, in co-operation with the Alumnae Association of St. Mary's Female Seminary, which donated the cash prizes.

Barnes, who lives at 512 Fo avenue, will receive $25 for fi place.

He was taken completely by surprise when informed of his achievement last night while attending a dance given by classmates in the Scatterbrain club at Cottage Inn.

Money for School

"Boy, I'll bank that money for school next fall," he said after a triumphant shout.

Barnes, who is already well known around Cumberland as a craftsman, expects to enter the Bowman Technical School at Lancaster, Pa., where he will study jewelry engraving, watchmaking, and instrument engineering. Skilled workmen in these fields will be badly needed as the nation pushes its defense program.

Poster Grimly Effective

Many Splendid Entries

Robert Putman, of Frederick, received $10 for second place and Pauline Leister, of Westminster, $5 for third place.

"It was one of the most interesting contests I have ever seen," said Isaac S. George, public educatio chairman for the traffic safety group. "The work of our committee on judging was difficult because the contestants all had such splendid entries."

The St. Mary's Alumnae Association has taken much interest in Governor O'Conor's Traffic Safety Committee. It sponsored the poster contest as a part of the 100th anniversary celebration of the seminary, which was founded at St. Mary's city in 1840.

Queen of Spring To Be Crowned

Ceremony Tonight At Penn Avenue

The Queen of Spring will be crowned this evening on the lawn of the Penn Avenue school.

Nearly 250 children dressed in gay costumes will perform in a scene made more colorful by elaborate stage settings, and special lighting effects. A sound amplifier will be used.

The queen is Delilah Smith, a sixth grade girl. Her attendants are Shirley Burke, Ilene Kline and Ruth Johnson, sixth graders, and Marilyn Davis, Doris Jean Campbell and Catherine Davis, first graders, are flower girls.

Billy Burke is crown-bearer; the heralds are Allan Sweitzer and John Hayes Ambrose; and announcers are Harwell Saville and Robert Price.

A group of fifth graders will give the May pole dance; 40 first graders will represent Dutch dolls, and 50 second graders in uniform will represent the toy band and will play "Glow Worm".

The third grade will give a dance and song from the operetta, "Hansel and Gretel".

Another group of pupils will present a selection from the operetta, "Old Ironsides".

Following the program refreshments will be sold on the grounds. The funds realized from this program will be used to enlarge the stage fund and complete the payments on a moving picture machine.

Births

Mr. and Mrs. George Stafford, of RFD 2, Cumberland, announce the birth of a son last night at Memorial hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. William Twigg, of Hyndman, Pa., announce the birth of a daughter yesterday morning at Allegany hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Stouffer, of Cresaptown, announce the birth of a son yesterday morning at Memorial hospital.

Dr. and Mrs. James A. Nave, of Beaver Falls, Pa., announce the birth of a daughter, Sue Ellen, Wednesday at Providence hospital, Beaver Falls. Dr. Nave is a former Cumberland resident.

800 B&O People Dine, Sit as 'Directors'

If a reader can imagine such a thing as a gigantic board of directors meeting attended by 800 persons he can visualize the attitude at the State Armory last night where Charles W. Galloway made a straight from the shoulder address climaxing Cumberland's first Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Day.

The most significant thing a spectator at last night's immense affair took away with him was healthiness of attitude that was evinced by the members of the big audience composed of workers engaged in every phase of railroad work.

Candid Discussion

With a unique candor, Mr. Galloway, the vice-president in charge of the line's operations, addressed the throng as "members of the family" and as people all equally concerned in the success of the enterprise with which they are associated.

The signal attention his remarks received indicated that he was justified in approaching the problems of the company from that standpoint.

More Income Needed

While Mr. Galloway's remarks were frank to the point of being blunt in several instances, no member of the audience could construe his meaning as being critical. As he said, he was merely embracing an opportunity of talking with a group of fellow railroaders in a railroad town and added that "I believe in being frank in your relations with people."

Mr. Galloway's address was based on the premise that to be successful a railroad must have an income to pay wages, maintenance costs, taxes, and other drains on the treasury.

Right now, he declared, "We don't get enough to permit us to do the things we ought to do."

Subsidized Competition

Subsidized competition was hit by the speaker as one problem facing the railroads today. Millions in taxpayers' dollars, including the dollars of thousands of railroad workers, have been laid out to build airports throughout the country, he said.

More millions in taxpayers' dollars are laid out to maintain roads strong enough to accomodate fleets of heavy trucks, he said.

"However," he added in a more whimsical vein, "nobody subsidizes us."

Yet, he continued, the railroads still remain the safest, most economical mode of transportation. Bad weather grounds the planes and bad weather and washouts stops the trucks. But the railroads go through.

Truck Take Cream of Business

"And while we have had millions of dollars worth of equipment laying idle, the public wants the railroads always to be ready. And while it has been proven that trucks haven't been as effective as trains for long hauling, the trucking business has taken the cream of the business in many respects."

The proposed St. Lawrence waterway including a waterway from Youngstown to the Great Lakes would undoubtedly be a jolt to the railroads, Mr. Galloway admitted, and added "it is very unfair to jeopardize the welfare of the railroads by subsidizing other modes of transportation with your money."

In the event the proposed waterway from Youngstown is eventually effected, Galloway declared it would result in many miles of lines being dropped, virtually destroying entire communities, and causing a fifteen million dollar wage damage.

Many New Costs

Swinging to another subject, the speaker declared that of thirteen various countries, railroads in the United States have the second lowest rate of revenue per ton mile (94c). However, the railroads of the United States have the highest rail wages in the world, the speaker said.

Continuing, Galloway said tremendous inroads had been made on the treasury of the railroad in recent years, citing a new-type brake for freights which cost the company $14,343,000 and the Signal Inspection Act which cost the B & O $454,000 and $6,000 operating costs permonth.

Refers to Union Demands

Referring to recent union demands, the speaker said there could be only one answer if the demands went through. That was more trains coming off.

Mr. Galloway praised H. J. Doyle, president of the System Federation, declaring that the reasonableness of the federation had always made the company desirous of doing even more than was asked whenever possible.

Mr. Galloway declared he hoped the employes would see the present situation and declared that the type of meeting being held in Cumberland was a great and worthwhile effort and one that he appreciated far more than he could express.

Galloway Warmly Applauded

Mr. Galloway was warmly applauded when introduced by Toastmaster William A. Gunter and members of the audience arose in his honor both when he was introduced and at the conclusion of his address.

Introduced as "our fighting mayor" by Toastmaster Gunter, Mayor Harry Irvine declared, "greeting this organization tonight is the greatest pleasure of my life."

Mayor Irvine declared the B & O was responsible for building up South Cumberland and recalled how years ago the late Senator Wellington stumped the city raising $40,000 to help put in the car shops.

Mayor Tells Story

The mayor humorously remarked that a short time ago a lady complained to him regarding the dirt from the trains. The mayor said he replied, "Lady, a few months ago we were praying for those trains to run and for my part I'll be glad to see the dirt increased ten-fold because it would mean greater prosperity to this city."

Others introduced were W. H. Lee, secretary of the B & O YMCA; J. Rex Miller, chairman of the Men's C.T.P., who introduced Toastmaster Gunter; Iva L. Harper, division master mechanic; Miss Helen Foreman, special representative; H. J. Doyle, president of the System Federation; C. N. Fullerton, special representative; Mrs. Vada Drumm Barncord, chairman of the Women's C.T.P.; and all Federation chairmen and railroad chiefs present.

Entertainment was furnished by the Baltimore and Ohio Women's C.T.P. Glee Club; W. J. Cramer who gave a sketch on "Old and New Methods of Love"; the Beckman twins in song and dance numbers, and Toastmaster Gunter's celebrated sketch, "Barbara Fritchie."

How You Can Aid War Victims

1. Checks may be mailed or delivered to the Red Cross war relief fund headquarters, 45 North Liberty street.

2. Checks should be made payable to the war relief fund of the American Red Cross.

3. Cash contributions should be brought in person or by messenger to the headquarters.

4. Contributions are also being received at Lichtenstein's Pharmacy, 65 Baltimore street, and at the Truitt drug store, Virginia avenue.

5. In sending contributions by mail be sure your name and address are plainly written so that credit will be given you.

All Red Cross contributions received for this emergency will be used wholly and exclusively for war relief and no part of them will be applied toward the normal program and expenditures of the Red Cross, which are met by the annual Roll Call and other regular income.

Vincent Ingram Heads LaSalle P-TA

Vincent P. Ingram has been elected president of the LaSalle high school Parent-Teacher Association.

Other officers elected Wednesday night at the association's last meeting of the year were Mrs. George Carney, vice-president; Mrs. Leona M. Speelman, secretary; and Mrs. Anthony Hauck, admission clerk.

Brother Dacian Stephen, principal of the school, presided.

Following the election, plans were made to hold a bazaar during the latter part of August or early in September at the Knights of Columbus home on North Mechanic street.

Refreshments were served.

Bad Day for Fingers, Two Railroaders Hurt

Two B&O employes were treated yesterday morning at Allegany hospital for injured right index fingers.

Theodore Rice, 29, of RFD 2, Cumberland, bruised his finger badly when an arch bar fell on it. X-rays were taken to determine the extent of his injury, and he was released from the hospital.

T. J. McTurff, 53, of Green Spring, W. Va., a carpenter, was injured when a large splinter rammed deep into his finger. He, too, was discharged after being treated.

Fireworks Ban In City Has No Loopholes

Quiet July 4th Bound To Result If Law Enforced

Council Clerk S. E. Griminger yesterday pulled the city's new fireworks ordinance out of the file in answer to inquiries regarding the situation in Cumberland this year.

Announcement of the fireworks regulations from the State Insurance Department yesterday resulted in inquiries from prospective dealers at both City Hall and the Court House.

According to the city ordinance passed last year after Cumberland's turbulent Fourth of July, the sale of all fireworks will be strictly prohibited in Cumberland. The ordinance reads:

$100 Fine

"It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to display, offer for sale, sell, deliver, discharge or set off any fireworks or noise-making explosives of any kind or description in the city or one mile beyond the city limits."

Infringements on this ordinance will constitute a misdemeanor and will be subject to fine of not less than $50 or more than $100, the mayor and council decreed.

According to the city ordinance, it shall be necessary to secure a permit from the Fire Chief to stage any public exhibition using explosives. The permit, once approved by the Fire Chief, is also subject to the approval of the mayor and council.

Prompt Action Taken

The mayor and council acted promptly last July 10 after the city was subjugated to an intense blasting all day long last July 4. Hundreds of residents complained to the mayor and council.

However, the city government's prompt action, while thoroughly approved generally in Cumberland, left a number of dealers with large quantities of fireworks on hand.

These dealers complained that they weren't given any opportunity to "get out from under" and this year they are wondering what they can do to prevent their taking a loss.

Hagerstown Odd Fellows Plan Memorial Services

HAGERSTOWN, Md., June 6 (AP)—Annual memorial services for deceased members of Aaron Lodge, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, will be conducted Sunday afternoon in Riverview cemetery.

V. E. Banzhoff, Memorial committee chairman, said Charles W. Bennett of Salisbury, grand master of the Maryland Grand Lodge, and his staff was expected to attend.

The Memorial talk will be given by the Rev. Paul B. Watlington of Hagerstown, Grand Lodge chaplain. Another speaker will be Past Grand Master Leonard E. Mason, of Baltimore.

A parade, starting at 2 p. m., will proceed from the Odd Fellows hall to the cemetery.

Flag Hung Backwards At B&O Banquet

When Sergeant H. F. Hinze, who looks after things around the State armory, stepped into the banquet hall last night he was horrified.

The huge American flag at the head of the hall had been hung backwards—with the stars on the right.

Woodmen Mark 50th Anniversary

Americanism Stressed By State Sovereign

The Woodmen of the World organization stands squarely behind the principles of Americanism, J. D. Sellers, state manager of the Maryland, Delaware and Washington, D. C., units, declared last night at the fiftieth anniversary celebration of Mountain City Camp, No. 6, Cumberland.

Sovereign Sellers, who was guest of honor at the local celebration, stressed the democratic principles upon which the WOW was founded. He congratulated the local organization on its success.

P. A. Amtower delivered greetings to members of the camp. He was followed by S. S. Dowlan who spoke on the history of the WOW.

Woodman Dowlan told how the organization started early in the June of 1890 in Omaha, Neb., and elected the late Joseph C. Root, as first president. The late William Alexander Frazier was elected second president and Dr. Emmett Bradshaw is now the present and third leader of the organization.

Dowlan also remarked that Joseph T. Yates, of Mt. Savage, was former secretary of the WOW for forty-six years. Yates, who was the last living founder, died last year.

F. S. Goss, one of the organizers of the local camp, gave a brief history of the local camp. He was presented with a veteran member honor badge by P. A. Amtower for having twenty-four years of service in the WOW.

J. C. German was chairman at the banquet and William Cramer kept the evening events rolling along at a fast pace as toastmaster.

A radio broadcast by President Bradshaw and Harry Root, son of the WOW founder, to some 8,000 camps throughout the nation was heard by more than 100 members who attended the banquet.

Patriotic songs were sung at intervals in the local program.

Tomorrow, from 8 p. m. to midnight, an old-fashioned square dance will be held at the Woodmen hall on Baltimore street.

Women attending, contrary to custom, are expected to wear their oldest dresses. Prizes will be awarded to the women wearing the oldest and next-oldest dresses. To be eligible for the competition, the dresses must be at least fifty years old.

COMING UP—Despite the heat and the record number of diners, a small army of chefs and waitresses served fried chicken and trimmings to 800 persons in fast order last night. Here are Mrs. Ruth Root and LeRoy Dailey running up from the kitchen with loads of strawberry shortcake.—News Staff Photo.

City's Biggest Banquet Served in Short Order

Eight hundred people consumed 800 chicken dinners at the State Armory last night in what Frank Lee Carl, veteran Cumberland newspaperman, said was the largest banquet he ever attended in Cumberland.

The food problem for Cumberland's first Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Day banquet was managed by Mr. and Mrs. Roy Minke, of Christie road.

Over three hundred chickens went to the chopping block to make last night's banquet possible, Mrs. Minke reported last night in the basement of the armory where she was surrounded by piles and piles of dirty dishes waiting to be washed.

Forty gallons of coffee were consumed along with sixty quarts of strawberries, eight gallons of whipped cream, 300 pounds of potatoes and 2,200 rolls.

The huge company was served at five tables running the full length of the armory. A sixth table, the speakers table, extended clear across the armory.

After serving the dinner and clearing away the dishes, Mrs. Minke and her staff forlornly regarded the hundreds and hundreds of dirty dishes and great stacks of silverwear.

It looked like an all night job, washing those dishes.

Interest Keen In CMTC Here

Eighty-eight young men from Allegany county have filed applications for Citizens Military Training Camps this summer, which is more than double the county's quota, it was announced yesterday by Col. George Henderson, committee chairman.

In view of the fact that the State of Maryland is far below its quota, however, Col. Henderson has every reason to believe that fifty or more Alleganycountians will be accepted when the camps are opened on July 3 for a month of training. Last year fifty-one youths of this county went to camp and most of the local lads were stationed at Fort George G. Meade.

A report for the Third Corps Area of the CMTC, furnished Col. Henderson by Major Charles D. Carle, assistant officer in charge of Civilian Components Affairs, shows that applications from only two of the state's twenty-three counties have exceeded their quotas. In addition to Allegany county, Montgomery has twenty-eight youths with applications on file as compared to the county's quota of eighteen. Baltimore has openings for 347 young men but only 205 had applied up to May 31.

Garrett county is one man short of its quota of ten while Washington county, assigned twenty-nine men, has shown little interest with only seven men enrolled.

Latest figures for the State of Maryland show that applications have been received from 438 young men, or 242 short of the state's quota of 680.

Applications for the Third Corps Area, which embraces the states of Pennsylvania, Virginia, Maryland and the District of Columbia, number 7,301, according to Major Carle's report. The quota for the entire area is 6,000 men.

Firemen Obliged To Stay 'Neutral' As Fire Blazes

South End firemen were called yesterday at 10:20 a. m. when a resident of the Hill Top drive section noticed a nearby field on fire.

But firemen didn't have to extinguish the blaze because the owner of the field had a permit to burn the brush on his property.

Moose Give $100 For War Relief

The Cumberland Moose Lodge last night voted to contribute $100 to the Red Cross war relief drive, Governor George J. Erling announced.

The check will be presented at the drive headquarters this morning.

War Relief Total Reaches $2,300

Various Groups Bring Aid

Contributions from individuals and organizations have brought the war relief fund in Cumberland to more than $2,300 in the Allegany County chapter drive to raise a minimum of $7,000.

Twenty chapters have already exceeded double their original quotas, a report from Washington states. It was found necessary to double the national goal to $20,000,000, but the local chapter is still working towards its original goal.

Organizations contributing to the local fund in the last two days include the Knights of Columbus, $50; Cumberland Aerie No. 245, Fraternal Order of Eagles, $10; Western Maryland-Memorial Hospital Nurses Alumnae Association, $25; the Woman's Civic Club of Cumberland, part of the donation, $45.65, and the proceeds from a games party at the Ali Ghan Shrine Country Club, $21.50.

Social events are being scheduled by four more groups for the benefit of the war relief fund. These affairs include a tea by the Woman's Association of the First Presbyterian Church, a card party by the American Legion Auxiliary, a card party by the Catholic Daughters of America, and an old-fashioned box social and community picnic by the Parent-Teacher Association of the Paper Mill school at Locust Grove.

Farmers To Discuss Potomac Flood Control With War Department

HAGERSTOWN, June 6 (AP)—Land use committees from six Western Maryland counties will confer with War Department officials on flood control for the Potomac river valley at Hagerstown, June 24.

A tentative program for the conference was announced by Milt D. Moore, Washington county agent, and James W. Coddington, of the University of Maryland.

Counties to be represented are Garrett, Allegany, Washington, Frederick, Montgomery, and Carroll.

Moore made a flood control survey in Washington county after the disastrous floods of 1936 and 1937, and said that the damage in the second year was considerably less than in 1936 because residents were looking for the high water and moved their livestock to safety before the river went too high.

Land use committeemen and county agents of the other counties, as well as War Department representatives, will discuss the entire Potomac valley problem.

Mrs. Wm. B. Hayden Asks Divorce

A petition asking for a divorce was filed in Circuit Court yesterday by Mrs. Mary Agnes Hayden against her husband, William Bruce Hayden.

The petition states that the plaintiff's husband abandoned her a short time after their marriage in January, 1935.

Man Arrested After Explosion Is Set Free

His Story Backed Up by Owner, Harris Reports

The man arrested by police when he fled from the flaming Maryland Beauty Center at Baltimore and South streets early Wednesday was released yesterday by State's Attorney Morgan C. Harris.

The state's attorney announced that the man's story that the fire was accidental had been accepted because it was backed up by statements of the owner of the shop, and the shop manager.

Says Explosion an Accident

The man set free was David Yoder, 24, of Upper Middletown, Pa., who is a brother-in-law of the shop owner, E. A. Rinkhoff, of McKeesport, Pa.

Yoder's story was that he had come here to clean the shop, and that gasoline which he had used on the linoleum before waxing it had been ignited by a cigaret.

An explosion followed, shattering the windows of the shop and burning Yoder, who was seized by police as he ran down Mechanic street.

Serious Blaze Prevented

Firemen summoned immediately by police prevented the spread of what might easily have been a disasterous fire.

The state's attorney said Manager David J. Thomas and Helen Hartsook, former manager, backed up Yoder's story that he was cleaning the place.

The blast occurred shortly after 2 p. m.

Detective Robert E. Flynn reported last night that Manager Thomas had found a gallon jug of gasoline in the place that had not been reached by the fire.

Flynn also said that Thomas told him the shop was insured for $1,500. Thomas reported the theft of $85 worth of his equipment after the fire and that the instruments of one of the manicurist's were missing.

Power Engineers Elect Officers

Newberry Named New President

The local chapter, Maryland No. 2, of the National Association of Power Engineers elected the following officers for the coming year at their monthly meeting held at the Knights of Malta Hall.

The elected officers were: president, W. D. Newberry, Sr.; vice-president, Clifford Spence; financial secretary, Gordon Green; corresponding and recording secretary, Allan S. Luke, Jr.; past president, J. C. Edmunds; conductor, J. B. Marston; door keeper, Edward Denkenberger; treasurer, P. R. Lucas.

The new trustee elected for a period of three years, was O. J. Riley. Delegates to the National Convention to be held at Columbus, Ohio, in August, were O. L. Biggs, delegate, and A. L. Luke, Jr., alternate.

Deaths

Isaac F. Clark

Isaac Frank Clark, formerly of Cumberland, died yesterday afternoon at Woodville Sanitarium, near Pittsburgh, Pa., following a long illness. He was 63.

Mr. Clark was a native of Clark Mills, between Cumberland and Ellerslie, and a son of the late John and Mary Clark. He left Cumberland and moved to McKeesport, Pa., about fifteen years ago.

Mr. Clark was a retired engineer.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Julia Miller Clark; four daughters, Mrs. E. C. Kilroy, of Cumberland, Mrs. J. Lloyd Wolfe, of Ellerslie, Mrs. George Godard, of McKeesport, and Mrs. Frank Sellers, of Needville, Pa.; two brothers, Zedock Clark, of Corriganville, and John "Doc" Clark, of Ellerslie; two sisters, Mrs. Andrew Boor, of Keyser, W. Va., and E. W. Heavener, of Connellsville, Pa., and eight grand-children.

The body will be brought to Stein's funeral home tomorrow.

George C. Shearer

George Crawford Shearer, a brother of the late Mrs. Mary E. McEvoy, of 220 Washington street, died Wednesday afternoon at Hershey, Pa., of pneumonia which followed two heart attacks May 29.

Mr. Shearer was born at Frostburg. He had been superintendent of the Hershey Chocolate Corporation for many years.

Two nieces, Mrs. Sue M. Brett and Miss Pauline McEvoy, of Cumberland, are among those surviving.

Mrs. Harry Kramer

Mrs. Emma Shertzer Kramer, wife of Harry Kramer, died at noon yesterday at her home in Elkins, W. Va. She was 70.

Mrs. Kramer was a native of New Oldtown.

Among those surviving, besides her husband, are a son, Cecil Kramer, of Elkins, and a daughter, Mrs. Minnie Price, of Belington, W. Va.

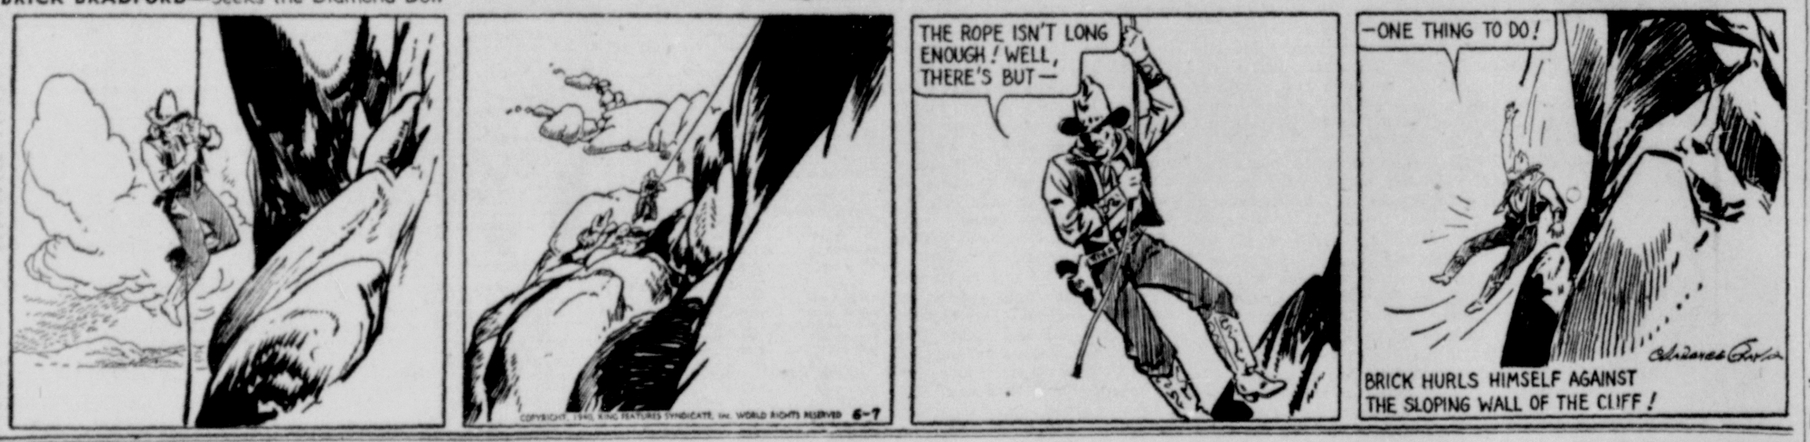

Speeder Fined $5

Fort Hill Artist Wins State-Wide Poster Contest

Will Use Prize Money To Perfect Skill As Craftsman

First prize in the state-wide traffic safety poster contest was awarded yesterday to Merrill R. Barnes, 20-year-old senior at Fort Hill high school.

The announcement was made in Annapolis by Governor O'Conor's Traffic Safety Committee, in cooperation with the Alumnae Association of St. Mary's Female Seminary, which donated the cash prizes.

Barnes, who lives at 512 Fo[r] avenue, will receive $25 for fi[rst] place.

He was taken completely by surprise when informed of his achievement last night while attending a dance given by classmates in the Scatterbrain club at Cottage Inn.

Money for School

"Boy, I'll bank that money for school next fall," he said after a triumphant shout.

Barnes, who is already well known around Cumberland as a craftsman, expects to enter the Bowman Technical School at Lancaster, Pa., where he will study jewelry engraving, watchmaking, and instrument engineering. Skilled workmen in these fields will be badly needed as the nation pushes its defense program.

Barnes made his poster during three art class periods under Instructer Kenneth Mowen.

Poster Grimly Effective

The poster was done with air brush. It shows the silhouette of a young man lying in the road, a car speeding away, red blood streaming from the man's head, and a dog tugging at his sleeve. In the sky are the letters ABC, which are explained in the slogan below, "Always Be Careful."

Barnes has appeared before various local clubs to display his wood carvings and other handiwork.

Many Splendid Entries

Robert Putman, of Frederick, received $10 for second place and Pauline Leister, of Westminster, $5 for third place.

"It was one of the most interesting contests I have ever seen," said Isaac S. George, public educatio[n] chairman for the traffic safety group. "The work of our committee on judging was difficult because the contestants all had such splendid entries."

The St. Mary's Alumnae Association has taken much interest in Governor O'Conor's Traffic Safety Committee. It sponsored the poster contest as a part of the 100th anniversary celebration of the seminary, which was founded at St. Mary's city in 1840.

Queen of Spring To Be Crowned

Ceremony Tonight At Penn Avenue

The Queen of Spring will be crowned this evening on the lawn of the Penn Avenue school.

Nearly 250 children dressed in gay costumes will perform in a scene made more colorful by elaborate stage settings, and special lighting effects. A sound amplifier will be used.

The queen is Delilah Smith, a sixth grade girl. Her attendants are Shirley Burke, Ilene Kline and Ruth Johnson, sixth graders, and Marilyn Davis, Doris Jean Campbell and Catherine Davis, first graders, are flower girls.

Billy Burke is crown-bearer; the heralds are Allan Sweitzer and John Hayes Ambrose; and announcers are Harwell Saville and Robert Price.

A group of fifth graders will give the May pole dance; 40 first graders will represent Dutch dolls, and 50 second graders in uniform will represent the toy band and will play "Glow Worm".

The third grade will give a dance and song from the operetta, "Hansel and Gretel".

The glee clubs of grades 4, 5 and 6, composed of nearly 100 children, will sing two numbers.

Another group of pupils will present a selection from the operetta, "Old Ironsides".

Following the program refreshments will be sold on the grounds. The funds realized from this program will be used to enlarge the stage fund and complete the payments on a moving picture machine.

Births

Mr. and Mrs. George Stafford, of RFD 2, Cumberland, announce the birth of a son last night at Memorial hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. William Twigg, of Hyndman, Pa., announce the birth of a daughter yesterday morning at Allegany hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Stouffer, of Cresaptown, announce the birth of a son yesterday morning at Memorial hospital.

Dr. and Mrs. James A. Nave, of Beaver Falls, Pa., announce the birth of a daughter, Sue Ellen, Wednesday at Providence hospital, Beaver Falls. Dr. Nave is a former Cumberland resident.

800 B&O People Dine, Sit as 'Directors'

If a reader can imagine such a thing as a gigantic board of directors meeting attended by 800 persons he can visualize the attitude at the State Armory last night where Charles W. Galloway made a straight from the shoulder address climaxing Cumberland's first Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Day.

The most significant thing a spectator at last night's immense affair took away with him was healthiness of attitude that was evinced by the members of the big audience composed of workers engaged in every phase of railroad work.

Candid Discussion

With a unique candor, Mr. Galloway, the vice-president in charge of the line's operations, addressed the throng as "members of the family" and as people all equally concerned in the success of the enterprise with which they are associated.

The signal attention his remarks received indicated that he was justified in approaching the problems of the company from that standpoint.

More Income Needed

While Mr. Galloway's remarks were frank to the point of being blunt in several instances, no member of the audience could construe his meaning as being critical. As he said, he was merely embracing an opportunity of talking with a group of fellow railroaders in a railroad town and added that "I believe in being frank in your relations with people."

Mr. Galloway's address was based on the premise that to be successful a railroad must have an income to pay wages, maintenance costs, taxes, and other drains on the treasury.

Right now, he declared, "We don't get enough to permit us to do the things we ought to do."

Subsidized Competition

Subsidized competition was hit by the speaker as one problem facing the railroads today. Millions in taxpayers' dollars, including the dollars of thousands of railroad workers, have been laid out to build airports throughout the country, he said.

More millions in taxpayers' dollars are laid out to maintain roads strong enough to accomodate fleets of heavy trucks, he said.

"However," he added in a more whimsical vein, "nobody subsidizes us."

Yet, he continued, the railroads still remain the safest, most economical mode of transportation. Bad weather grounds the planes and bad weather and washouts stops the trucks. But the railroads go through.

Truck Take Cream of Business

"And while we have had millions of dollars worth of equipment laying idle, the public wants the railroads always to be ready. And while it has been proven that trucks haven't been as effective as trains for long hauling, the trucking business has taken the cream of the business in many respects."

The proposed St. Lawrence waterway including a waterway from Youngstown to the Great Lakes would undoubtedly be a jolt to the railroads, Mr. Galloway admitted, and added "it is very unfair to jeopardize the welfare of the railroads by subsidizing other modes of transportation with your money."

In the event the proposed waterway from Youngstown is eventually effected, Galloway declared it would result in many miles of lines being dropped, virtually destroying entire communities, and causing a fifteen million dollar wage damage.

Many New Costs

Swinging to another subject, the speaker declared that of thirteen various countries, railroads in the United States have the second lowest rate of revenue per ton mile (94c). However, the railroads of the United States have the highest rail wages in the world, the speaker said.

Continuing, Galloway said tremendous inroads had been made on the treasury of the railroad in recent years, citing a new-type brake for freights which cost the company $14,343,000 and the Signal Inspection Act which cost the B & O $454,000 and $6,000 operating costs permonth.

Refers to Union Demands

Referring to recent union demands, the speaker said there could be only one answer if the demands went through. That was more trains coming off.

Mr. Galloway praised H. J. Doyle, president of the System Federation, declaring that the reasonableness of the federation had always made the company desirous of doing even more than was asked whenever possible.

Mr. Galloway declared he hoped the employes would see the present situation and declared that the type of meeting being held in Cumberland was a great and worthwhile effort and one that he appreciated far more than he could express.

Galloway Warmly Applauded

Mr. Galloway was warmly applauded when introduced by Toastmaster William A. Gunter and members of the audience arose in his honor both when he was introduced and at the conclusion of his address.

Introduced as "our fighting mayor" by Toastmaster Gunter, Mayor Harry Irvine declared, "greeting this organization tonight is the greatest pleasure of my life."

Mayor Irvine declared the B & O was responsible for building up South Cumberland and recalled how years ago the late Senator Wellington stumped the city raising $40,000 to help put in the car shops.

Mayor Tells Story

The mayor humorously remarked that a short time ago a lady complained to him regarding the dirt from the trains. The mayor said he replied, "Lady, a few months ago we were praying for those trains to run and for my part I'll be glad to see the dirt increased ten-fold because it would mean greater prosperity to this city."

Others introduced were W. H. Lee, secretary of the B & O YMCA; J. Rex Miller, chairman of the Men's C.T.P., who introduced Toastmaster Gunter; Iva L. Harper, division master mechanic; Miss Helen Foreman, special representative; H. J. Doyle, president of the System Federation; C. N. Fullerton, special representative; Mrs. Vada Drumm Barncord, chairman of the Women's C.T.P.; and all Federation chairmen and railroad chiefs present.

Entertainment was furnished by the Baltimore and Ohio Women's C.T.P. Glee Club; W. J. Cramer who gave a sketch on "Old and New Methods of Love"; the Beckman twins in song and dance numbers, and Toastmaster Gunter's celebrated sketch, "Barbara Fritchie."

How You Can Aid War Victims

1. Checks may be mailed or delivered to the Red Cross war relief fund headquarters, 45 North Liberty street.

2. Checks should be made payable to the war relief fund of the American Red Cross.

3. Cash contributions should be brought in person or by messenger to the headquarters.

4. Contributions are also being received at Lichtenstein's Pharmacy, 65 Baltimore street, and at the Truitt drug store, Virginia avenue.

5. In sending contributions by mail be sure your name and address are plainly written so that credit will be given you.

All Red Cross contributions received for this emergency will be used wholly and exclusively for war relief and no part of them will be applied toward the normal program and expenditures of the Red Cross, which are met by the annual Roll Call and other regular income.

Vincent Ingram Heads LaSalle P-TA

Vincent P. Ingram has been elected president of the LaSalle high school Parent-Teacher Association.

Other officers elected Wednesday night at the association's last meeting of the year were Mrs. George Carney, vice-president; Mrs. Leona M. Speelman, secretary; and Mrs. Anthony Hauck, admission clerk.

Brother Dacian Stephen, principal of the school, presided.

Following the election, plans were made to hold a bazaar during the latter part of August or early in September at the Knights of Columbus home on North Mechanic street.

Refreshments were served.

Bad Day for Fingers, Two Railroaders Hurt

Two B&O employes were treated yesterday morning at Allegany hospital for injured right index fingers.

Theodore Rice, 29, of RFD 2, Cumberland, bruised his finger badly when an arch bar fell on it. X-rays were taken to determine the extent of his injury, and he was released from the hospital.

T. J. McTurff, 53, of Green Spring, W. Va., a carpenter, was injured when a large splinter rammed deep into his finger. He, too, was discharged after being treated.

Fireworks Ban In City Has No Loopholes

Quiet July 4th Bound To Result If Law Enforced

Council Clerk S. E. Griminger yesterday pulled the city's new fireworks ordinance out of the file in answer to inquiries regarding the situation in Cumberland this year.

Announcement of the fireworks regulations from the State Insurance Department yesterday resulted in inquiries from prospective dealers at both City Hall and the Court House.

According to the city ordinance passed last year after Cumberland's turbulent Fourth of July, the sale of all fireworks will be strictly prohibited in Cumberland. The ordinance reads:

$100 Fine

"It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to display, offer for sale, sell, deliver, discharge or set off any fireworks or noise-making explosives of any kind or description in the city or one mile beyond the city limits."

Infringements on this ordinance will constitute a misdemeanor and will be subject to fine of not less than $50 or more than $100, the mayor and council decreed.

According to the city ordinance, it shall be necessary to secure a permit from the Fire Chief to stage any public exhibition using explosives. The permit, once approved by the Fire Chief, is also subject to the approval of the mayor and council.

Prompt Action Taken

The mayor and council acted promptly last July 10 after the city was subjugated to an intense blasting all day long last July 4. Hundreds of residents complained to the mayor and council.

However, the city government's prompt action, while thoroughly approved generally in Cumberland, left a number of dealers with large quantities of fireworks on hand.

These dealers complained that they weren't given any opportunity to "get out from under" and this year they are wondering what they can do to prevent their taking a loss.

Hagerstown Odd Fellows Plan Memorial Services

HAGERSTOWN, Md., June 6 (AP)—Annual memorial services for deceased members of Aaron Lodge, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, will be conducted Sunday afternoon in Riverview cemetery.

V. E. Banzhoff, Memorial committee chairman, said Charles W. Bennett of Salisbury, grand master of the Maryland Grand Lodge, and his staff was expected to attend.

The Memorial talk will be given by the Rev. Paul B. Watlington of Hagerstown, Grand Lodge chaplain. Another speaker will be Past Grand Master Leonard E. Mason, of Baltimore.

A parade, starting at 2 p. m., will proceed from the Odd Fellows hall to the cemetery.

Flag Hung Backwards At B&O Banquet

When Sergeant H. F. Hinze, who looks after things around the State armory, stepped into the banquet hall last night he was horrified.

The huge American flag at the head of the hall had been hung backwards—with the stars on the right.

Woodmen Mark 50th Anniversary

Americanism Stressed By State Sovereign

The Woodmen of the World organization stands squarely behind the principles of Americanism, J. D. Sellers, state manager of the Maryland, Delaware and Washington, D. C., units, declared last night at the fiftieth anniversary celebration of Mountain City Camp, No. 6, Cumberland.

Sovereign Sellers, who was guest of honor at the local celebration, stressed the democratic principles upon which the WOW was founded. He congratulated the local organization on its success.

P. A. Amtower delivered greetings to members of the camp. He was followed by S. S. Dowlan who spoke on the history of the WOW.

Woodman Dowlan told how the organization started early in the June of 1890 in Omaha, Neb., and elected the late Joseph C. Root, as first president. The late William Alexander Frazier was elected second president and Dr. Emmett Bradshaw is now the present and third leader of the organization.

Dowlan also remarked that Joseph T. Yates, of Mt. Savage, was former secretary of the WOW for forty-six years. Yates, who was the last living founder, died last year.

F. S. Goss, one of the organizers of the local camp, gave a brief history of the local camp. He was presented with a veteran member honor badge by P. A. Amtower for having twenty-four years of service in the WOW.

J. C. German was chairman at the banquet and William Cramer kept the evening events rolling along at a fast pace as toastmaster.

A radio broadcast by President Bradshaw and Harry Root, son of the WOW founder, to some 8,000 camps throughout the nation was heard by more than 100 members who attended the banquet.

Patriotic songs were sung at intervals in the local program.

Tomorrow, from 8 p. m. to midnight, an old-fashioned square dance will be held at the Woodmen hall on Baltimore street.

Women attending, contrary to custom, are expected to wear their oldest dresses. Prizes will be awarded to the women wearing the oldest and next-oldest dresses. To be eligible for the competition, the dresses must be at least fifty years old.

Last night's menu included tomato juice cocktail, roast chicken and dressing, mashed potatoes, cranberry sauce, combination salad, strawberry short cake, ice cream and coffee.

COMING UP—Despite the heat and the record number of diners, a small army of chefs and waitresses served fried chicken and trimmings to 800 persons in fast order last night. Here are Mrs. Ruth Root and LeRoy Dailey running up from the kitchen with loads of strawberry shortcake.—News Staff Photo.

City's Biggest Banquet Served in Short Order

Eight hundred people consumed 800 chicken dinners at the State Armory last night in what Frank Lee Carl, veteran Cumberland newspaperman, said was the largest banquet he ever attended in Cumberland.

The food problem for Cumberland's first Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Day banquet was managed by Mr. and Mrs. Roy Minke, of Christie road.

Over three hundred chickens went to the chopping block to make last night's banquet possible, Mrs. Minke reported last night in the basement of the armory where she was surrounded by piles and piles of dirty dishes waiting to be washed.

Forty gallons of coffee were consumed along with sixty quarts of strawberries, eight gallons of whipped cream, 300 pounds of potatoes and 2,200 rolls.

The huge company was served at five tables running the full length of the armory. A sixth table, the speakers table, extended clear across the armory.

The repast was served with dispatch by a crew of white-clad waitresses who whisked the dinner up from the basement in record time.

After serving the dinner and clearing away the dishes, Mrs. Minke and her staff forlornly regarded the hundreds and hundreds of dirty dishes and great stacks of silverwear.

It looked like an all night job, washing those dishes.

Interest Keen In CMTC Here

Eighty-eight young men from Allegany county have filed applications for Citizens Military Training Camps this summer, which is more than double the county's quota, it was announced yesterday by Col. George Henderson, committee chairman.

In view of the fact that the State of Maryland is far below its quota, however, Col. Henderson has every reason to believe that fifty or more Allegany countians will be accepted when the camps are opened on July 3 for a month of training. Last year fifty-one youths of this county went to camp and most of the local lads were stationed at Fort George G. Meade.

A report for the Third Corps Area of the CMTC, furnished Col. Henderson by Major Charles D. Carle, assistant officer in charge of Civilian Components Affairs, shows that applications from only two of the state's twenty-three counties have exceeded their quotas. In addition to Allegany county, Montgomery has twenty-eight youths with applications on file as compared to the county's quota of eighteen. Baltimore has openings for 347 young men but only 205 had applied up to May 31.

Garrett county is one man short of its quota of ten while Washington county, assigned twenty-nine men, has shown little interest with only seven men enrolled.

Latest figures for the State of Maryland show that applications have been received from 438 young men, or 242 short of the state's quota of 680.

Applications for the Third Corps Area, which embraces the states of Pennsylvania, Virginia, Maryland and the District of Columbia, number 7,301, according to Major Carle's report. The quota for the entire area is 6,000 men.

Firemen Obliged To Stay 'Neutral' As Fire Blazes

South End firemen were called yesterday at 10:20 a. m. when a resident of the Hill Top drive section noticed a nearby field on fire.

But firemen didn't have to extinguish the blaze because the owner of the field had a permit to burn the brush on his property.

Moose Give $100 For War Relief

The Cumberland Moose Lodge last night voted to contribute $100 to the Red Cross war relief drive, Governor George J. Erling announced.

The check will be presented at the drive headquarters this morning.

War Relief Total Reaches $2,300

Various Groups Bring Aid

Contributions from individuals and organizations have brought the war relief fund in Cumberland to more than $2,300 in the Allegany County chapter drive to raise a minimum of $7,000.

Twenty chapters have already exceeded double their original quotas, a report from Washington states. It was found necessary to double the national goal to $20,000,000, but the local chapter is still working towards its original goal.

Organizations contributing to the local fund in the last two days include the Knights of Columbus, $50; Cumberland Aerie No. 245, Fraternal Order of Eagles, $10; Western Maryland-Memorial Hospital Nurses Alumnae Association, $25; the Woman's Civic Club of Cumberland, part of the donation, $45.65, and the proceeds from a games party at the Ali Ghan Shrine Country Club, $21.50.

Social events are being scheduled by four more groups for the benefit of the war relief fund. These affairs include a tea by the Woman's Association of the First Presbyterian Church, a card party by the American Legion Auxiliary, a card party by the Catholic Daughters of America, and an old-fashioned box social and community picnic by the Parent-Teacher Association of the Paper Mill school at Locust Grove.

Farmers To Discuss Potomac Flood Control With War Department

HAGERSTOWN, June 6 (AP)—Land use committees from six Western Maryland counties will confer with War Department officials on flood control for the Potomac river valley at Hagerstown, June 24.

A tentative program for the conference was announced by Milt D. Moore, Washington county agent, and James W. Coddington, of the University of Maryland.

Counties to be represented are Garrett, Allegany, Washington, Frederick, Montgomery, and Carroll.

Moore made a flood control survey in Washington county after the disastrous floods of 1936 and 1937, and said that the damage in the second year was considerably less than in 1936 because residents were looking for the high water and moved their livestock to safety before the river went too high.

Land use committeemen and county agents of the other counties, as well as War Department representatives, will discuss the entire Potomac valley problem.

Mrs. Wm. B. Hayden Asks Divorce

A petition asking for a divorce was filed in Circuit Court yesterday by Mrs. Mary Agnes Hayden against her husband, William Bruce Hayden.

The petition states that the plaintiff's husband abandoned her a short time after their marriage in January, 1935.

Man Arrested After Explosion Is Set Free

His Story Backed Up by Owner, Harris Reports

The man arrested by police when he fled from the flaming Maryland Beauty Center at Baltimore and South streets early Wednesday was released yesterday by State's Attorney Morgan C. Harris.

The state's attorney announced that the man's story that the fire was accidental had been accepted because it was backed up by statements of the owner of the shop, and the shop manager.

Says Explosion an Accident

The man set free was David Yoder, 24, of Upper Middletown, Pa., who is a brother-in-law of the shop owner, E. A. Rinkhoff, of McKeesport, Pa.

Yoder's story was that he had come here to clean the shop, and that gasoline which he had used on the linoleum before waxing it had been ignited by a cigaret.

An explosion followed, shattering the windows of the shop and burning Yoder, who was seized by police as he ran down Mechanic street.

Serious Blaze Prevented

Firemen summoned immediately by police prevented the spread of what might easily have been a disasterous fire.

The state's attorney said Manager David J. Thomas and Helen Hartsook, former manager, backed up Yoder's story that he was cleaning the place.

The blast occurred shortly after 2 p. m.

Detective Robert E. Flynn reported last night that Manager Thomas had found a gallon jug of gasoline in the place that had not been reached by the fire.

Flynn also said that Thomas told him the shop was insured for $1,500. Thomas reported the theft of $85 worth of his equipment after the fire and that the instruments of one of the manicurist's were missing.
